In Austria-Hungary the Jugoslav leaders have not been idle. They framed in 1917, just before the opening of the Vienna Parliament, a declaration comparable to that passed at Corfu. The Jugoslav program received a more radical expression in a manifesto submitted by Korosec, head of the Jugoslav Club, in the Vienna Parliament, to the signatory powers of the Brest-Litovsk Peace Conference. This manifesto, addressed to the Austro-Hungarian, German, Bulgarian, Russian, and Ukrainian delegations at Brest-Litovsk, and signed by the President of the Jugoslav Parliament Club, is a most energetic indictment of Hapsburg atrocities. It accuses the rulers of the Austro-Hungarian Empire of endeavoring to exterminate the Jugoslav race, and in proof cftes tbe thousands of women and children assassinated, of people killed after hideous tortures, of whole families destroyed. The manifesto expresses most radical principles. The absolute sovereignty of Jugoslavia is demanded. And that can mean only the dismemberment of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

We demand a free and independent Jugoslavia. Bravely our representatives quote the words of the Declaration of Corfu. The State must consist of the territories inhabited by compact masses of our people, presenting no interruption of the continuity of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes. All Jugoslav parties endeavored to form in Zagreb (Agram) a Constituent Assembly. Representatives were present from Croatia, Dalmatia, Bosnia, and the Slovene countries. While the President of the Jugoslav Club in the Vienna Parliament, Korosec, was making the opening address police entered the hall and ordered the immediate dissolution of the assembly. Blood was shed in the streets, but, nevertheless, the people in the streets continued to acclaim Jugoslavia, Serbia, King Peter, and Italy.

There are two men especially noteworthy for their influence in undermining tbe Hapsburg Empire—Trumbic, President of the Jugoslav Committee, and Della Torre, proprietor of the Corriere della Sera, who came to London as a spokesman both for the Government of Italy and Italian public opinion. What terms did these two propose? That Italy should accept the unification of the 12,000,000 Jugoslava in one State, as laid down in the Declaration of Corfu; that she should acknowledge the principle of self-determination of nations and the principle of nationality.

Italy herself must aid to bring about the dream of Mazzini, the dismemberment of the Hapsburg Empire. Neither Jugoslavs nor Italians will raise any question of frontier lines until after the Allies have conquered their Teuton foes. Italy recognizes clearly that, if she is to withstand tbe Germany of the future, she must support the cause of the Jugoslavs.

The Allies have promised to work for Polish independence. Future Jugoslavia is not yet officially recognized. If Italy declares that Jugoslavia must be, that it is to Italian interests that such a State be created, Italy's allies cannot refuse to recognize the necessity and the inevitability of the dismemberment of Austria-Hungary, which will collapse even more completely than Russia. The Jugoslav Committee has the same right to international recognition as has the Polish Committee of Paris. It is not a group of visionaries.

Among the many prisoners of war captured by Italy are thousands of Jugoslav Austrian subjects. Among these there is but one ambition—to fight in the newly created Jugoslav army under the supreme command of Alexander, Regent of Serbia. The moment Italy permits this, these men will rally to the Jugoslav flag and shed the last drop of their blood to destroy their greatest foe, Austria, and to establish their ideal—a free Jugoslavia.

When Emperor-King Charles was crowned, to the Jugoslavs it seemed the usurpation of a tyrant, and at that time the Jugoslav Committee issued a manifesto fraught with historical significance. The committee, serving as the plenipotentiary of the Jugoslavs living under Austrian rule, and mindful of the thousands of their brethren slaughtered by Austrian tyranny, declared all Jugoslavs free from their oath of allegiance to the Hapsburgs. In 1916 this act was deemed tremendously bold; today events prove beyond question that the dream of Mazzini bids fair to become a reality.

VAST NUMBER OF BOOKS FOR ARMY

DEEP down in the Public Library at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue are piled hundreds of thousands of books which 200 volunteer workers of the Library Association are sorting for the benefit of the American Army and Navy. All these books are received, assorted, and sent out to any organization concerned in the war which expresses a desire for them. Three hundred and seventy-five thousand were received from the branch receiving stations in the Boroughs of Manhattan, Bronx, and Queens in the first two weeks after the public was awakened to the needs of our army in this country and overseas; and, prior to this, $1,750,000 had been contributed by patriotic citizens to further the good cause by buying educational literature.

At first it was planned only to ask for contributions from wealthy patriots for money with which to educate soldiers in technical subjects which would make them more efficient in their various duties, but soon after the needs of the men for relaxation were taken into account and a great drive was started to acquaint the general public with the work. The results were instantaneous and amazing, both in their variety and volume. Nineteen thousand books were deposited at the library in one day. The best advertisement writers in the city gave their services to the appeal, and C. B. Falls, the illustrator, painted a poster, which was displayed all over the city, and also the huge poster in front of the library, which has been an important factor in getting books.

The library is so short of space that it was necessary to install the sorting force in the cellar. R. W. S. Vail, who, with H. N. Lydenberg and F. F. Hopper, is exercising supervision over the 200 volunteer sorters, is stationed in the cellar where he can settle uncertainties as to classification of books.

In one section great book shelves have been built on which are arranged books on all subjects which members of the armed forces may desire to study; either to fit themselves for positions in the army or navy requiring greater knowledge than they now possess, or to enable them to fill trained positions after the war. These books embrace a surprising number of subjects: engineering, aviation, French, mathematics, navigation, psychology—from somewhere in the West there was even a request for a book on millinery: These orders were filled without question, for it is the desire of the association to supply whatever printed needs the men may express.

Fourteen different languages are represented in the reading matter forwarded to encampments so far. The greatest demand is for books in Polish, French, Spanish, Yiddish, Russian, and Italian. One request was for "The One Thousand and One Nights" in the original Arabic; the librarian in charge enlisted the services of a professor from Columbia, the book stores of the city were searched, and the difficult order was filled to the satisfaction of the applicant.

The million and three-quarters contributed for the purchase of these educational books was usually given without restriction, but some of the donors stipulated as to the manner in which the money was to be spent. Colonel Theodora Roosevelt, who gave a sum of money, stipulated that it should be used only for the purpose of supplying the men with the works of Scott and Dickens.

The givers of books vary greatly: A young girl will stroll up to the library and leave the novel which she has just finished; a limousine will halt at the curb and the dignified footman will alight and tender an armful of books which has been sent by his employer; a hurrying business man will pause long enough to contribute a dozen magazines—every one is thinking of the boys over there. Many of the givers are fathers, mothers, sisters, and wives of the men in khaki: on many of the flyleaves messages are scribbled in the hope that they will be read by the recipient.

A little boy from the east side approached the man at the desk and offered the only book he had, a textbook on stenography. It was gratefully received. Now and then misguided kindness leads people to send in unsuitable books—for instance, a handbook on undertaking. But even those which cannot be used are sold for scrap paper and the receipts devoted to purchasing literature that the men really want.

After the preliminary work of classifying and listing the books has been completed they are placed aside to await the requisitions of the camps. The Red Cross, the Jewish Relief Workers, the Knights of Columbus and other recreation workers connected with the camps have taken charge of the distributing end of the affair and have arranged to place the books in the hands of the men. These organizations send in their orders and the books are delivered to the men through them.

Every nurse who leaves this country for service abroad has the privilege of coming to the library and selecting twelve books to read on the journey across the sea. On her arrival in France these dozen volumes are used to form a nucleus for a library wherever she may be assigned. Many nurses have taken advantage of this offer and it is expected that soon there will be no gathering place of American troops in France without its little collection of books.

"The Store of a Hundred Bridal Desires"

NUMBER 1. WEDDING FINERY.

THE June bride has begun to be a very busy little person. In the Bamberger store she is ubiquitous—everywhere you see her, now bending over fine-patterned laces, now absorbed in the contemplation of the various hats she is going to need; thrilling to the charm of chiffons and satins; trying on her travel gown before a triple mirror; picking out gloves, selecting shoes, choosing great groups of pink and white lingerie—and suddenly hurrying up to the furniture floors, or hastening down to look at silver, then back to consider rugs—determined to improve each shining hour, and uncomfortably conscious that she should have begun some time ago.

We have made it easy for the June bride to choose everything she wants quickly and satisfactorily, from the tips of her satin slippers to the top frill of her filmy veil. Everything is at her hand—the wedding gown, the going-away costume, the afternoon and evening frocks, the hats, and all the hundred little foibles dear to the heart of every bride.

MILITARY CRITIC'S ANALYSIS OF ENEMY'S STRENGTH

Troops Already Used in the Drive, 1,750,000—Fresh Soldiers Left, 800,000, Not All of Whom Are Available for Fighting in Picardy

Allied Armies, After Inflicting Great Repulse at Ypres, Have 3,000,000 Men

By A MILITARY EXPERT.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

IN a certain sense, the time has come when it is no longer possible to reason about the war in terms of geographical or even tactical positions. These have a value in enabling us to mark the progress of the contending forces, of estimating the relative strength of this side or that at the point of active contact. But this value is narrow and limited.

Entirely regardless of territory gained or lost, the answer to the entire question of the war can be found in the relative strength of the two armies in the field in toto, and in their respective casualty lists. Germany has set out to win the war. She has engaged in a terrific attempt to reach the coast, cut the British and the French apart, and then to defeat the two units separately. To do this, to make this great effort, Germany collected from hither and thither, wherever they were, all of the able-bodied men at her command. The Russian divisions were scoured for available material, the Italian front likewise gone over. These men were sent to the west to be fed into the maw of the great offensive. The ground gained is of a certain importance in that it brings Germany nearer to her objective. But she is not so near that calamity threatens the Allies' hopes. She is near enough to cause certain uneasiness, but not near enough to cause depression in the allied ranks. She has no more men. These are all there are. When these are gone, if victory is not achieved, Germany must leave the field to the allied powers.

The Allies also have a certain number in the field, which number, we may assume, for the time being represents the maximum—or near the maximum—that can be made available. We have sent over our men from America as fast as ships were available. While there may be further additions, they cannot be such as to affect materially the issue of battle in the very near future. From the day the offensive began, England had been sending across the Channel every man available for duty in the trenches. The distances are short in this case, so it is fair to presume that in the interval between the present time and March 21, when the German offensive began, she has had sufficient time to reinforce her lines in France to the maximum possible.

The French alone have not been engaged to the limit of their possibilities. They are holding a long stretch of line in vital sectors, they have been under heavy attacks from the apex of the Montdidier salient to Hangard, and they have been heavily engaged about Mont Kemmel and about Locre in Flanders. But the numbers that have been used in these theatres are relatively small. It is the French Army that is supposed—and probably correctly supposed, although we have no positive knowledge—to be held in leash as a reserve force to strike a final blow if opportunity offers or in case the situation on the present active line becomes desperate, to cause a diversion and necessary shifting of troops by attacking elsewhere.

ALL DEPENDS ON RESERVES.

The success of the Allies, in the final analysis, depends on their keeping out of the fight as many divisions as possible, while forcing Germany to throw in as many as possible. In other words, it will be a question of final reserve strength which will bring the chapter of horrors to an end. This, indeed, is the keynote of General Foch's strategy.

While we have no positive information as to the relative numbers of both forces, we have enough to be able to form some idea as to just what expenditures of divisions have been made since the attack first began. Germany has in the field, in all theatres of operations, about 240 divisions of approximately 12,000 men each, or a total of about 3,000,000 men. Of these divisions, however, 35 have been carefully and thoroughly picked over for effectives, and all available for heavy service have been sent to France either in newly formed divisions or to fill gaps in existing divisions. The total divisional strength in France, then, is about 205. Of these the Germans have already thrown into the fighting 140, some of which have been in twice and even three times, so that the entire strength which the Germans have used, counting twice those divisions which have been used twice, has been about 185 divisions. But to argue the matter of numbers on a purely divisional basis, Germany has used 140, or a strength of about a million and three-quarters in the attack, and has fresh divisions still to the number of 65, or about 800,000 men.

It is a mistake, however, to consider that these men are available for the fighting in Picardy and Flanders. The front held by the French and Americans (and now also by the Italians) is long and is important. It is also pregnant with danger to Germany should these forces prove able to drive north out of the valley of the Aisette toward Laon. A great many troops are, therefore, pinned down to this front and are unable to be withdrawn to assist the drive further west. To weaken the more eastern front too far would be to court disaster. Germany has, however, a certain and more or less steady flow of hospital returns, just as have the Allies, and the two will probably just about balance. She has also increments from new men—or, rather, boys—who become of fighting age, although she has already, by drawing in the 1919 and 1920 classes, mortgaged her future heavily. But this again applies equally to France and England, so that from a relative standpoint this also may be neglected. At any rate, the increase would not keep pace with current losses. The net result is that Germany has very few reserves, her well has nearly gone dry, and she must win the war with what she already has in the field.

ALLIES HAVE 3,000,000.

Strange as it may seem, our information as to the strength of the Allies in the field is by no means as accurate as in the case of the Germans. Therefore, the figures given are only approximations from the best information obtainable. The British have in France about 65 divisions of about 20,000 men each, or in the neighborhood of 1,300,000 men in all. The French have somewhat more, about 1,500,000. The strength of our force is in every way an unknown quantity, but there is sufficient, we may be sure, to bring the Allies' strength in France—the divisional strength—to about 3,000,000.

It is not known, moreover, just how many divisions the Allies have used in their fighting. In the three attacks—the first along the Oise, the second against Arras, the third in Flanders—practically the entire British Army has been engaged. In addition there have probably been a half million more of French and Americans. This leaves a matter of about a million and a quarter of French opposed to the German strength of 800,000 who have not been in the fighting.

This, of course, does not take into account the relative losses in the fighting. On this we have no reliable word, but it is inevitable that the Germans should have lost much more heavily than the Allies, particularly in the last ten days. In fact, the German losses are estimated by various authorities to be between 350,000 and 900,000. The figures merely indicate how at variance opinions on this point are. The probabilities are that the former figure is more nearly the correct one. With this loss, which has been enormous even if we accept the more conservative figure, can Germany continue the attack? There is no doubt that she can and will. She has not the same number of fresh divisions she had when the first attack broke out, although she will undoubtedly replace some of the more heavily engaged battalions with fresh troops from one of the inactive fronts, but she can still sustain very heavy losses before ceasing her offensive efforts—almost as heavy, indeed, as those she has already suffered.

Germany is beginning to be worried over the question of casualties, as is shown by her demands on Russia and the comment of the German press. But Germany can continue for a long time to fight just as she has fought, and, regardless of the loss, she must continue. To attack or not to attack is not a matter of volition now, but a matter of necessity. To this extent the initiative has passed from her hands.

But has Germany sufficient men to gain a victory? That is, after all, the most important point. A victory would be worth the price Germany can still pay. But can it be bought for the price? The price we pay for anything is relative and not absolute. The measure is the relation between what we pay and what we have to pay with. The German numbers are fixed, the Allies' still mounting. Look where she will, Germany cannot increase her present strength. Therefore, what she can pay is limited to a certain proportion of what she now has; otherwise, she will face defeat. If the price she can be made to pay for any place, any series of places or positions, is exorbitant, much higher than the cost to the Allies for the defense in such cases, Germany's doom is sealed.

ENEMY'S TREMENDOUS LOSSES.

And yet this is the process which marked the early fighting of the week just passed, fighting in which the Germans suffered a repulse just as sure and just as positive as at any time in the battle of Verdun, though probably with heavier losses. By no possible chance could the Allies in this fighting have suffered as severely as the Germans, since it is in unsuccessful attacks, attacks which are formed, which try to pass over No Man's Land and are driven back, that the heavy casualties are sustained. Unless then the Allies exhibit some unlooked-for weakness, it appears almost certain that Germany cannot buy the victory.

The week's fighting began with a terrific German attack which followed their occupation of Mont Kemmel. The attack embraced the area between Meteren and Wytschaete, but was particularly energetic between Bailleul and the Messines Ridge, which was the particular sector which the Germans desired to beat in. The German plan, as far as it is in evidence, can best be understood by reference to the topography of the front of attack. The main ridge, of which Kemmel forms a part, contains an offshoot running northeast like a long tongue projecting from the ridge proper. Northwest of Kemmel the ridge swells out to a considerable width and contains a series of high points, the most eastern of which is Scherpenberg, followed, as we go west, by Mont Rouge and Mont Vidaigne. Between Kemmel and Scherpenberg there is a little valley which incloses the Hollebeke Creek. The Germans attempted to drive along this tongue of land shooting northeast from Kemmel, to pass along the northern foothills of the Kemmel position, and also to drive up this small creek bed and cut in between Kemmel and Scherpenberg.

The first part of the plan succeeded. The spur was occupied for its entire length, the Germans passing down into the flat plain beyond. They also pushed their way along the Kemmel foot hills to the outskirts of La Clytte, reaching a point just west of Scherpenberg. In the valley of Hollebeke Creek they also had a preliminary success, which brought them to the village of Locre. But here the lines held fast against them. Then began a series of heavy assaults which gave rise to the most terrific fighting of the entire campaign.

On the most eastern wing at the outskirts of Voormezeele the British alone held the line and drove the German attacking troops back time after time. At La Clytte, where the Germans were trying to encircle the Scherpenberg position, the story was exactly the same. This position and that of Locre were the crucial points of the whole fighting. Success at either point meant the outflanking of the entire series of ridge positions. It is doubtful, indeed, if the entire war has seen harder, more-determined fighting than that which occurred in this sector. At La Clytte the Germans were completely repulsed. Not for an instant was there any measure of success. At Locre the story was somewhat different. The town changed hands a number of times. This part of the line was held by the French, who fought with a desperation which only emphasized the importance of the position they were guarding. Finally, the Germans were ejected and the town remained in French hands. But the French were not satisfied. Just as the German effort was dying out, when the enemy had reached a point almost of exhaustion as a result of their unceasing efforts, the French counterattacked heavily. The result was that not only were the Germans thrown completely beyond Locre, but they were driven back for about a mile in the direction of Dranoutre, on the very edge of the plain from which they began the attack.

WAR'S BLOODIEST REPULSE.

Not since the war began have the Germans suffered a more bloody repulse. It was not the failure of one attack, but of several launched simultaneously. The fighting was not an affair of hours, but of days. For three full days it continued without abatement, the Germans sacrificing men without conscience and without remorse in their frantic efforts to beat back the French and the British and gain control of the heights beyond Kemmel. But every effort was destroyed in the making, and after their huge sacrifices the Germans had absolutely nothing to show. The very fury of the attacks caused them to wear themselves out, and the fighting died out toward the middle of the week, until finally the infantry attacks ceased altogether. Nor have they been begun since. The artillery fire has continued with more or less intensity, particularly along the Lys River, but there has been no infantry action since the great repulse.

The danger to the Ypres salient has naturally been increased by such advances as the Germans have been able to make in the last two weeks. It has grown smaller, the point more definitely defined, the distance between the sides lessened. The British have drawn in their lines east of Ypres—it is not clear whether they withdrew all the way in the first retirement or whether two bits were made of it, but whichever is the truth, they have thereby lessened the danger somewhat.

But a break on the southern leg of the salient would still be most embarrassing, the troops in the angle being put in a position where a retreat would be almost impossible. It is entirely possible that due precautions have been taken against this, however, and means provided for a hurried exit. In fact, it is not impossible that evacuation is already under way.

While all of this fighting was in progress in the western theatre, the Mesopotamia field has again broken out in full force. The British have been carefully preparing for an offensive in that region for some months, the object of the offensive being Mosul, the most important of the Turkish bases. One of the British columns, marching northward from the Tigris River, has advanced over twenty miles toward this objective, while another, operating on the Euphrates, has made good progress toward Aleppo. In its present stages, however, this field, while threatening the heel of the Kaiser, must be considered as in every way subsidiary.

NOTED GERMAN AUTHORITY PREDICTS IMPOVERISHMENT OF RUSSIA

What the German "Realpolitiker" intend to do to Russia and the ruthlessness of the fate they have in store for her for all succeeding time, is shown in the article translated below, upon "The Future Market in the East," which appeared in the Breslauer General-Anzeiger of March 17. It is by Dr. Paul Rohrbach, former Imperial Commissioner of Settlements and a leading German authority on colonial exploitation, particularly in the Near East and Africa. Dr. Rohrbach, who was himself born in Livonia and has made long researches in Russia and Asia Minor for the German Government, does not deal with the situation in terms of democracy, justice, and self-determination of races, but simply and coolly in terms of ores and oil and wheat and lumber resources. He calmly asserts that Russia proper, after Germany has separated her borderlands from the main trunk, must in future remain the poorest of lands.

By DR. PAUL ROHRBACH.

THERE have been many myths about Russia, and one of the most widespread among them is the myth of her inexhaustible natural wealth. The Russian policy knew how to support this view most skillfully in the rest of the world, and particularly in Germany. But whoever knew Russia must long have wondered why this catchword of Russian wealth was repeated without being subjected to criticism. In comparison with the wide extent and population of Russia, her so-called inexhaustible natural resources were always actually scant. Her production of precious metals was uncertain and, in the most important deposits, existed in decreasing quantity. Of the great forest areas of the Russian North and Northwest, not to mention Siberia, the greater part was situated so unfavorably from the point of view of geography and economic traffic that its exploitation was made very difficult. The stores of iron and coal were likewise, in proportion to the size of Russia, neither important nor favorably located. The Caucasian petroleum deposits, indeed, were valuable. An agricultural activity of the greatest importance was created by the wide stretch of pre-eminently fertile soil in the South, which extended also—though, to be sure, considerably narrowed—even into Western Siberia; this, owing to the strong admixture of decayed vegetable matter, bears the name "black earth."

Now, indeed, after Russia is dissolving into her component parts, along the same borders and boundaries where, in the course of the last three centuries, the gradual forcible annexation of the Ukraine, Finland, Poland, the Baltic provinces, the Caucasus, and Turkestan was carried out, it becomes evident that the main trunk of Russia itself, Muscovy or Great Russia, possesses the least of the natural treasures. In the future group of East European States—the designation "Russia" belongs to history and should, in order to avoid misunderstandings, best not be used at all hereafter—the Ukraine is the most favored territory.

The Ukraine has the lion's share of "black earth"; it has by far the most coal and the most iron; it has good manganese ores and great deposits of phosphate of lime, and, in addition to this, it contains, for agricultural purposes, almost all the soil suitable for the growing of sugar and tobacco for the country that was hitherto Russia. If the Caucasus should unite with the Ukraine—which, in view of the large Ukrainian population of the northern Caucasus, is quite possible—then the petroleum deposits of Baku and Grosnejc would also improve the natural resources of the Ukraine. It is self-evident that under these circumstances the Ukraine will soon develop into a country of the first magnitude for imports and exports. The most decisive factor toward this end is the fact that the agricultural exploitation in this "black earth" is only in the beginning of its development. Better agricultural education, better implements and draft animals, more rational fertilizing and more extensive use of machinery, will not only double the production in the near future, but even treble it. Even in the last ten years before the war the greater part of the Russian grain exports came from the Ukraine. With the progress of economic and Governmental order, there will arise there a greater demand for imports—in the first place for agricultural machinery, railway equipment, and factory equipment; also for means of education, chemical goods, and medicaments. We may count upon the Ukraine's becoming, within a generation, a most distinctly prosperous land, with corresponding export and import potentialities for the world markets.

Similar, even if on a much smaller scale, are conditions in Finland, the Baltic provinces, and Lithuania. Finland has, as its great industrial factor, its wealth of forests together with its inexhaustible water power. The Finns are a highly developed and intelligent race, full of spiritual life, full of ambition for culture and for economic development. Freed from Russia and placed upon its own responsibility, the country, whose increase in population is by far the greatest of the European north, will take a mighty and rapid upward swing. The Baltic territory and Lithuania have good, and in part distinctly fertile, arable land.

The damp climate of the coast is favorable for the cultivation of flax. This cultivation, so important for obtaining threads and oil, can be carried on there very extensively. Esthonia, Livonia, Courland, and Lithuania are all rich in wood. A great part of the export of Russian wood heretofore came from these territories. It is furthermore important that the population, particularly of the three Baltic provinces, is of very progressive culture and has a corresponding demand for import commodities.

Nor is the fate of the properly Asiatic lands of Russia—Siberia and Turkestan—to be overlooked. It will depend upon how soon and in what sense the conditions in Great Russia become firmer whether the territories in Asia will remain with it or go their own way.

But most unfavorable of all is the situation of Great Russia itself in any event, it being the greatest in extent and the most populous of the States of the new Eastern Europe, but internally the weakest, both as concerns its economic forces and its racial efficiency. Great Russia has a much smaller share of the "black earth" than the Ukraine. Its remaining soil is of moderate, at best of medium, quality for agricultural purposes. For the greater part it consists, as in Northern Germany, of deposits from the glacial period, with a strong admixture of sand, and in places masses of stone. The cultivation of wheat is possible only in the most southern part of Great Russia. The Great Russian Governments can in favorable harvest years be sufficient unto themselves in their harvest; but in unfavorable years, when the population increased greatly in the industrial sections, they already had to import from the south. Thus there will scarcely be any talk of Great Russian export of grain. But therewith the future Great Russia will lose the chief feature up to now of Russian exports for the world markets. It will be able, even though with difficulties, to develop the export of wood from the territories lying in the north toward the Arctic and not favorably situated for traffic; and in addition it will be able to export some cattle products—Siberian butter, (if Siberia remains with Great Russia,) some flax, (which grows better in Livonia,) and some hemp—(for the cultivation of which the Ukraine is better suited.)

Finally there would come up for consideration the precious metals of the Ural Mountains and possibly of Siberia. But the gold production of the Urals constitutes only a small percentage of the total output of the world; the Urals' platinum production likewise is but a small part of the world's output, and in Siberia the mines of the Altai Mountains are on the verge of exhaustion; and the washings of gold sands in the Lena territory are a very uncertain factor. Work is possible there only for a few months in the year, the frost being an obstacle for the rest.

After all this, it is clear that Great Russia is a most emphatically poor country, one of the worst provided for among the countries of world trade. No country can permanently import more commodities than it can pay with its export products. But Great Russia's power of payment will be only scant, and the general financial power and credit will be corresponding.

Very important deductions follow in a political sense. One of the most frequently heard opinions is that "Russia," if it suffers great losses in "vitally necessary" territories, will risk everything in order to get back its powers and reconquer what it has lost. This supposition would be correct if the future Great Russian State were a strong structure or could develop into one.

But precisely this, as we see, is not the case. But even if the people of Great Russia wished to do otherwise, it could not do so—for it will lack the material force to resume its former position as lord and oppressor of surrounding lands in the south and west. Great Russia will be a farmer land of 90,000,000 or more inhabitants, with scant industries, with some agricultural exports, with weak finances and correspondingly weak defensive powers. Added to this is the fact that the values that were stored in the border territories as a result of its connection with them have for the most part been senselessly destroyed and laid waste during the present revolution.

From what has been said here, it follows naturally how we must regard in the forthcoming future the markets in the East and our business relations with the East European countries. If we go to work at all correctly, that is to say, with foresight, skill, and tact, we can look forward to a lively development of our commercial relations with the Ukraine, Finland, and the Baltic territory and with Lithuania, (likewise with Poland, where, however, there are peculiar conditions requiring an analysis of their own.) But we must cherish lesser expectations as regards Great Russia, which can furnish little and will be correspondingly able to take up but little from without.

WHAT WILL HE DO WITH NEW POWERS?

President Wilson's Critics and Admirers Speculate on His Actions Under Overman Bill.

PRESIDENT WILSON, with the Overman bill a law, will be clothed with more power than has been held by any previous President of the United States. In a great national crisis he will assume a greater responsibility than has been imposed on any preceding head of our Government. The great question, therefore, with assurance that the bill will soon be passed, is:

What will the President do with this new administrative power?

There are three points of view of Wilson in Washington. One is that of those who are in unsympathetic opposition to him. Another is that of those who are wholly for him; who think that whatever the President says, whatever he does, is right, not to be questioned. A third is that of those supporters of the President who, while they deeply feel the inspiration of Mr. Wilson's great ideal of a world made safe for democracy, yet differ with him on some Administration questions; they believe that the President's authority and influence before the world, now so much needed and yet more to be needed in the future, depend to no small extent on increasing our participation in the war on the practical side to the highest possible efficiency. They say that much has been accomplished, but that from now forward there must be more speed and a heightened efficiency. One in this third group is a Democratic Senator who frequently sees the President.

"Congress, in passing the Overman bill, which will undoubtedly be done soon, is putting the war up to the President as never before," said this Senator when asked what he thought the President would do with the new authority bestowed on him by the bill. "He has asked for full responsibility, and it is to be given to him. With that greater results will be expected. If they are not forthcoming criticism will have a new force.

"I do not believe the President has completed any plans as to any so-called War Super-Cabinet, though I think something will be ready by the time the bill becomes a law. There will not be, in my opinion, anybody between the President and the present Cabinet that will lessen the authority of the Cabinet members as they stand today. I think a super-council, so-called, will be composed of those members of the Cabinet more immediately concerned with the conduct of the war and the heads of those important bureaus established to meet war needs; that is, the council that now meets with the President every week, with perhaps a military man added and one or two others. This would bring together in one room every administrator directly connected with the conduct of the war, and under the bill some of them have a standing which they do not now possess. For instance, the Fuel Administrator and the Food Administrator are now of an importance greater than some members of the Cabinet. It may be that the new Aircraft Director, Mr. Ryan, and the new Emergency Fleet Director, Mr. Schwab, will be added to this Cabinet.

"Those belonging to this council now are the members of the Council of National Defense: the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Secretary of Labor; Mr. Hoover, Food Administrator; Mr. Garfield, Fuel Administrator; Mr. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board; Mr. Baruch, Chairman of the War Industries Board; Mr. McAdoo, Director of Railways, and Mr. McCormick, Chairman of the War Trade Board.

"Any one who makes even a cursory study of the duties of the heads of new war boards will see that the greater number of them are of Cabinet rank in importance. Under the bill they can be vested with authority in relation to the older pre-war departments which they have not had heretofore. This super-war cabinet would study and recommend, but its power to execute would be subject to the President. It would be his alter ego in matters of counsel.

"Lower down in the organization I think a number of changes will be made to cut out duplication and to bring about more concentration, and that others will be worked out and put into effect later. There is a duplication in housing which should be done away with. Part of it is under the Shipping Board, which already has a large appropriation, and part is under the Department of Labor, which is soon to have a much larger appropriation, $60,000,000, as named in the bill. This is one proposition and should be under one head.

"One of our greatest problems is labor and questions arising out of it. The whole thing should be concentrated under one authority without delay. This the President has already declared himself in favor of, in indorsing the War Labor Board, the carrying out of which has been held up by the delay in passing the Overman bill. That board would have jurisdiction over all controversies between employers and men throughout the whole field of production. The War, Navy, Shipping and Aircraft departments all now have labor-policy functions, exercised through their purchasing departments. The employment of labor by the Government or on Government work should also be centralized under the same general head. One department now competes against the other, and often the more important work has to yield in competition with a lesser.

"There is much duplication in chemical work, so important to the conduct of the war. It has ramifications in half a dozen departments or bureaus. It should be put under one. The war has placed some minerals in a position of supreme importance in the manufacture of munitions or supplies, as tungsten and platinum. For this reason it has been proposed to transfer the Bureau of Mines from the Department of the Interior to the War Department.

"I believe our greatest difficulty in speeding up the war has been administrative, due to the rigidity of legislative acts defining organization rather than to personnel, though I consider the latter of great importance, too. This bill dissolves that rigidity, makes the whole war organization plastic, capable of being focused, like some great private business organization, to one end. I therefore think this is the President's great opportunity of the war. The war organization will soon be his practically to be shaped to the great purpose of making his ideal true—a world safe for democracy."

Here is what a man in an executive position related to the Administration said:

"I do not think there will be any great changes at once. The Overman bill is to be considered, in my opinion, more as a resource, to be ready at hand as need arises. I look upon it more as a club than anything else, to bring about better team work, and thus to increase efficiency. A man at the head of a bureau who thinks only of his own work and not of his relations to his whole department will find a transfer hanging over him. Co-ordination is better now than it has been, and it will continue to improve. Of course, I am not speaking from any knowledge of the President's plans. I can see one good reason why these have been kept so close; if they had been divulged before the bill passed, then some opposition to the measure might have come from bureaus which are to be transferred to other departments."

One question stands out first at Washington in all the speculation heard as to the administrative possibilities of the bill. This is as to a War Cabinet, a small body of from three to five men, who would stand between the President and the present Cabinet, something like the British War Cabinet. The advocates of such a small super-cabinet contend that in no other way can the highest efficiency be attained, and that this rests on one of the best established principles of administration; they say that the heads of the departments have all they can possibly attend to, and that the better they do this work the less are they fitted to survey the whole organization and determine general policies.

This is what Senator Chamberlain advocated in his bill—a War Cabinet of three men of established reputation. He was asked if he thought such a small cabinet could be created under the Overman bill.

"Absolutely," was his answer.

"Whom had you in mind for the three men?"

"I will mention two—who have since been taken over by the Administration. One is Mr. Stettinius, now Assistant Secretary of War and head of purchases of the War Department, and the other is Mr. Schwab, who has been lately placed in charge of shipbuilding."

The Administration's call upon men of this type, including John D. Ryan, the new Director of Aircraft Production, has raised the second big question as to what will be done when the Overman bill becomes a law. This question is: In any changes to be made, are other administrators of national reputation to be called into the service of the Government?

Those who have contended for the ablest administrators obtainable, irrespective of party affiliations, say that the Overman bill with its elasticity provides just the condition for this type of man to do his best work, viz., freedom of initiative. According to a well-informed Washington man, this is why Mr. Schwab insisted on going to the President before he decided to become Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

"I cannot undertake this unless I have complete authority, Mr. President, the risk of failure otherwise is too great," Mr. Schwab said, it is reported. This authority, according to the story, the President told him he would have.

"I may make some radical changes," Mr. Schwab continued, as the account goes; and, the story has it, he was again assured by the President that he would have full authority. At any rate, Mr. Schwab's first act after he took charge was to order a radical change, the removal of the Fleet Corporation from Washington. It is now reported that Mr. Ryan will move the aircraft organization from Washington out into the automobile manufacturing section in the Middle West.

"What Mr. Schwab wanted," said the man responsible for this account, "was to get his job off somewhere where he could run it; to get the work out of Washington atmosphere and interference. Men of his type offered their services at the beginning of the war; they went away in disgust when no heed was paid to their suggestions by some bureau head. Now they are being invited back again, but slowly, in response to Congressional investigations and public opinion. Stettinius was urged for months before he was appointed, and he has not yet the authority he should have, though his great experience in purchasing supplies for the Allies indisputably made him the logical choice for that work in our Government. It was when the investigation of the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate and the Chamberlain bill for the war cabinet forced the issue that the Administration gave him his appointment to meet this criticism—a piece of political strategy, I call it.

"It was the same with Schwab. He was not sent for until the necessity of the situation, the backwardness of the ship program, pointed imperatively to him. So, too, with the aircraft—a real administrator was not appointed to have charge of that until after the whole program had fallen down hard. It is a pretty expensive way to use our ablest business men—or rather not to use them—to wait until a year of failure, or of part failure, has made a situation critical. This policy of trying the smaller men first and the big men afterward will have to change if we are to do our part in winning this war." The man who is responsible for this criticism, it should be said, is known for his attitude of opposition to the Administration.

So far as party affiliations go, of the three men called from the world of big business to aid the Administration, two, Mr. Stettinius and Mr. Schwab, are Republicans. Mr. Ryan is a Democrat, but none has been prominent because of political activity.

A Republican Senator said: "People are asking what is the 'inside' of the Stettinius, Schwab, and Ryan appointments. There is no 'inside' in my opinion. They came as the result of long criticism, originating with the Congressional investigations. Response must be quicker if we are to get into the war as we should. I happen to know how long the aircraft trouble was in coming to a head. It was known, or strongly suspected, to be bad before Mr. Baker went to Europe. The whole atmosphere of the office changed when he went away. Mr. Crowell, whom he had called in as assistant, is a business man, and so is Mr. Stettinius. It was soon after that the Snowden Marshall Committee was appointed to investigate the aircraft situation; also the proposal was made for the Senate Committee on Military Affairs to meet once a week with the War Department. They said: 'We will show you what we are doing, we want your co-operation and help.' The effect of able business men in the department has been most noticeable ever since.

"Whatever is done with the Overman bill, we need not expect any changes in the Cabinet. Its members will remain all Democrats. The President has shown himself averse to changes."

Lincoln got along without a War Super-Cabinet, some say in defense of President Wilson's reported intention not to do anything that will disturb the authority or standing of the members of the Cabinet as it exists today. Those who are in favor of a smaller administrative body between the President and the Cabinet say that the conditions are too different for the comparison to hold; that this is a new kind of war for us—a war, in its ultimate analysis, of industries; that, therefore, our men of greatest achievement in the industries should have a place in the Cabinet. Those who assert that say now is the time for the President to put this plan into effect, and that this country's true industrial power and ability have not yet been used; they say that the greatest ability of that kind in the world is here, and that the world recognized that it was so before the war, and that delay in the war program is because of the failure to take advantage of that ability. Those who deny that there is a parallel between Lincoln and President Wilson assert also that Lincoln started out with a coalition Cabinet and strengthened it by changes as he went along.

This is the way one critic puts it:

"Both Lincoln and Wilson may be classed as great idealists, but there is one difference, so far. Wilson chooses an idealist for the most important position in his Cabinet. That is Baker. Lincoln, on the other hand, selected, after the inadequacy of Simon Cameron had been exposed, a strong-fisted materialist, Edwin M. Stanton. It did not bar Stanton that he had bitterly criticized the President. What Senator Chamberlain said of the Administration is very mild in comparison. Some of the expressions used by Stanton were 'the trepidation of Lincoln,' 'distrust in every department of the Government,' 'the painful imbecility of Lincoln.' After the battle of Bull Run, Stanton wrote that a better state of things would be impossible 'until Jeff Davis turns out the whole concern.' But Jeff Davis didn't. One reason he didn't was because Lincoln, perceiving in Stanton a man of action, a great worker who made others work, overlooked the criticism and made Stanton Secretary of War. It is the strong men with individual opinions whom the Administration needs at this time. And if Lincoln is to be quoted by Wilson followers, let his example be followed; let the best possible men be selected for the big administrative jobs."

CAPT. FISH WRITES FROM FRANCE

CAPT. HAMILTON FISH, JR., of the 369th United States Infantry, the first regiment of negroes sent to France, has written to his father the following letter:

"I hope you will forgive me for not writing oftener, but I am busy every moment getting my company ready for a tour of duty in the trenches. We expect to be ordered up in ten days, and naturally there is a lot of polishing up to be done, so that we can give a good account of ourselves on our introduction to the boche. After all our wanderings and experiences it is difficult to realize that we will be facing German bullets, and I hope, taking German helmets before you get this letter. I understand that helmets are the only things we are allowed to keep, and also to send home.

"Our regiment is the most envied American regiment in France, and has the greatest opportunity to make a wonderful record. We are with the French Army and have the incomparable advantage of the instructions and experience of the French. We are, to all intents and purposes, a part of the French Army, and supplied by them with all of our rifles, bayonets, helmets, gas masks, knapsacks, food, and ammunition. The men looked splendid in the American khaki uniforms and French leather equipment and brown helmets. I wonder what the Germans will think when they take one of our boys prisoner and find that he cannot speak French and comes from Harlem.

"I am a great believer in the fighting quality of the educated American negro, provided he is well led. If the regiment does not make a splendid record, it will not be the fault of the men. I believe, if the censorship regulations were abolished, the 15th New York, (now the 369th U. S. Infantry,) would be as well known as the Rough Riders were in the Spanish-American war, before peace is declared. We were the second New York regiment over here, following closely on the old 69th, and, I believe, the first colored regiment to land in France. Today we are the American Foreign Legion of France. We are sending back our old 15th New York Infantry flag to Governor Whitman, to be placed with the other old regimental flags in the State Capitol at Albany. It is quite appropriate that the flag should be returned to Governor Whitman, as the regiment was ordered during his administration, and owes its success to his personal interest and efforts in its behalf.

"We are billeted in a small village not very far from the front and are not bothered by German shells, but we can plainly hear the incessant rumble of the artillery. On clear nights the front looks like a Fourth of July celebration with rockets, flares and flashes of big guns. Most of the firing is now done at night time, because the artillery on both sides shell the lines of communication to prevent the bringing up of supplies and movement of troops. There are plenty of German airplanes hovering about, especially at night, and there have been several air fights in the vicinity of our village. One of our battalions has already gone to the trenches. It was an interesting sight to see our troops march out of the little French village while our band played the 'Sombre' and 'Meuse,' the 'Marseillaise,' and our national anthem. There were no flowers and no good-byes, as our boys marched out to give battle, but just the same those of us who saw them go were greatly impressed by their martial appearance.

"I have given up all attempts to figure on the duration of the war, as it is a waste of time. We know less about the German offensive than you do in America, as we do not get the German bulletins and the allied communiques are closely censored. From the latest reports, the Germans have been checked in their attempt to take Amiens.

"Please do not worry about my being hit, as it will not do either of us any good. There is no such thing as dodging a shell or a bullet, as the one that hits is never seen. It is a good deal a matter of luck, or, as the French say—'bonne chance.' I am willing to take my chance with the rest of them.

"We went through the throwing of hand grenadoes without an accident, although one man dropped his and had the pluck to pick it up again and throw it out of the trench. Our boys already excel the French at grenade throwing on account of their baseball training. The hand grenade is one of the most important features of the present war, and has taken the place of the rifle to a large extent in trench warfare. Several of our men can throw dummy grenades seventy-five meters, which is ten meters further than any of the French soldiers near here. Grenade throwing for distance, accuracy, and speed is the war sport of France, and has taken the place of football and other games.

"H. R. is working in a French canteen, less than twenty miles from here, and sent me a letter by one of our soldiers who happened to pass by. I will try to go to see her soon. Evidently the town she is living in has been severely bombed by German aviators. These air raids are always carried out on clear nights, and we can distinctly hear the machines pass over our darkened little village on their mission of destruction. About a week ago, a French officer told me that a single bomb had fallen there and killed forty-two noncombatants who had taken supposed shelter in the cellar of a house.

"We declared war just one year ago, and all reports indicate that America is aroused and enthusiastic for the prosecution of the war to victory. I am glad to hear that the nation has shaken off its shackles and destroyed the maggots of pacifism which feed on its carcass and lulled us into fancied security. I am confident that the farmers—the back-home folks, the plain people—whose sons are in khaki, will bend every energy and make every sacrifice to bring this terrible war to a quick and successful conclusion."

AID FOR YOUNG EAST SIDERS

TO prepare the child in the public schools for the work out of which he is to gain his livelihood; to help him choose that type of work which will lead him somewhere and not terminate in a blind alley; to place him in the plant or institution where he can best get the knowledge which will help him become an efficient worker—this is what the Henry Street Settlement Vocational Committee is trying to do. Bureaus have been opened at Public School 147 and one at Public School 12. The economic need in the district is one which makes it necessary for the vast majority of children living here to seek employment either immediately upon their graduation from the elementary schools or, in many cases, before they complete the eight years' work.

The bureaus investigate the cases called to their attention by the field workers, teachers, and Principals in the schools. The aim is in every case one of constructive co-operation between the schools, parents, and children. The committee is endeavoring to have the work taken up by the Board of Education and started in all the schools of the city.

On Which Are You Basing Your Judgments of the War?

Fragmentary News or Complete Reports?

Unfounded Rumors or Official Documents?

Immature Opinions or Authorized Statements?

EVERY day brings forth a vast amount of news, of rumors, of contradictory reports. You can't read it all; you can't, without great effort, sift the chaff from the wheat. Yet you need not remain in confusion as to what is actually happening. You need not base your judgments on false premises.

You can get the facts of world history, written by the men who are making it.

THE CURRENT HISTORY MAGAZINE contains official reports and authoritative articles on every phase of the war, presented in co-ordinated form, for easy reading, ready reference and permanent preservation.

CURRENT HISTORY contains the official reviews of the commanding generals. (This magazine was the only publication in America to present Field Marshal Haig's complete report of the battles of 1917.) It gives the salient speeches of statesmen; the significant diplomatic documents; accurate maps and charts; international cartoons and historic war photos in gravure.

There is a fascination in viewing the majestic march of events—coherent, connected, related to one another—as presented in the Current History Magazine from month to month—a fascination that the daily fragments of news cannot possibly create.

As for the larger developments of the war—no one can understand them, no one can form a worth-while judgment of them without reading the vital reports and documents that the daily press can only summarize.

Current History will be of inestimable value to you, not only today, but in the years to come, when it will form a unique and treasured record of the great war, written and published as the fight for freedom was being fought.

Partial list of the Contents for the May issue, now on sale:

PRINCE LICHNOWSKY'S REVELATIONS—Complete text of the suppressed memorandum of the German Ambassador at London when the war broke out, charging the German militarists with rejecting every offer of reconciliation and insisting upon war. Also Former Foreign Secretary von Jagow's reply and other documents.

BATTLE OF PICARDY—An account of the first month of the bloodiest battle in history, written by the two chief correspondents at the Front, Philip Gibbs and George Perris. Illustrated with maps and diagrams. Also a critical review by a military expert.

AMERICA'S FIRST YEAR OF THE WAR—A comprehensive review, with an official summary of the Red Cross and other important activities.

AUSTRIA'S PEACE BID TO FRANCE, with the text of Emperor Charles's secret letters and exposures by Premier Clemenceau.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE'S EPOCHAL ADDRESS (in full) on Britain's Crisis, the Man Power Bill and Irish Conscription.

REASONS FOR COAL CRISIS

Inadequate Transportation, Labor Shortage, Lack of Directing Authority.

AMONG people who understand the fuel situation there appears to be a unanimous opinion that the coal shortage next Winter will be serious, though it may not be quite as bad as the one just passed. The reason is threefold: first, lack of adequate transportation facilities; second, lack of labor, and third, lack of the proper executive power to remedy the troubles.

The war has tried the railroads almost to the breaking point. The constant drain on the insufficient number of cars has necessarily meant that some product or industry would have to suffer. It has long been a habit of railroad men to meet a crisis or rush in transportation by shifting the coal cars to sidings and letting them wait there until such time as they could be taken care of. When the roads began to be overwhelmed by large shipments of food and ammunition to the Allies and to our camps, the first measure taken to relieve the congestion was the usual stalling of the coal freight. This is what happened last year. It is still happening this year. Many railroad yards are stocked with cars of coal waiting for an opportunity to be hitched to a train.

This railroad situation is naturally making itself felt at the mines. Every coal mine has an average output for a day and makes adequate requisition for cars to meet this output. When the railroads were running freight at a normal rate the requisition was usually met. Even if the shipping stations were at times overwhelmed and found they couud not take care of as many cars as were filled, the mines did not suffer to any great extent, and the work went on as usual. The mining heads were assured of a sufficient number of trains to keep the mines going at good speed, if not at top speed. But today the requisitions of the mines are disregarded, and in the large majority of cases the small allotment of cars allowed to the mines are greatly reduced.

It is easy to see what bearing this has on the labor situation. Not having the facilities to ship the goods and clear the coal yards, the mines must necessarily cut down their output. The men work on a wage scale of so much a ton mined or washed. Miners who formerly made as much as $50 to $99 a week today earn as little as $10 or $12. So serious was this situation last Winter that the men and their families would have had to starve for lack of money to buy food if it had not been for the company stores maintained by the mines. Credit was allowed to the men staying there, and today not only are these men facing a heavy bill for food bought during their enforced idleness, but also a continued lack of work and resources which makes payment of their debt well-nigh impossible. As a result of these conditions large numbers of men have left the mines for employment in more lucrative industries. The munition factories and the shipyards are glad to get workers, and the pay, though not up to the average reached during the high tide of the mining season, which in normal times should begin at this time of the year, is still considerably greater than what the men can now make at the mines. Even should the railroad situation improve there would be great difficulty in getting a sufficient number of men to keep the mines going at full speed.

One of the recognized coal authorities in New York said the other day that only after a committee had been formed with the authority to demand of the railroads the proper transportation facilities for coal would there be a solution to the problem. The changing of the railroads' point of view as to the comparative importance of coal, he declared, and the shutting down of industries not essential to the carrying out of the war, would be the only road toward coal security for the Winter months.

"If, instead of saying that the industries most essential to the war would get the preference in shipments of coal," he continued, "the Fuel Administration would come out strongly and say that no industry not essential to the war would get any coal, it would greatly relieve matters.

"The situation is serious. There is no denying that. We are getting about 70 per cent. of the amount of coal we should be getting. But I don't believe I am unduly optimistic in prophesying that New York will not suffer as greatly as it did last year. We use anthracite coal almost exclusively in this city. Down South they use bituminous coal. At the time of the coal shortage last year there was a greater dearth of bituminous coal than there was of anthracite. To meet this situation, coal dealers working in the interests of the Southern districts diverted New York shipments to points below us. That, the lack of care, and the cold weather, all working together, served to create the suffering we had last Winter. This year, however, a committee of anthracite coal merchants will see to it that all the anthracite reaches its proper destination. The point is: How much anthracite and in what sizes can we get under present conditions, and what is going to be done to change these conditions?

"The fact that the big plants in the city cannot get the coal in the sizes that they would naturally require tends in no small measure to deplete the domestic supply of coal. Anthracite coal is sent out in eight sizes, from the buckwheat size up. The smaller sizes, buckwheat and pea, are the kinds which plants ordinarily use. The egg size is almost entirely used for domestic purposes. At present owners of plants and buildings can't pick and choose, and are glad to take whatever they can get. A shipment of egg coal that would at normal times be diverted into channels for home consumption is grabbed up today by the man who needs it to keep his plant running. This means a drain on a source which already has been greatly reduced. Culm and silt, formerly considered almost worthless and used for such purposes as building up embankments or filling in ground, are now grabbed up on the market. Culm is the residue of bits of coal left over after the smallest sizes have been washed out. Silt is even finer than culm, and is really nothing more than coal dust. Both are being bought by plants which formerly would have scorned them. They are mixed with bituminous coal and used for heating and power-creating purposes.

"The situation is by no means hopeless, if taken up in time. The coal is there. It can be made worth while for men to go and work in the mining region, and there are a sufficient number of men in the country who have the power and the ability to take the reins in hand and get some order out of this chaos."

TWO SHIFTS IN SHIPYARDS

A Pressing Need in Order to Win the War, and a Practicable Plan Despite the Objections Advanced

By EDWARD HARDING.
Chairman of the Executive Board, National Committee of Patriotic Societies.

THE greatest thing in the world today is transportation. If we had at hand adequate transportation, if we could rub Aladdin's lamp and set down in France overnight all the men and all the food and all the munitions that are available here, we could, without donbt, win the war. But we cannot do this. The best we can do is to build ships—plenty of ships.

The battle of the Marne was won and the Germans stopped by soldiers brought from Paris in taxicabs. The battles on the western front can only be won now by troops and supplies brought from this country in ships. If we do not have enough ships, that lack, in the opinion of many competent observers, will lose the war.

Even now, after a year at war, the immensity of the task in which we are engaged is only just beginning to dawn on many of us. To fight and help our allies defeat a well-trained and strongly organized foe, more than 3,000 miles from our nearest shores, is the biggest job ever undertaken by a nation. Every pound of food and clothing and ammunition sent to our men must be transported at least those 3,000 miles. Each soldier sent over will require at least three gross tons of shipping constantly in commision to keep him supplied with the necessities of life and the means for fighting.

A force of 3,000,000 men—the force now contemplated to be sent to France—will thus require at least 9,000,000 gross tons constantly in commission to keep it supplied. Furthermore, there is the present hole in the world's tonnage caused by the ravages of submarines in the last three and a half years. This must be made good. The losses in excess of all launchings in the same period total 3,000,000 tons. These, added to the extraordinary demand for 9,000,000 tons necessary for transporting our troops to France and keeping them supplied with food and munitions, make a total shortage of at least 12,000,000 gross tons. Under present conditions we will probably not build in 1918 more than 2,500,000 gross tons in this country.

In response to Lloyd George's and General Pétain's urgent call we are sending men—thousands of them each day. But are we bending every effort to provide the necessary means for keeping these men from suffering for lack of food or lack of supplies?

Two years ago, when I was in Detroit for a short stay, I went out to the Ford plant to look it over. What I saw was so fascinating that I spent the rest of that day and most of the night going through the plant. Every minute of the time machines were humming, cranes were moving, hammers were falling. The men were working three shifts of eight hours each, making the biggest output that had ever been produced in the plant. Why were they doing that? Why were they working under so much pressure? On account of the demand of the people for transportation in the cheap form supplied by Ford Cars. Today the demand of the world for ships is vastly greater than the demand of our people has ever been for Ford cars. The fate of civilization may hinge on our having enough ships. And yet in this war crisis we are not operating our shipyards at such high manufacturing efficiency as Mr. Ford operated his plant in time of peace.

Many manufacturers are surprised to find that the shipyards are only working one shift. When they make inquiries as to why this situation exists, they find that several objections are made to two shifts. But none of these is insurmountable. The fact that they can all be overcome is clearly shown by the practice of the Pacific Coast shipyard which is now working two shifts a day. This yard has just delivered an 8,800-ton ship in 109 days from the day of laying the keel—eighty-one days ahead of the schedule date for delivery.

A shipyard on the Atlantic Coast is using all possible haste to prepare for working two shifts a day and expects to be working on this schedule within two weeks.

Lack of men is the first objection that has been raised. If Superintendents, foremen, and other head men are lacking, they must be supplied from other closely allied industries. It is the duty of the patriotic business men of the country to lend to the shipyards men who can assist in any way in shipbuilding. Business men the country over have willingly lent some of their best men to assist the Government at Washington. It is well known that the business men of Rochester, with splendid spirit and marked success, lent from their organizations the necessary Superintendents and men to work in the undermanned munition plants in that city. To help out the shipyards, the same co-operation must be given in many of our manufacturing communities.

As Kipling says, it is team work that is wanted.

> It ain't the guns nor armament,
> Nor funds that they can pay,
> But the close co-operation
> That makes them win the day.
> It ain't the individual,
> Nor the Army as a whole,
> But the everlasting team work
> Of every bloomin' soul.

Results will be obtained if loans of men are made to shipyards from closely allied industries. The head of one large shipbuilding plant said recently: "If we can get the pick of executives we will be able to go on at once with two shifts."

Skilled men from the present day shift can be sprinkled through the proposed night shifts. Further, the present emergency is developing in a few months skilled men who otherwise might be years in reaching higher positions of responsibility. All steps must be taken by the shipbuilders to hasten this development.

The unwillingness of the men to work at night is another objection put forward. There is, of course, a natural disinclination on the part of many men to work in night shifts. Such work has many minor inconveniences. It tends to break up family life. It keeps men in the yards when most of the community is not working. But the men in the trenches have to work in night shifts. If the men in the shipyards are brought to a realization of the urgent need of their working at night, if they are told the facts, if they are made to feel that their work is essential to win the war, I have no doubt they will respond. Dr. Eaton of the United States Shipping Board says: "There is no equal number of men in this nation of finer temper or quality than the workers in the shipyards of this country at the present time."

The danger of night work due to insufficient lighting is also pointed out. But this danger has been overcome in work on ships and in factories and in building skyscrapers. It has been overcome in some of our shipyards. The difficulties it presents can readily be solved by the application of modern methods of flood lighting.

When one shipbuilding company in the East recently determined to run on a night shift it placed an order with the General Electric Company for a system of lights that would produce "ideal conditions." The system will soon be installed at a cost of less than $100,000.

The lack of material with which to carry on the work of extra shifts is cited as a further objection. The necessary material must be supplied by the Government—that is, by the Emergency Fleet Corporation—and to it we must look. But the business men of the country can perform a very real service by definitely refusing priorities on their goods and on transportation for their goods as against material and shipments for the shipyards.

Then there is the lack of housing. Two shifts will call not only for additional labor and additional materials, but for additional housing. Pending the construction of more houses by shipbuilding companies and the Government, the business men of the country can take up vigorously the matter of billeting workers in existing houses. Automobiles can be used in bringing workers between houses and shipyards. Business men can also co-operate with the Government in providing camps similar to those built for the army, or in having tents used during the coming warm weather.

As to the increased cost: The present cost of the war to the Allies is upward of $100,000,000 a day. In speeding up the shipbuilding by having the shipyards run two or three shifts instead of one, as at present, the question of additional cost must not be considered for a moment. If production is increased by only 10 per cent., and the war thereby shortened a few days, will not the hundred million dollars saved daily for those few days, in addition to the thousands of lives that may be saved, amply justify the increased expenditure of money?

How can we excuse ourselves to the boys in the trenches, and to our allies, for not rushing ships to completion by night shifts? Pointing to obstacles is no excuse. Where there is a will there is a way.

RUGS AND CARPETS COSTLY

THERE is no time like the present for buying rugs, and the housewife who waits to replace her old ones until she returns from her Summer vacation will pay for her procrastination. Prices that have been made on new rugs for the Fall wholesale season by leading manufacturers show advances ranging from 20 to 25 per cent. over those quoted last November at the opening of the wholesale season in Spring goods.

As to actual price advances, the table below will tell the story. In reading it the fact must be kept in mind that Fall wholesale prices are usually made in April each year, and that Spring wholesale quotations are given out in November of the preceding year. In other words, the manufacturers sell their goods to the jobbers and the larger retail stores about six months before the ultimate purchaser gets a chance to buy them. Following is the table:

	April, 1917.	November, 1917.	April, 1918.
"A" Axminster, 9x12	$21.55	$23.60	$29.85
"B" Tapestry, 9x12	21.85	34.80	41.55
"A" Tapestry, 9x12	10.70	18.30	22.50
"B" Axminster, 9x12	31.65	34.80	41.35
Velvet, 9x12	28.00	25.30	30.40

A number of factors enter into the rise of prices. Not the least of them is the great amount of loomage formerly devoted to the making of carpets and rugs that is now being given to the production of blankets, duck, and other goods for the Government. So much of the machinery is taken up in this way, in fact, that the largest concern in the country will produce for the Fall season only about 20 per cent. of the quantity of carpets and rugs it turned out before the war. The lessened production will increase the cost of making each rug and each yard of carpet. This increase, of course, has to be passed on to the ultimate purchaser. The higher cost of labor also enters into the increased prices. So does the high cost of colors, though they are not so scarce as they were a year or two ago. The item of ocean freights is important, too, in view of the fact that most of the things which enter into the manufacture of rugs and carpets come from foreign lands. Wools, for instance, are imported from China, South America, East India, Scotland, and Russia. From India come jute and cotton, and the linen that is used in the making of Wilton and Brussels goods comes from Ireland. It is not an easy matter to get any kind of flax goods out of the British Isles, even under export permits.

It is said in the trade that there will be additional increases in prices next Spring. Current prices, manufacturers assert, are not commensurate with the advances that have taken place in the cost of production.

These Three Things are Certain

First; that you must have a good battery if you expect good results.

Second; that you must provide the care and attention without which reliability and long battery life are impossible.

Third; that in the Willard Storage Battery you secure the high quality which with proper battery attention gives you the maximum of battery life and service.

Remember that the Still Better Willard is the only battery with the "Bone Dry" principle that is your absolute assurance of getting a battery as new as the day it left the factory.

First Quality Has Put Chandler in First Place

WHEN men talk now of fine cars selling at medium prices they speak first of the Chandler. Because, for five years, the Chandler has been such a good car, so well built, so dependable in its service on the road. And because now, so distinctly, it offers extraordinary value.

The most distinguished feature of the Chandler Six is its marvelous motor—Chandler-designed and Chandler-built—which, through five years of refinement without radical changes, has been developed to a point approximating perfection.

The life, pick-up, power and endurance of the Chandler motor have been a revelation to thousands of experienced motorists.

The Chandler motor is mounted in a really great chassis, and Chandler bodies offer an attractive range of choice.

REO

Low First Cost—Lower Upkeep

WE REO FOLK seldom talk price, save incidentally.

FOR THE REO PRODUCT is not designed nor made on a price basis.

WE NEVER HAVE succumbed to the temptation to meet a price competition or to build a car to come within a pre-determined figure.

OUR AMBITION has been to build the best—not the most—then set the lowest price possible, based on actual cost plus a small margin of profit.

NEVERTHELESS, it is a fact that this 1500 pound Reo is one of the lowest priced, high speed trucks on the market. Quality and equipment considered, it is the cheapest.

IN FACT YOU'LL HAVE TO PAY on the average, $400 more, to obtain a ¾-ton, manufactured, truck of any reputation or that presumes to compete with the Reo.

WE ARE ENABLED to produce this quality truck and to sell it lower, because of the fact that it has been standard for longer; because of our superior manufacturing facilities; and finally because of our low selling cost.

THE OVER DEMAND for Reos that always has existed, results in a selling cost so low, it is the marvel and the envy of the industry.

AND THIS TRUCK IS a manufactured product—not assembled from unrelated units.

IT IS REO MADE THROUGHOUT, which is to say, it represents the best in materials and workmanship.

50 PER CENT OVERSIZE in all vital parts—the Reo standard factor of safety—in axles, gears, driving shafts, bearings, frame, etc., is your guarantee of stability and dependability.

AND, FIRST COST ASIDE, we affirm there is no other ¾-ton truck on earth that can show such low upkeep and operation cost year in and year out.

READ THAT AGAIN—it's a broad statement. Yet we believe it to be literally true else we would not sign the Reo name to it.

FACTORY CAPACITY is the only limit to the output of the Reo models—for the demand is, and always has been, vastly greater than the supply.

BUT OUR PLAN has been to make, not the most, but the best, and so we never make any more than we can make and make every Reo good.

SO THE ONLY WAY to be sure of a ¾-ton Reo for reasonably early delivery, of present quality and at present price, is to place your order now. Delay is dangerous.

BUSINESS MOTORING FEATURE OF YEAR

Heavy Travel to Washington a Menace to Roads—Detours Advised for Shortest and Best Route

Never before in the history of motoring in this country has the automobile been used to so large an extent for business touring as is the case today. Owing to the railroad congestion and the difficulty of securing proper accommodations, hundreds of business men in all parts of the country are using their motor cars for trips of one hundred miles and over. As the season advances this tendency will be materially enhanced. Motor travel between this city and Washington has increased rapidly within the last month and recent tourists report that the main thoroughfare is frequently lined with long strings of motor vehicles either going to the capital city or returning.

The automobile as a pleasure car has had its day. The name "pleasure car," used for so many years and very properly in the early days of its development, is now a misnomer and the more distinctive term of "passenger car" has taken its place. This does not mean that the motor car will not present just as many opportunities for pleasure and recreative enjoyment as ever before, but it does signify that its service as an essential means of quick communication is more widely used and recognized.

It is interesting to note in this connection that the inquiries recently received at the Bureau of Touring of the Automobile Club of America regarding road conditions have been directed far more with a view to prospective business tours than pleasure travel.

"It reflects very clearly the new conditions in the automobile world," said Richard O. Smith, in charge of the Touring Bureau, last week. "These inquiries are more numerous than ever before at this time. One of our members, who has large business interests in Texas, is about to make a motor trip there. Presumably he will combine a certain element of pleasure with his business, but in former years a trip of that extent at this time would be made by railroad. Many inquiries have also been received for routes and road conditions to Ithaca, Buffalo, Cleveland, and Chicago. Scores of cars are constantly going to Boston and back, and inquiries regarding the Washington trip come in every week."

The travel on the New York to Washington road has been so large both by motor trucks and passenger vehicles that the main highway is badly worn in many places, and it is no easy matter to suggest favorable detours to insure comfortable travel. Several miles of the Lincoln Highway route through New Jersey and Pennsylvania are in very bad condition, but, as a result of the road investigations of the Automobile Club of America and the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, a route has been selected which, it is believed, successfully avoids the worst stretches, and it is being advised by both clubs for those seeking the shortest and best route to Washington.

From New York or Jersey City the main road included in the Lincoln Highway is followed to Rahway. Then it is necessary to make an extensive detour to Woodbridge and Perth Amboy, returning to the Lincoln Highway at Metuchen, thence to New Brunswick, where another detour is advised by way of the Cranbury Pike to Hightstown to Trenton. From the latter point the use of the old Bristol Pike is advised, running to Bristol, then up to Andalusia, rejoining the Lincoln Highway at Bustleton and on to Philadelphia. The Lincoln Highway from Philadelphia through Wilmington and Baltimore is in poor condition.

The shortest and best route suggested by the Automobile Club of Philadelphia is by the Lancaster Pike out of Philadelphia to Coatesville, Quarryville, and Conowingo to Belair. From there to Washington the route leads through Frederick and Ridgeville. This is several miles longer than the more direct run through Wilmington, but the Delaware roads are not in good repair.

This tremendously increased use of the roads by commercial and passenger cars is presenting a most serious problem to the Government and State highway officials regarding the upkeep or the main thoroughfares, so urgently needed for the transport of war supplies and for the varied commercial needs of the country. Highway engineers and others have repeatedly pointed out the serious consequences that are likely to ensue to the transportation facilities of the country if every possible effort is not put forth to maintain the main highways at their maximum condition of excellence.

MORE AUTO REDUCTION.

Washington Conference Tomorrow to Fix Production Basis.

An important meeting will be held in Washington tomorrow between representatives of the automobile manufacturers of the country and the War Industries Board to discuss the percentage of motor car production which the Government deems advisable for the coming year. The production will be based on the year following July 31.

Notwithstanding the fact that the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which represents the majority of the leading manufacturers, voted to curtail production 30 per cent. several weeks ago, it is felt that the War Industries Board will suggest a still further reduction, and there is a very general impression that it will represent at least 50 per cent. If this reduction is based on the productive capacity of the American plants last year, when 1,719,000 passenger cars were made, the estimate of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, a curtailment of one-half would mean about 850,000 passenger cars for the coming year.

The production for the current year ending in July will be less than the previous year's figures, but probably not to a very large extent, as there was very little curtailment before the first of the year. Assuming that this year's production reaches 1,400,000 cars, a 50 per cent. cut would reduce the available number of new cars for the needs of the country to about 700,000.

The decision of the conference, which will be one of the most important to the major industry since the start of the war, is naturally being awaited with the keenest interest by the hundreds of dealers and agencies in the country, as a radical curtailment would seriously affect business conditions in many localities.

Want Cars for Orphans' Day.

Everything points to an unusually happy day for the thousands of orphan children in the care of the city on the annual Orphans' Automobile Day outing on Thursday, June 6, at College Point. E. A. Homer, Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, is negotiating with Government officials to obtain several of the army aviators at Mineola to fly over the grounds in full view of the children, the majority of whom have never seen a flying machine.

More cars are urgently needed, and offers for the day may be made to John J. Korbel, Secretary, 1,777 Broadway, Room 205. Telephone Columbus 8400.

Cheap Transport by Electric Tractor

The value of electric tractors for economical transportation was proved in a rather unusual manner recently in the removal of 200 carloads of supplies for the Quartermaster's Department in Chicago. The goods were stored in a warehouse and were to be carried 678 feet through the building, across a 1,000-foot tram, and distributed to their proper storage place in the main warehouse. The tram was wide enough for two electric industrial tractors and trailers to pass. As many as six trailers were often used in a train load.

Had the work been done by railroad the cost would have been about $800. By the electric tractors and trailers the cost was $177.64, saving the department over $600.

WATCH AUTO BRAKES TO AVOID TROUBLE

Needless Use Wears Them Out and Injures Tires—Simple Tests for Owner to Assure Perfect Condition.

One of the important things for the owner of an automobile to observe is the condition of his brakes, and there is a growing sentiment among traffic officials in various parts of the country that some system of regular brake inspection should be devised. An official of the Motor Truck Club of America says that 60 per cent. of the accidents caused by brake trouble could be averted if motorists would pay more attention to their brakes and have them inspected regularly. The fact that brake bands are out of sight is one reason assigned for their neglect.

"The average driver uses his brakes too much. This wears the brakes, racks the mechanism, and injures the tires—three good reasons why such treatment should be avoided," said William H. Stewart, Jr., President of the Stewart Automobile School, yesterday in discussing the proper use and care of brakes.

"Learn to stop by coasting to the point where you wish to stop," he added. "This may be learned with a little practice, and should always be done on a level road. If you find you are going a little too far, a light pressure on the pedal will do. This is far better than dashing up and then jamming on both brakes to make a spectacular stop. Besides wearing the brake lining and attachments, it racks the tires severely, sometimes making the wheels lock and the tires slide. If done frequently, the tread will be ruined and the fabric exposed.

"When coasting down hill use the brakes alternately. By changing from service brake to the emergency brake the first is allowed to cool, prolonging its life. The longer it lasts the less it costs for repairs. Some cars for mountainous touring have an attachment which injects water on the brakes every time they are applied. It consists of a water tank, which must be filled regularly, as it is separate from the cooling system, and a pump which is fastened to a brake rod and so throws water every time the brake is used.

"Changing from one brake to the other does not cool the drums on the wheels, as one brake operates on the outside and the other on the inside of each drum. So it is advisable to relieve the brakes as much as possible. This is accomplished by using the engine as a brake. On a gentle slope stay in high gear, with the engine throttled down, and do without the brakes. On a steeper grade use the second gear or the first if the car is a heavy one.

"When the emergency brake is used on a hill it must be applied with caution or the brake rods will be broken. If the brake is set and the hand removed it cannot give when the car passes over water bars, &c. At this time the rear axle moves backward, owing to the flattening of the springs, and if the brake rods are drawn tight the strain comes on them, stretching or breaking some part. While using the foot brake the foot automatically yields to the strain, but if the emergency brake is set it cannot yield.

"Where one brake rod passes through a tube carrying the other they may become frozen; that is, stuck together, if they are not properly lubricated. Be sure that the grease cups are turned down at least one turn a day. If they do become seized remove the lower part of the grease cup and force kerosene into the hole with an oil gun, working the brakes meanwhile to loosen them.

"Look over the equalizers, if they are provided, and adjust the rods to the same length to insure best action. If the brake lining is badly worn watch the workman while he replaces it, and perhaps the next time you can do it yourself.

"Test the brakes occasionally by speeding up and then applying. If the car keeps on or swerves to one side the brakes need adjusting. A better way to test them is to jack up both rear wheels and apply the emergency brake a few notches, enough to grip the wheels firmly. Try both wheels to see if they turn easily."

MOTOR DELIVERIES.

Auto Transportation Has Many Benefits, Says Controller Travis.

"The present state of unrest in the railway and transport world is acting as a wonderful stimulus to the increasing use of the highways," said State Controller Eugene M. Travis last week in discussing motor truck possibilities. "Whether our merchants need to continue depending entirely upon the railroads and their organized workers is a question often asked at this time. Fifteen years ago the answer would have been in the affirmative. While horse-driven vehicles were available, they were seldom used for journeys exceeding twenty miles.

"Conditions are now very different. The use of the commercial type of motor car has not only demonstrated its power of conveying a load at a rate much less than that expended for the former method, but, with the improved highways, this recently developed mode of delivery possesses many advantages. Their use is no longer uncertain, and a large percentage of the short-haul commerce is now carried by motor vehicles. Many branches of the Government have placed motor cars in successful service, while large commercial enterprises all over the country are continually overcoming their dependence on the railways by adopting motor transportation.

"Apart from town-to-town conveyance of goods in bulk, one of the principal advantages attending the use of motor vehicles is the extended delivery area which may be served. A well-known mineral water manufacturer stated recently that when he depended on horses his delivery was limited to seventeen miles, but since he adopted motor trucks he covers a fifty-mile radius and finds that the improved delivery service has considerably increased his business.

"Another example of the profitable use of motor delivery wagons for loads of five tons or more is furnished by the records of a large department house in New York City. Its trade before the advent of the motor truck was confined to a radius of fifteen to seventeen miles. Now it embraces a community as far distant again, and, while the volume of trade has grown, its total cost of delivery has not advanced to any degree in comparison with the trade.

"On an average each van runs 300 miles a week at a total cost of $51.65, or $2.20 per mile, which includes wages, gasoline, oil, garage, depreciation, cleaning, tires, and insurance. On the packing alone there has been a weekly saving of 70 cents a van, which charge, when reduced to a mileage basis, amounts to $1.82 per mile, leaving the total cost $2.11 per mile."

EXTRA LICENSE PLATES.

May Be Sent Back to Factory for More Overland Motor Runs.

Secretary of State Hugo, in a letter to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce on the subject of extra license plates for use on motor vehicles in drive-aways from the factory to a local agency, says:

"The motor vehicle law of this State does not authorize this office either to grant privileges for running cars through the State under their own power or to issue any transit tags. The proper way is to get out extra sets of dealers' plates to cover all shipments of cars, to be used on the cars while going through the State. After the cars are delivered at their destination the plates can be shipped back to the manufacturer and used for the next lot."

Under the reciprocity provisions of the different State laws these dealers' plates will be recognized and the strings of cars permitted to pass through. A fee of $5 is charged for each set of duplicate plates for one car. Fifty sets probably would suffice for all drive-aways made by one dealer in the year.

Owing to the lack of proper plates, some difficulties have occurred with local officials. Local dealers who are receiving their supplies in overland runs from the factories state that these troubles have now been satisfactorily adjusted.

Auto School Rates Increase.

Owing to the increased cost of material and labor, the West Side Y. M. C. A. announces that its automobile school rates will be increased on May 15 to $65.25. From the inception of the school fifteen years ago the cost of the course has been $55.25 for shop and road work. The students for the present year, based on the first nine months, are expected to number about 2,500.

AUTO TRADE NOTES.

The International Motor Company of New York City allowed its employes to subscribe for the third issue of Liberty bonds from $50 to $500 by paying 10 per cent. a month. The company agrees to cancel the last payment, thus giving the holder a $100 bond for $90.

One of the changes made in the Dort car this year is the substitution of a crank shaft weighing twelve pounds more than the old one.

Benjamin Briscoe, who left the Briscoe factory last year, is a Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy. He is in charge of the assembly and maintenance of the hydroplanes service for chasing submarines. He sailed for France several weeks ago.

A few days ago a train of Scripps-Booth cars arrived at the salesrooms of the Poertner Motor Car Company, Broadway and Fifty-seventh Street. The Scripps-Booth is now a General Motors product, and has undergone some important changes.

Twelve years with not a single fire loss to exceed $100 is the record of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company at Akron. The company's property includes over sixty factory buildings with a floor space of over 100 acres and it employs over 10,000 people.

Over fifteen years ago Hartford shock absorbers were placed on the market for motor car use. The introduction of the frictionally acting shock absorbers provided for passenger comfort and car safety, and at the present time over half a million automobiles are equipped with them.

Thomas E. Adams, distributer of Simplex cars, 755 Fifth Avenue, announced last week that production of Simplex cars had been stopped until after the war. It is rumored that the company has taken over the old General Vehicle Company plant in Long Island City so as to double its Hispano-Suiza airplane motor output for the Government.

Last week a voluntary increase of 10 per cent. in wages was announced by the Colt-Stratton Company, New York dealer in Dodge Brothers cars, for all mechanics on the hourly basis in the Sixty-fourth Street service station.

Compression

¶ In the keen zest of coasting down a mountain trail, the tremendous compression of the Standard "8" not only relieves your brakes but safely guards you against the perils of coasting in lesser cars. ¶ Perfect compression is the dividing line between maximum mileage on gas and lost mileage. Between low operating cost and high operating cost. ¶ Whether you require the restraining force of compression, or a full-lunged power-stroke, this 83 horsepower motor easily and instantly delivers what you want. The Standard "8" has greater power per pound of weight than any car of its class. It is at least the equal of any $3000 car on the market. ¶ One demonstration, and you'll want to live at the wheel. ¶ Made by Standard Steel Car Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION AND STOCK MARKETS

TRADE ACCEPTANCE POPULAR IN CANADA

Now Chief Credit Instrument for Carrying on Trade of the Country.

BANKER EXPLAINS ITS USE

George Wilson Calls Trade Paper One of Fundamentals of Dominion's Financial Structure.

While the use of the trade acceptance has, so far, been slow in development in the United States, it has been used in Canada for years, with the result that it has become the chief credit instrument for carrying on the internal trade of the country.

"The uses of trade paper and its intimate relations to business," says George Wilson, local agent of the Union Bank of Canada, in a discussion of the trade acceptance, "forms part of the elementary training of every junior bank clerk; in short, trade paper is one of the fundamentals and principal props of the Canadian financial structure.

"It is customary in Canada for all classes of borrowers to arrange their banking credits once a year to run contemporaneously with their own fiscal year—the credits being based upon a consideration of each year's balance sheet, which the bank almost invariably requires to be audited by a firm of chartered accountants. In addition to a direct line of credit—i. e., one-name paper—an indirect line against trade paper is also established. The direct line of credit is granted to furnish the borrower with the necessary working capital to purchase raw materials and seasonal stock in trade, the bank's policy being to stipulate for liquidation, or at least to require a reduction to a low ebb of the direct advances at least once a year. Failure on the part of the customer to do this usually indicates the need of additional permanent capital in the business."

Technically, the amount of the trade paper credit should correspond with the total approximating the proportion which the borrower's average terms of sale bears to the annual turnover, Mr. Wilson adds. As an example, if the annual turnover of business amounts to $240,000, and the average terms of sale are two months, the trade paper credit should not exceed $40,000, or one-sixth of the annual gross business. If the trade paper under discount exceeds $40,000 at any period the banker is warned that the borrower has either increased the turnover in the business or that he is granting unwarranted renewals to buyers. If the turnover is heavier at one period of the year than another, the trade paper credit should fluctuate to accord with the seasonal "peak loads" in the turnover.

"The manufacturer or wholesaler, fortnightly or monthly as the case may be," says Mr. Wilson, "lodges with his bankers unaccepted drafts upon the retailers representing the sales for the previous half month or month. Each bill is carefully scrutinized by the manager and then discounted and immediately forwarded for acceptance to its designation, either to a branch of the bank or to its regular correspondent. This procedure differs from the American system, under which drafts are not discounted until they are accepted—hence the term trade acceptance as distinguished from trade paper.

"Many large purchasers in Canada—notably the departmental stores and larger manufacturers which buy on a cash basis—will not give acceptances, as they prefer to settle their accounts by monthly or periodical remittances. In such cases it is not an uncommon practice for the wholesaler to lodge with his banker a draft drawn upon the department store, to which is attached a printed special form of assignment of account. This assignment form is attached to the draft which, however, is not forwarded for acceptance, but is simply held until maturity, or until the wholesaler retires it by check remitted to him by the departmental store. The special form of assignment referred to constitutes a preferential claim against the particular account assigned, and would be recognized as such by an assignee in case of failure."

Occasionally the Canadian bank, Mr. Wilson continues, will not care to discount a bill before its acceptance by the drawee, in which case the item is taken for collection and sent forward for "acceptance and return." When returned, properly accepted, the bill is then discounted. Whenever a wholesaler receives an order for goods from a buyer whose financial status is unknown and to whom he is loath to grant credit, a demand or sight draft is drawn accompanied by a bill of lading, which is surrendered upon payment of the draft. This procedure, the banker notes, stimulates business and the acquirement of new accounts which could not be secured under the open account system.

The careful scrutiny of each trade bill offered for discount gives the banker of the wholesaler an intimate knowledge of the financial position of his customer's customer to an extent which is impossible under the open account system. At the same time the use of trade paper enlarges the borrowing facilities of the wholesaler by at least 20 per cent., inasmuch as the paper is eligible for discount to the extent of 100 per cent., while the loan value of the open account does not average higher than 80 per cent. From the retailer's point of view, Mr. Wilson states, the financing of trade through the acceptance brings the merchant into closer touch with his banker with frequently an enlargement of the former's credit facilities. Also the retailer is aided in his business methods by the necessity of strict attention to his maturing obligations. The knowledge that the wholesaler's account in the form of a trade acceptance is maturing in a few days impels him to stimulate the collection of outstanding accounts on his books in order to make prompt provision for the paper when it matures.

ASK CAUTION IN BANK UNIONS

British Chambers of Commerce Adopt Resolution.

The subject of bank amalgamations, which has been almost engrossing the attention of the London financial world because of the number of very large operations of the kind recently, was keenly debated at the annual meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, according to The London Times. Palliser Martin of Bristol, moved a resolution declaring that the association viewed with apprehension the amalgamations of banks that had been effected or were proposed, and considered that these amalgamations might be injurious to commercial interests, and that, if such were permitted, permission should be granted only under the authority of some body specially constituted for the purpose.

Sir Edward Holden, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the London City and Midland Bank, one of the largest in Great Britain, which was recently amalgamated with Parr's, and has in its history effected many similar amalgamations, defended the principle, and declared that at the end of the war Great Britain would find it had profited much commercially by the process, as the big banks could mobilize the country's credit back of the commercial interests much more effectively than the little ones. An amended resolution, expressing merely the need of caution in amalgamation, offered by Sir Edward, was passed.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular, with Many Issues Showing Small Declines—Liberty 4s Decline.

Small reactions were brought about in the most active stocks yesterday morning by further selling on the part of traders who do not like to carry their commitments over Sunday, but the net changes at the close were, for the most part, unimportant. The closing of the loan campaign brought a general sigh of relief, for it has entailed much laborious work and interrupted Wall Street's principal business for a month that in past years has usually been productive of good returns. Professional traders are inclined to look for a further reaction from these prices if the news furnishes an excuse for selling, but it is pointed out in the same quarters that, except for the addition which the recent rise has made to the level of prices, securities have been selling too low to be seriously depressed.

The ending of the loan campaign may bring an increase in the amount of stock trading, but it is not likely to be material. One of the most obvious results of the drive for the loan was the quickening in the public appreciation of what the war means, and the developments now taking place on the western front are too uncertain in their effect on the future course of prices to encourage a wider speculative interest at this time. Most of the buying which has taken place in recent months has been outright for cash, or on such liberal margins as to indicate that the purchaser has taken into account the possibility of seriously disturbing news. In England they are talking not so much about the immediate outcome of the present offensive as of the critical period which they expect to continue for the rest of the Summer, or until American reinforcements can be supplied in large numbers.

An interesting movement in the bond department yesterday carried the price of Liberty 4s down to 96 on heavy offerings. It appeared from the selling that owners had waited until the last minute of the campaign to place the new issue before pressing their bonds of the second loan on the market. There has been more or less selling of the earlier issue to release funds for the third, and this has checked the rise each time the price approached 97.

LACKAWANNA EARNED $15,370,196 IN 1917

Profits on Coal Business Compensate for Decline Suffered by Railroad.

The report of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company for 1917 shows that like the other so-called "anthracite roads" its coal business showed enough increased profit last year to compensate in very large degree for the decline in the profits of railway operation. The Lackawanna in 1917 lost 7 per cent. of its 1916 railway operating income, or $1,174,528, but its coal department brought in $1,421,958 more than in 1916. Owing, however, to heavy increases in outside charges, the net income of the company declined $829,951. The net income of $15,370,196, however, was still 40.6 per cent. of the $42,277,000 of capital stock outstanding, as compared with earnings of 42.3 per cent. for 1916.

Of the railway operating revenues of $57,211,224, moreover, $17,130,291 came from the transportation of coal. This represents an increase of $2,653,046 in this item, or 18 per cent., in one year. The gross operating revenue increased $5,630,325 in the year, but operating expenses increased $5,735,514. The road's surplus, as of Dec. 31, 1917, was $52,858,012, or some $10,000,000 more than the outstanding capital stock.

President Truesdale remarks in the report that when the Lackawanna turned its properties over to the Government, "it did so with all its properties in first-class condition, and able to render the Government the maximum service of which its railways and rolling stock are capable."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Reserve Bank Gains in Gold.

The weekly statement of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York showed a gain of about $27,000,000 in gold reserves. Discounts and advances made by the bank decreased by $33,000,000, while the holdings of acceptances increased by $3,000,000. Deposits of member and nonmember banks fell off by $16,000,000 and Government deposits were reduced by $1,000,000. An interesting feature of the statement was an $11,000,000 increase in the "Foreign Governments" item appearing in the liabilities column. The whole or part of this increase represents deposits accepted by the Reserve Bank on behalf of the Argentine Government under an arrangement by which American merchants having payments to make in Argentina may deposit funds here instead of buying exchange.

Money in Circulation.

According to figures which came from Washington yesterday, the money in circulation in the United States on May 1 this year amounted to $50.37 per capita. One year ago it was $45.61 per capita, and one month ago $49.70 per capita. The total of money in circulation May 1, 1918, was $5,318,546,717, and the per capita average is figured on an estimated population of 105,581,000. One year ago the total was $4,736,841,962, and the per capita average was figured on a population of 103,859,000.

Decrease in Surplus Bank Reserves.

Yesterday's bank statement showed a decrease of $34,506,000 in surplus reserves, bringing the total excess reserves down to $37,199,000, the lowest figure since March 16, when $34,315,000 was reported. For the week loans decreased by $14,685,000, while general deposits increased by nearly $55,700,000. The decrease in surplus reserves was due largely to shifting credits incident to the first-of-the-month payments and also to the fact that Government deposits against which no reserves are carried decreased by about $64,000,000, the total of such deposits now aggregating $294,696,000.

Earnings and War Taxes.

The optimism over steel company earnings, which was in evidence in the stock market last week, had its foundation as firmly fixed in future prospects as in the results of major concerns in the March quarter. With capacity business in sight for a long time to come, unless the war should end suddenly, followers of the stocks are able to furnish cheerful estimates of income in the remainder of the year. It is quite likely that the Government officials who have taxation matters constantly at the top of their minds are also devoting some study to steel company earnings. With the financial burden of the war growing steadily, it would not be surprising if talk sprang up by and by about the possibility of increasing excess profits taxes in certain directions. This factor is not ignored in the calculations of shrewd speculators in shares of corporations whose profits are unusually large.

Canadian Car and Foundry Prospects.

With most of its facilities devoted to its regular line of work, the Canadian Car and Foundry Company is making considerable more money than in the period when large war orders brought in a lot of disappointment with a big turnover of business. It is expected that the Directors will decide at the July meeting to declare a dividend on the preferred stock.

Crude Oil Stocks.

Stocks of crude petroleum in the fields east of the Rocky Mountains decreased 559,188 barrels in March, and at the same time the movement of oil from the wells was 3,581,681 barrels more than in February. These figures, reported by the United States Geological Survey, indicate the extent to which consumption is keeping ahead of production. The movement from the fields totaled 21,187,579 barrels in March, compared with 19,605,056 in the same month last year. Petroleum in stock at the end of March amounted to 116,992,822 barrels, against 129,439,414 barrels a year before.

Tobacco Scrip Dividends.

Since the American Tobacco Company decided to conserve cash for working capital by paying common stock dividends in scrip, a number of concerns in the same line have taken similar measures. The Porto Rican-American Tobacco Company is the latest to order its quarterly distribution of 3 per cent. in scrip, payable June 6 to stock of record May 15.

Looking Far Ahead.

One of the unfavorable factors for 1917, from the viewpoint of earnings, of the big shipping companies, is the basis on which the Shipping Board is reported to be allocating tonnage and calculating the operating fees it will pay for running ships for Government account. The companies, they say, are being called on to extend their organizations to take care of their entire share of all ships now under construction, the board having extended its program so far ahead that ships whose keels are not yet laid are already allotted to some firm to operate, and charged to it. With the overhead of an organization built to handle twenty-five ships, which is actually handling ten, or five—in some cases even less in proportion—it is easy to see why 1 per cent. on the gross freight list looks small even to the biggest corporations.

GENERAL ELECTRIC HAS BIG GAINS

Annual Statement Shows 1917 to be Best Year in History of Company.

HAS LARGE WAR CONTRACTS

Assets Increase $54,500,000 and Liabilities Only $2,150,000—Enlarge Plant.

The General Electric Company's relation to the task of building a fleet of American ships to carry our army to France and to keep it supplied makes the annual report of especial interest. The company has undertaken large contracts for turbine engines, and its orders for electrical equipment for the merchant and naval ships helped to swell last year's business to the largest in the history of the organization.

In order to increase its working funds the company put out $15,000,000 6 per cent. notes, maturing July 2, 1920, in one issue, and $10,000,000 notes of 6 per cent. interest, maturing Dec. 1, 1919, in another block. Other smaller issues previously made brought the total of notes payable up to $27,757,721. The report indicates that these borrowings were made with an eye to the future, as the cash on hand, amounting to $21,190,673 at the end of the year, shows that with the proceeds of the notes and the inflow of earnings on delivered goods the management entered the 1918 year with a substantial amount of ready money in the bank. The cash reported on Dec. 31, 1917, was $9,000,000 more than at the close of the preceding year.

In working capital the General Electric Company entered 1918 in a remarkably strong position. The current assets on Dec. 31 last amounted to $134,549,250, an increase of nearly $54,500,000 over the total a year before, while current liabilities of $18,150,025 were only $2,150,000 higher than at the end of 1916. The net working capital, then, was $136,397,225, compared with $83,190,121 on Dec. 31, 1916, an increase of 63 per cent.

In these days of high cost of raw materials, a corporation with big advance orders for finished goods must be strongly intrenched in inventories to keep its operations up to the established schedule, and the General Electric was able to utilize part of the proceeds of its note issues and its incoming cash from deliveries to pile up the largest inventory in its history. The management reported that at the end of 1918 the value of merchandise in the factories, at district offices, and in transit was $81,151,310, an increase of more than $30,800,000, or about 60 per cent. over the total reported twelve months before.

In order to handle the expanding Government business and allied demands the company spent in 1918 $22,320,866 for land, buildings, tools, machinery, &c. The size of this outlay is emphasized particularly when contrasted with the similar expenditures of other years. At the end of its first full year of operation, 1893, the book value of the manufacturing plants and equipment was $3,958,528. During the twenty-four years to Dec. 31, 1916, additional sums were expended to an aggregate of $88,824,900. During the single year of 1917 the outlay for new facilities was, therefore, more than 25 per cent. of the total spent in the preceding twenty-four years. The company has invested in its plants and facilities $114,914,332 since its formation, and of this $75,975,922 has either been written off from earnings or included in the general plant reserve. The general plant reserve, as set forth in the balance sheet, amounted on Dec. 31 last to $38,938,410, showing that of the complete cost of the property not far from one-half had been offset through the quarter century by drafts upon earnings.

The reserve cited applies only to the plant investment. In reference to another large reserve item in the balance sheet, C. A. Coffin, Chairman, in his statement to stockholders, says:

"For a number of years it has been the practice of the Directors to provide against contingencies by setting aside substantial reserves. An examination of these reserves makes it clear that a proportion of them is unlikely to be used for the purpose originally intended, and such proportion, estimated at about $12,000,000, has therefore been set apart and is shown as a general reserve against all assets of the company, other than its plant investment.

"In past years it has been the company's practice to state its patent account at $1, but a record has been maintained showing the serial number, date, and cost of these patents. That proportion of the cost which represents the unexpired life of the patents, namely, $3,067,444, is carried as an investment on the company's books, being offset by a reserve of like amount, and both accounts are now shown in full in the balance sheet."

A significant item in Mr. Coffin's statement is what stockholders may expect in the future. In the last eleven years the company has earned an average annual balance for dividends equal to more than $14 per share, from which it might be reasoned that, without some disastrous business development, the 8 per cent. dividend could be paid consistently. Recognition of the fact that the surplus of earnings invested in the business since 1898 had not been adequately capitalized is made in the notice that stock dividends will be paid semi-annually for some time to come. The accumulated surplus is valued at nearly $50,000,000. The company has $101,512,500 stock outstanding of its $125,000,000 authorized issue.

A 2 per cent. dividend in stock was declared last November. The Directors now propose, rather than to increase the rate of cash dividends, to pay a dividend of 2 per cent. in stock twice a year, payable in January and July.

THE COTTON MARKET

Opening Steady, with Prices Up from 8 to 25 Points.

Profit-taking for the week-end by the short interests held up the local cotton market yesterday. There was no other perceptible supporting element, but there was enough of it, with the comparatively small amount of offerings, to bring the market back within measurable distance of Friday's closing prices after it had sold down, earlier in the morning, lower than it has been since early last Fall, at the beginning of the new season. The close was steady, varying from 5 points net higher to 11 lower.

The opening was steady, with prices up from 8 to 25 points, apparently because of covering in apprehension of a reaction following two successive big declines. It soon became apparent, however, that there was no great demand, and some traders who had made tentative bids changed their minds and sold some more cotton instead. The weather map was interpreted as favorable, but otherwise there was no particular news, and the selling simply represented a continuance of the market trend, which has now been fairly constant for four weeks. It had forced prices down nearly 50 points before the covering became active enough to cause a return swing. At the bottom July was down to 24.35 cents and October sold at 23.75 cents.

The feature of the spot markets was a considerable increase of business at New Orleans, where 3,487 bales changed hands at 28.50 cents. At Little Rock sales of 1,463 bales were reported, but otherwise business in spot markets continued very light.

BIG INCREASE IN EXPORTS.

Value of Manufactured Goods Quadrupled from 1914 to 1917.

American merchandise is forming a steadily increasing share of the imports of all the principal nations of the world, save Germany and her allies, according to some figures on world trade compiled by the National City Bank. America's share of the imports of South America in 1917 was almost three times as great as in 1913, and four times as great as in 1910. The increase is very largely in manufactured goods, which formerly were supplied by the present European belligerents, and neutral countries, to supply their needs, have had to turn to the United States.

Manufactured goods normally form 75 per cent. of the imports of South America, Africa, and Oceania, and of this 75 per cent. American goods form a rapidly expanding share. In 1914 the total value of domestic manufactures exported from the United States was less than $1,000,000,000; in 1917, despite the fact that this country was at war and beginning to impose restrictions on its own trade, it was over $4,000,000,000. In the year before the war the United States supplied about 13 per cent. of Europe's imports, 16 per cent. of South America's, 7 per cent. of those of Asia, 5 per cent. of those of Africa, and 12 per cent. of those of Oceania. In 1917 the United States supplied more than 30 per cent. of Europe's imports, 20 per cent. of those of Asia and Oceania, 10 per cent. of those of Africa, and nearly 50 per cent. of those of South America.

UNITED STATES GOVT. BONDS

Inasmuch as most of the trading in the older issues of United States Government bonds is done over the counter, and not on the Stock Exchange, THE TIMES gives the following quotations, obtained from bond dealers:

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Fractional net declines were registered at the close of the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. The volume of business was limited. In general the tone of the market was steady but lacking in interest or incentive. This was probably due to the fact that the financial district was concerned with but one objective, namely, to see to it that the Liberty Loan was rushed to a successful conclusion. Opening fairly steady, with a tendency upward, the list reacted fractionally, and, in a subsequent rally, recovered partly and held steady to the close, the final quotations showing a slight improvement.

VARIED PHASES OF THE COUNTRY'S BUSINESS LIFE

The Merchant's Point of View

All over the country during the week just past, so much of the energy of men of business was given over to the Liberty Loan movement that trade in general was more or less dislocated. This applies especially to the primary markets of production and distribution. Retail trade was, however, satisfactory in the main, though in this there has been visible a shrinkage in the quantity or volume of buying which is offset by the increase in prices, making the total of sales in dollars equal to, if not larger, than those of the corresponding period a year ago.

In the larger channels, the slackening of business was rather welcome than otherwise, because it gives opportunity for a readjustment to the new conditions which official regulations are creating. The system of licensing and priorities of both raw materials and finished products in domestic as well as foreign trade is being gradually tested out. It calls for caution in commitments because of the uncertainties of both production and delivery. Then, too, there is the matter of the cost of raw materials, the prices of which are getting fixed under the direction of the War Industries Board. Following the cases of a number of the metals, wool, rubber, and hides have been taken in hand by the Government. Cotton and its fabrics and leather would seem, logically, to come in for similar regulation. Until the complete scope of the price-fixing is apparent, there is bound to be uncertainty which will be reflected in business transactions.

No Radical Price Cutting.

Those who looked for radical price cutting have been disappointed. In every instance the conclusions reached have been in the nature of a compromise. Before anything was done, representatives of the various callings affected were consulted and their assent obtained. To some who tried to follow the proceedings it seemed as though there was undue anxiety on the part of the Government to assure large profits to the producers, lest otherwise production of necessary articles would be lessened. The scale of prices finally determined on will certainly assure to producers very much larger profits than they were accustomed to make under normal conditions, though not as large as they would be enabled to make if they had been allowed to go on unchecked. What made these producers willing to scale them down was the knowledge on their part that there was danger to them in a runaway market, and that there was a measure of safety in their being able to shelter themselves behind the bulwark of officially fixed prices. Not all are agreed that it is necessary to have very high prices in order to stimulate production. With enlarged sales of so many things in demand, a fair profit would seem to be sufficient stimulus. This is applicable to things that grow from the ground as well as to manufactured articles. In the case of hides, which are so thoroughly under the control of the packers, high prices do not stimulate production. They are merely a byproduct and depend on the number of cattle killed for their meat. Generosity in this quarter will be reflected in the high prices of shoes to the consumer.

What is a Fair Profit?

How much of a profit is fair, "under war-time conditions," was one of the topics which featured the address of ALBERT F. BEMIS, President of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, at the business meeting of that body in this city the other day. He thought a return of 10 per cent. on capital would be totally inadequate, although he did not indicate how large a percentage would be adequate. Deducting taxes and reservations for depreciation and normal dividends, he was of the opinion that the remainder of the profits made by cotton mills "will be none too much to provide a portion of the additional working capital required by the greatly increased values of the merchandise, which must necessarily be carried and as protection against the risk of decline from such high value." As against this statement it appears that mills have been declaring not only "normal" dividends, but ones much in excess of normal, including stock dividends. The increased values of goods, against which, it is said, protection must be had, have been created by the mills for their own profit and at the expense of the general public. With cotton bought at from 20 to 25 cents a pound, fabrics in the gray, made on automatic looms at small labor cost, have been pushed up to 87 cents a pound, showing a disparity greater than ever before in the industry. Again, the assertion has been, and still is, common that the mills are not able to meet the demands on them and have no accumulations of goods on hand. Why, therefore, should there be need for a large surplus to guard against the "risk of decline" of goods in the possession of the mills?

Wish to Improve Statistics.

Trade organizations and individual importers and exporters are invited by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to make suggestions for improvements in the classification of the statistics of foreign trade as given in the monthly statements. The purpose is to make the figures of more value for trade promotion, though the immediate object is to furnish more accurate information for the Tariff and Food Commissions, and the War Trade, Shipping and other boards. There are, naturally, some limitations to the information that can be had. Export statistics are based on the declarations filed by shippers with the customs collectors. Statistics of imports follow the tariff classifications. What has helped somewhat in the value of the statistics has been the adoption of standard forms of declarations and entries. But there remain a number of exasperating items in the statistics as printed in the monthly summaries. The catch-all expressions, such as "all other," or "N. E. S."—not elsewhere specified—or "other countries," occur too frequently. In imports, for example, under articles of domestic make returned there appears specifically, in the summary for February, "Automobiles, $316,164; all other, $16,549,007." In the chemical, drug, and dye imports, as well as in many others, are similar lumpings. So, too, in the exports of manufactures of different kinds. While too much detail is not desirable, it ought to be possible to show wherefrom or whence 25 per cent. or more of imports or exports come or go respectively.

Germany's Treaty Advantages

Most of the speculation concerning the recovery by Germany of her former foreign trade when the war shall have ended has failed to take into account certain factors. Among these are the changes of conditions which the war itself has caused. It has been brought out, for instance, that, by selling acceptances to British banks and bankers, the Germans were able to finance their foreign trade by the aid of English capital. This process is hardly likely to receive sanction in the future, and the lack of available German capital will prove a great handicap to any attempted revival of foreign trade. Another thing to consider is that the preferential commercial treaties, from which Germany was so much a gainer, are now a thing of the past, never to be renewed. These treaties, and especially the ones with contiguous countries, like France and Russia, were one-sided, with all the advantages in favor of Germany. The trade obtained under them was the cornerstone of German foreign commerce and came very near to being a monopoly. The large profits derived therefrom enabled German manufacturers to sell their wares in other foreign countries, where they met competition, at very small margins of profit, or at none at all, for a while, until they had bested their competitors. All of this system, including the elaborate trade and financial organization which was part of it, has been broken up and can never again be reinstated. At the very best, and after a long time, all the Germans can hope for is a fair field and no favor, and this is not a condition which will suit them.

Cotton Trend Is Downward.

Some idea of the tension in the cotton situation can be gained by a study of the violent gyrations in the quotations recently. It does not appear that much of the actual article has been changing hands. Nor, for that matter, is it likely that much was sold when the price went soaring some time ago. But the check to exports seems to assure that the carry over will be much larger than was anticipated, and there is a reasonable assurance that a big crop is aimed at for the present season. There has been, if anything, an increase in the acreage planted, and more and better fertilizer is being used. The weather and the boll weevil are the uncertain elements. From the growing districts come reports that some "distress" cotton has shown up and has been sold, though the quantity was not large. The quotations down South vary decidedly at the different centres, but it seems clear that the upward movement has been decidedly checked. So far as the goods market is concerned, that has appeared to go its way regardless of the raw material quotations. Government needs are still somewhat dominant, and the mills show a disposition to go slow on civilian orders. Most of the week's trading in gray goods was done by second hands at lower than mill quotations. Colored and other finished goods remain at high levels.

Government Controls Wool.

At the present time the Government is in full control of the wool situation in this country. The prices to all have been fixed on the scoured basis at Boston on July 30, 1917. They are applicable to the domestic clip as well as to the imported, and the Government has also taken over the 7,844 bales of Australian wool which were to have been offered at auction. The domestic clip is to be marketed by dealers on a commission basis of 3 per cent. on the graded and scoured and 3½ per cent. on the ungraded and uncoured. This is all the profit that can be added to what the growers receive. The Government will take what wool it needs, and the remainder will be prorated to the mills for their use in supplying the civilian trade. This step will fix the price of wool for the year and prevent any increases. The trade, as far as heard from, has expressed satisfaction at the outcome as tending to stabilize things. An ample supply seems assured for all purposes. In the hands of dealers and manufacturers on Mar. 31 was the equivalent of 427,000,000 pounds of wool in the grease. The new clip will add about 300,000,000 pounds to this supply, or more than sufficient to tide over the country to the end of the year if not a single pound were imported. Dealings in woolen goods have been lately in abeyance, pending the negotiations for the control of the raw material. Reports from the mills for April show a reduction in the loomage in operation on war orders. Whether there are to be any formal openings for the next lightweight season seems as yet undetermined.

WILL MILLS SELL THROUGH BROKERS?

Possibility of Radical Change of Method by Southern Cotton Manufacturers.

"Financially, the South is better off than at any time in its history," said C. S. Webb of Greenville, S. C., at a smoker given by the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers and the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association at the Hotel Biltmore on Wednesday night. "There is work for everybody at good wages. The planters and manufacturers are receiving good prices for their products, and we are building a trade we will hold after the war."

The foregoing describes a situation which presages a radical change in the selling methods of many Southern mills in the course of the next year or two, though Mr. Webb is in no way responsible for this assertion. For the first time in their history, many of these mills are said to have enough money to finance themselves, and thus become independent of the Northern business interests, particularly in this city, that have played so large a part in the past in the activities of these mills. Notable among the interests spoken of are the dry goods commission houses, many of which have not only sold the output of these mills and billed the goods, but have guaranteed the reliability of the buyers and supplied funds, directly or indirectly, when they were needed. In return for this service the commission houses have received payment at the rate of 2½ to 4 per cent. of the value of the goods sold, this commission in most instances ranging from 3 to 4 per cent.

For some time, according to market comment, and especially so since the era of high prices for cotton goods began, not a few of the Southern mills have become restive under this arrangement. The thing that they needed most in the past—financing—they can now take care of on their own account. The result is that the attention of executives of these mills has been turned in the direction of marketing their products at a smaller cost, particularly unfinished cottons that are bought almost entirely by the converters, printers and bleachers.

In this search for a smaller selling cost, two things have been suggested—the establishment of direct co-operative selling agencies and direct selling through the medium of brokers. Of the two plans the latter is said to be much the more feasible and, in the long run, the safer and cheaper; safer because in direct selling through financially responsible brokers the latter would guarantee the accounts, and cheaper because the brokers of this type already have active and well trained organizations in existence.

Other arguments cited in favor of selling direct through capable and responsible brokers include the contention that they are constantly posted on every phase of the goods situation. They know all sources of demand, and they are familiar with all sources of supply. They know where certain goods are at a given time, and they know where they are apt to be at some other period. Against this is the knowledge of the commission houses about the products of their "own" mills only and their "own" customers. This, it is asserted, is the smallest factor in the successful selling of gray fabrics. In addition, the commission houses are said rarely, if ever, to know of actual supplies of goods other than those sold by them, without calling on the brokers for that information. Many of them use the latter for that purpose.

Possibly seeing the handwriting on the wall, certain commission houses have for some time been trying to eliminate the broker by selling to the converter or other buyer at less than full market prices. By selling goods in this way at reductions of an eighth to a quarter of a cent a yard below the market, the commission houses naturally lessen their own income on the sales, but this is offset by the brokerage fee they might otherwise have to pay, and in the long run they at least break even. But the question then comes up as to who recompenses the mills for the loss they suffer through the underselling that eliminates the broker. It is pointed out that all commission houses do not use this means of cutting out the broker at the expense of their mills, but many of them do in spite of the large increases in their earnings as a result of the high prices ruling for the past year or so. Houses that do not dodge the brokers are said to be those which still realize that the latter are valuable assistants and no small aid in the growth of many commission concerns.

By advocates of the direct-broker method of selling, the savings it would effect for the mills is given considerable stress. It is pointed out, for instance, that while the rate of the commission houses ranges from 2½ to 4 per cent. of sales, mostly 3 to 4 per cent., the brokerage charge is but ½ of 1 per cent. to 1 per cent. The difference is said to represent a tidy dividend for the stockholders of a mill of average size. In an illustration given yesterday, it was pointed out that if a mill produced $3,500,000 worth of goods in a year, the saving of at least 2 per cent. that could be effected by the direct-broker method of selling would amount annually to $70,000. This, it was further asserted, would be sufficient to pay a nice extra dividend on the capitalization of a mill large enough to make that quantity of merchandise.

The assertion was further made that the New England mills went through the ammo situation. At one time, it was said yesterday, they were entirely "in the hands" of the commission houses because of their financial needs, but as these needs grew less and less a different method of selling was called into play. Now most of these mills are constantly in touch with the brokers, who are said to sell the bulk of their goods. As their prosperity increases the Southern mills are expected to go through the same process of selling evolution, until the time arrives when only such mills as are controlled by members of commission houses will market their gray products solely through those houses.

Provided the Southern mills take the action they are expected to—and there are said to be several definite reasons for this expectation—one question remaining is that of billing the goods. It is understood that some brokers have already "taken the bull by the horns," and are selling direct for certain mills. In most cases, it is said, the billing is done direct to the customer by the mills, while in others the brokers are receiving a small extra percentage fee for guaranteeing the accounts. In relation to this point, it is asserted strongly that only financially responsible brokers can do this, but it is also asserted that there are enough of them in business at the present time to fill the needs of the Southern mills for a long time to come.

RAW SILK MARKETS.

Considerable Activity Is Shown in Those of the Far East.

The Japanese raw silk market continues highly excited, and prices are advancing rapidly. Three reasons are given for this: An extremely heavy demand for home consumption, short coverings, and large buying from both this country and Europe. The visible stock at Yokohama is now reported to be very low and poorly assorted. Certain grades, according to cables received by A. P. Villa & Brothers, Inc., of this city, are almost unobtainable. Among these are double extras, extras and Kansai No. 1, and it is predicted that prices on them will go much higher. Reelers who will soon have to buy cocoons for the new crop are, therefore, reluctant to offer the new season's silk at a fixed price, and at present will sell only on an "at value" basis.

The Canton market is quite active for the first, second, and third crop silks, for May, June, and July shipment, and large transactions are recorded, mostly for American account. Very few good lots of the old crop are left. So far sellers at Canton do not appear to have been affected by the rise at Yokohama. At Shanghai steam filatures have been the most active of late, with tsatlees and tussahs rather quiet. The activity in the steam filatures is attributed to the fact that the prices asked for them now compare favorably with those quoted on the Japanese varieties.

The Milan market furnishes little news of interest. Last reports say that it is quiet there, but that prices remain firm. Some buyers have withdrawn from the local market, pending price developments at Yokohama. However, there is still quite a little buying of spot deliveries going on. A general renewal of demand is looked for, in view of the fine outlook for the future of the silk manufacturers.

NEW MILLINERY TOUCHES.

Charlotte Corday Hats and Smocking Among the Features.

Charlotte Corday hats are again making their appearance here, according to the latest bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America. These hats, which were very much in favor some years ago, are especially adaptable for wear by girls of 15 to 18 years of age. The bulletin goes on:

"These hats are made of accordion-pleated organdie, chiffon, or Georgette, in medium-sized mushrooms, with frills of fine Valenciennes facing. They have soft edges and crowns on the tam order. Trimmings consist of hand-embroidered flowers and wide satin ribbon bows either laid flat on the brim or against the side crown. These hats will, no doubt, be favored for real Summer wear in all pastel shades, as well as in navy blue, and will be worn with soft Summer frocks."

The bulletin also says that one of the latest features of fancy stitching for hats is smocking, which is used on shapes of organdie, Georgette, linen, ribbon, or satin. This gives a soft, useful effect and is used on the upper brim, or on the side crown. Sometimes ribbons are smocked and used as trimmings. It is probable that this stitching will be much used for fabric hats, as they need the soft touch that smocking lends.

DULLNESS IN GRAY GOODS.

Drive for the Liberty Loan Banished Trading Yesterday.

The 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Liberty Loan "drive" in the downtown dry goods district yesterday, aided by the presence of United States marines, the famous "Blue Devils" of France, and Pershing's veterans now in this country on furlough, relegated interest in gray goods in the local market yesterday to a decidedly second-rate position. The result was the disposal of very few goods.

First hands were still more or less firm in their views as to cloth values, based on recent revisions, but in second hands there seemed to be a slightly stiffer feeling. For instance, no 38½-inch 64-60s for May-June delivery could be had from the latter yesterday at less than 17½ cents, though this price had not been paid up to noon. About the only other thing of interest in the print-cloth end of the market was the selling from second hands of June lots of 39-inch 72-70s at 21 cents. The rest of the market showed even less that was worth recording.

Two-Material Dresses Liked.

The introduction early in the season of two-material combinations in women's dresses has proved to be one of the most popular style features of the year. Though originally introduced to save wool by using silk for certain parts of a garment, it has since become so general as to include combinations of different silk weaves, or cotton and silk, used together for no other purpose than that the contrast is liked. The demand for dresses of such combinations is said to be enormous.

Swedes Restrict Trade in Arms.

Arms and ammunition cannot be sold in Sweden, except when special permission is granted, nor may they be imported, except under the same conditions. A royal decree to this effect has recently been issued, according to a report from American Minister Ira N. Morris in Stockholm.

HOW HE TRIES TO ENCOURAGE SALES

A System of Bonuses to Department Managers Worked Out by One Merchant.

"In order to obtain rapid turnovers and get the full use of our capital," said the proprietor of a prosperous up-State department store who had come to New York on a trip with two of his buyers, "we pay special bonuses to department managers, thereby encouraging sales, and we also endeavor to encourage as large a gross profit as possible, with certain stipulations with regard to depreciation, having the effect of preventing old stock accumulating and thus becoming 'stickers' of the worst type.

"Now, of course, there's nothing new in paying bonuses, or in encouraging gross profits to the fullest extent, but hints of a useful kind may be gathered from the way we go about it, for it seems to me a little different, as it is my own method.

"We make it a rule only to pay bonuses out of the surplus above 2.25 per cent. on the net sales; that is, if the surplus is sufficient to pay the bonus. And stock depreciation is computed in the following manner: When goods have been in stock for fully six months, or through two semi-annual stock takings, we write off 5 per cent.; during a year, or through three stock takings, 10 per cent.; for four stock takings, 20 per cent.; for five, 33.3 per cent.; during six, 50 per cent., and during seven stock takings, 90 per cent.

"We pay department managers 4 per cent. out of the net profit each half year, dividing the money among them in proportion to their salaries, payment, however, being made only with the stipulation that it come out of a surplus profit amounting to 5 per cent. or more of the company's current paid-up capital. I can say that, after having been in operation for three years, the department heads' bonus has amounted to 25 per cent. of their salaries and the rest of the staff have received about 12 per cent. of their salaries in this manner. As we pay very good salaries to start with, the staff realize that when the company does a large amount of business, they, too, prosper, taking a sporting chance with the company on the extra amount in dull seasons.

"On regular net sales," continued the store proprietor, "we pay one-fourth of 1 per cent. and on volume one-eighth of 1 per cent., according to the rate of turnover. Now, some departments are obliged to turn their stock three times, others seven, and one or two are expected to turn it from eight to eleven times, according to the kind of goods they sell. If they do not turn their stock the requisite number of times, they do not receive the one-eighth of 1 per cent. added to their sales commission, but the number of times they must turn their stock is predetermined by past experience. And I might say right here that it is harder for one of my buyers, unless there is a remarkably good 'seasonal' excuse, to hold his job after having made a certain turnover for several periods and then to fall down away below his standard, than it is for a new and virtually untried man not to come up at first to the pace set for him by his predecessor.

"If the stock of any department head is turned over a full time more than the predetermined number of times, however, we add one-fifth more, while if it is not turned over a sufficient number of times we deduct one-fifth—that is, for a few times, or until he shows he is too slow for our establishment. On gross profits in excess of the expense of making sales, with due allowance for the ordinary depreciation, we pay 2 per cent. For every increase in the item representing depreciation on stock amounting to 1 per cent., or any portion of 1 per cent. above 5 per cent., we add one-half of 1 per cent. of the sum called for on gross profits in excess of the cost of making sales; while for corresponding decreases we deduct accordingly, finding the figure through multiplying 'bad stock' by 100 and dividing by 'good stock,' which gives us the percentage.

"Anyhow, the thing works like a charm, and during those three years—three hard ones at that—we have been able steadily to encourage sales, increase profits, avoid serious losses on any item and keep down expenses, to say nothing of having our staff constantly working for big turnovers."

Madagascar Graphite Situation.

The production of graphite in Madagascar during 1917 was 35,000 tons, as compared with 25,480 in 1916. The exports, however, only increased about 1,000 tons, and it is said that on Jan. 1, 1918, there were 10,000 tons of graphite in stock in Madagascar. Thus, according to Consul J. G. Carter, stationed in Tananarivo, the local market has experienced during the last few months a very considerable slump in prices. First quality material is said to have dropped from $144.77 a ton to $96.50. And, because of the general situation in the graphite market, it seems that very few offers of any sort are being made.

THE BRONX EXPOSITION.

To Open May 30 and to Remain Open Five Months Each Year.

In order to assist the manufacturers of the United States in capturing their just share of the export business of the world, and to provide them with a market place where they may meet the foreign buyers who are coming to this city from all over the globe, the New York International Exposition of Science, Arts, and Industries is now being constructed here. It will be opened to the public, beginning on May 30 and continuing until Nov. 1. The exposition is to be permanent, along the lines of Shepherd's Bush, London, and the annual trade conference at Lyons, France. Each year it will be open during the period indicated.

The exposition grounds cover twenty-seven acres, and are situated at the East 177th Street subway station, West Farms. This is one of the most accessible points in Greater New York, and is said to have the best transportation facilities ever possessed by an international exposition in this or any other country. The exhibit buildings now under construction include a Palace of American Achievements, Palace of Fine Arts, Temples of Liberal Arts and Varied Industries, and others housing features found at previous expositions of this character.

That Canada will have a representative exhibit now seems assured. The Directors of the exposition have received notice that exhibits are being assembled by the Provinces of Quebec, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Ontario. It is expected that for the second year of the exposition Canada will have an entire building, under the supervision of the Dominion Government, in which to house the various Canadian products that will be placed on show.

DEALINGS IN BROAD SILKS.

A Good Business Passing, with Bright Promise for Fall.

Advances in raw silk which have taken place during the last week have tended very materially to increase the demand for broad silks, according to reports from the local trade. Buyers have now become more convinced than ever that higher prices are inevitable, and it seems that all who can are covering their requirements as far into the future as conditions will permit.

Sellers, also, some of whom have been slow to advance prices, have now come to see that further advances must be made, no matter what the effect on volume of sales. But the present attitude of buyers, which seems to be that silks must be obtained in fair quantities for both Summer and Fall, is thought to indicate that volume is not likely to suffer very much, even though prices are jacked up to somewhat higher levels.

Prospects for Fall business are said to be very encouraging. There are many indications that heavy silk weaves will be wanted in large quantities as substitutes for a number of woolen and worsted fabrics, which have become so scarce in the local market. This, and a heavy demand for satins, together with at least a normal business in all other weaves, is thought to presage a Fall turnover surpassed by no previous Fall season on record.

Buying for Summer requirements is still going on, and some very substantial business is being done. Rough silks for sports wear and other novelty weaves are popular, and foulards, taffetas, and satins, particularly wash satins, continue in demand. Of the sheerer silks, waist manufacturers are reported to be taking liberal quantities of Georgette and crêpe de chine.

Floor Covering Order Blanks.

Orders for various kinds of floor coverings are always accepted more or less conditionally as regards matters beyond the control of the manufacturers, but for the Fall season more than one mill's order blanks bear conditions that go somewhat further than formerly was the case. In the old days the conditions of acceptance had to do with fires, strikes, &c., but for the new season there have been added phrases covering the delivery risks growing out of possible freight embargoes of one kind or another, as well as action by the United States Government relative to the entire or partial closing of the plants.

Batiste in Underwear.

Hand embroidered chemises of white batiste are said to be very popular just now. Though every collection of fancy undergarments for women includes a large array of chiffon and crepe de chine models, more buyers are said to be favoring batiste every day. Nightgowns of batiste are also very much in demand, and on these garments Valenciennes lace is being used extensively for trimming. Very soft pink satin is being employed a great deal in camisoles of the better sort, and many of these models are trimmed with bands of georgette crepe and filet lace.

To Dye Furs in Switzerland.

An establishment for the treatment of furs is shortly to be put into operation in Switzerland, according to Consul L. W. Haskell of Geneva. This is partly due to the stagnancy of the Leipsic fur market. It is said that natural dyes will be used in the Swiss plant, as it is claimed that they are better than aniline dyes.

TO RAISE MORE WHEAT.

Inducements Offered by Brazil to Increase Production.

Under the provisions of a law recently enacted, the Federal Government of Brazil will grant bounties, in the form of agricultural machinery, to farmers, companies, and co-operative societies for the cultivation of wheat during this year and next.

According to Vice Consul R. P. Momsen, who is at Rio de Janeiro, the preamble of the law calls attention to the fact that Brazil is now importing wheat and wheat flour in very large quantities from other countries, whereas as far back as the beginning of the eighteenth century wheat was grown on a comparatively large scale in several of the leading Brazilian States. It further calls attention to the fact that the Brazilian Government has made provision for the acquisition of wheat, for planting, of types suitable for the climate of the country, especially those which withstand the tropical heat, the droughts, and plant diseases common to Brazil.

The preamble further avers that, with proper seed, Brazilian planters may obtain the same profitable results with wheat as they have by planting coffee, cotton, sugar, and other staple products of the country, and that the consumption of the interior of the country is large enough to afford a market for the production of nearly 1,500,000 acres. This acreage is sixty times as large as that ever planted to wheat in Brazil.

The premiums, which are payable in agricultural machinery, amount to about $3 for every acre put under wheat, but in order to receive them the crop must exceed 17¼ bushels an acre, each bushel containing 60 pounds of ripe, dry grain. Whenever the crop exceeds about 22 bushels an acre, and the weight of the grain exceeds 60 pounds to the bushel, the premium is to be increased 20 per cent. Participants must offer facilities to the Government agricultural inspectors to examine and measure the cultivated areas, as well as give them information regarding the type of seeds planted and the methods used in producing the grain. These inspectors will issue any practical directions for doing the work that may be required.

In order still to further the movement, the Brazilian Government will, during this and next year, guarantee a minimum price of slightly less than 3 cents a pound for all wheat delivered in Rio de Janeiro.

ARGENTINE MEAT EXPORTS.

The Great Increase in Them Shown Since the War Began.

Exports of meat from Argentina have increased more during the period since the war started, in 1914, than they did from 1910 to 1914. In a report on the development of the country's meat exports from 1910 up to and including 1917, prepared by the Director General of National Statistics, which is quoted by Consul General W. H. Robertson of Buenos Aires, the total gain for the entire period is given as 196,831 tons.

In 1910 362,385 tons of meat were exported, and this total was increased each year until in 1913, the last full year before the war, it amounted to 443,086 tons. In 1914 this was increased to 459,853 tons, and though the next year it fell to 442,546, in 1916 it jumped up by approximately 100,000 tons, to 544,748 tons. There was a further slight gain in 1917, which registered a total of 559,216 tons of meat exported.

Canned meat is an item of daily increasing export. In the years 1910 to 1914 it fluctuated between 13,000 and 16,000 tons a year, rising in 1915 to 32,514 tons, and attaining 45,197 tons in 1916. In 1917, however, this figure was more than doubled, amounting to 102,153 tons.

Spanish Cork Syndicate Formed.

The cork interests of Gerona Province in Spain have organized as a syndicate so that they may enjoy the privileges provided for in the law for the protection of industries whose production exceeds domestic requirements. It is expected, according to Consul General Carl B. Hurst of Barcelona, that this organization, with the aid of the Government, will relieve the grave crisis, due to overproduction, which has imperilled the cork industry of Spain since the war started.

Capes for Fall?

All manufacturers in the local cloak and suit trade do not agree that capes, which have had such a run of popularity during the Spring season, are going to be equally good for next Fall and Winter. According to one of the large manufacturers in this city, "a cape is not a satisfactory garment for Winter wear because it does not afford sufficient protection from cold winds. And the present popularity of this type of garment, I believe, is more a passing fancy than a permanent style development. Capes have never been good before for the general trade, and I don't believe that they ever will be. However, the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and we shall see what happens when Winter comes."

HEROES OF THE AIR IN THE GREAT WAR

MY AIRMAN OVER THERE. By His Wife. New York: Moffat, Yard & Co. $1.35.

As the importance of aircraft in the war becomes more and more evident popular interest in the subject of airships and in the achievements of the airmen becomes constantly keener and demands an exposition of all phases of the theory and practice of aeronautics. Just such a variety is to be found in this collection of books, whose themes range through the present military service of airplanes, the commercial possibilities of the airship and its history and present development, to the personal experiences of airmen at the front.

In its original form Mr. Loening first published his "Military Aeroplanes" three years ago as the official textbook for the United States Army Aviation School at San Diego. But so rapid has been, and continues, the development of airplane models and the technique of flying them that he has found it necessary to make his volume essentially a yearbook. In this edition for the present year he has simplified some of the previous text, introduced several new chapters, and incorporated many new illustrations, both half-tone and line cuts. The revision has been made in correspondence with teachers of flying and therefore includes the most recent developments in the practical application of its theories. That the book has high practical value is proved by the fact that it is used in the instruction of the students of the flying schools of Britain, Canada, and the United States. It is also the official instruction book of this country upon which naval aviators are examined.

The purpose for which it is intended has made necessary the inclusion of much technical matter, but notwithstanding this the ordinary reader who is interested in aviation will find in it many pages suited to his own desire for information. The principles of flying are explained so clearly and so interestingly that any one can grasp its fundamentals. There is a chapter on aircraft in general and another on airplane types which set forth in a simple and interesting way the development of flying and describe the differences in the various types of airships. So, also, the various parts of the machine, the movements it makes in the air, and the means by which it is controlled are made clear. The pages on construction of planes, the metals and woods used in them, and the assembling of the parts are full of information that is interesting for the general reader as well as necessary for the student.

The illustrations, which include full-page and double-page plates and cuts and diagrams in the text, are copious and varied. Particularly interesting are some which illustrate the descriptions of the various forms of "stunting." In these the machine is shown in the successive phases of movement as it glides from one to another position in tail spin, loop, or Immelmann turn. Mr. Loening thinks that fliers are less skilled now than they were a few years ago and says that notwithstanding the increased excellence of the airships themselves "it is safe to say that many a stunt flier of the greatest distinction today would hopelessly crash in a 1910 airplane." He has some interesting things to say also about the importance of the personal equation and the qualities necessary to make a good flier. Of these qualities he insists that the most important is just ordinary common sense.

Mr. Abbot's very interesting book unites the story of the two most wonderful developments of modern times, the craft that navigate the air and those that travel beneath the sea. The history of each is told in separate chapters, with rather more than half the space devoted to aircraft. The volume is intended for popular reading and therefore it contains no technical matter. The emphasis is laid rather upon the history of the development of both theory and practical effort and upon status and conditions at the present time. Mr. Abbot evidently has taken the greatest pains to make his account complete and accurate and the reader will find here many instances not generally known of the way in which the conceptions of air and undersea craft had been simmering in the brains of inventors and having clumsy and unsuccessful expression for long periods before the present century. Mr. Abbot writes his narrative in a very readable style, telling the story simply and relying on the inherent fascination of its facts when adequately presented to furnish the glow of romance. After recounting the history of the development of the airplane and describing with considerable detail the share in it of the men whose names will be forever linked with its story, Mr. Abbot takes up the relation of the airplane to the world war and devotes several chapters to the military uses made of it by the several nations, the turn its growth has taken under military necessity, and the influence, still incalculable, it is exerting upon warfare. He gives considerable attention also to the methods of training aviators and to accounts of aerial adventures on the battle front. The story of the submarine, its uses in warfare, its possible service in peace, its exploits in the present war, are all narrated in the same interesting way. The book is copiously illustrated with many full-page plates, some of them in color, and with many pictures and diagrams in the text.

Mr. Middleton's "Airfare of Today and of the Future" does not seem to be a recently written book, for in several respects it is far behind the conditions of the "airfare" of today. He speaks, for instance, of "holes in the air"—an explanation of certain aeronautical phenomena that to the airman of 1918 is an antiquated and mistaken theory. There are other indications also that the work must have been written in the early months of the war, and while that fact does not alter the value of its presentation of the progress air navigation and warfare had made at that time, it does affect the book's value for the reader who wishes to know something about the enormous advance and expansion they have had during the last two years. In a style that is often somewhat ornate the author endeavors to give the reader an idea of the vast possibilities of air domination in the future, for both peace and war, and offers some vigorous accounts of the experiences of the aeronaut, and of warfare in the air.

Evidently more recent in its writing, Mr. Middleton's "Glorious Exploits of the Air" makes use also of some of the material and incidents contained in the former volume. However, it contains much that is fresh and recent and very interesting. Along with a considerable amount of information about the training of fliers, the wisdom that has to be evolved in them and the development of aeronautical knowledge and skill, the book fairly brims with stories told in a lively style about the British fliers by land and sea. There are chapters describing bombing raids, Zeppelin fighting, flights across firing lines, and other incidents of aerial warfare that are full of thrills. A chapter on the German air service compares British and German points of view, methods and achievements.

Stuart Walcott, son of Dr. Charles D. Walcott, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, after some preliminary training in the United States, went to France in the early Summer of last year. He spent four months at the schools at Avord, Pau, and Plessis-Belleville, and began work at the front with a Lafayette Escadrille early in November. In December while on patrol, after bringing down a machine within the German lines, he was overtaken and sent to the earth in a fatal nose dive by four German planes. The book contains, in addition to his letters written while at the French aviation schools and all of them loved the relatives whom they often visited in Germany.

When the European war broke out it solidified even more, if that were possible, the family whole. The Hertz household did not feel as their neighbors felt, or believe as their neighbors believed, but within their own circle they were absolutely united; they were absolutely loyal to Germany. Rudolf's father told him that Germany was right and England and France wrong and America misinformed, and Rudolf believed him. He believed him even when the Lusitania was sunk. He was so loyal to his belief in Germany that, the only pro-German in school, he stood alone against what almost amounted to a verbal and social persecution, and did at last become an actual boycott, from the other boys. When he left school and went to Harvard he still believed that his father was right and every one else he knew was wrong. He still believed in Germany.

Yet Rudolf and Elizabeth and their mother, loyal to Germany as they felt themselves to be, were loyal to America, too. Little by little the cleavage between the two countries became more marked, and with it came cleavage in the family. There came a day when Mr. Hertz cried out in hatred against his American naturalization—long before war was declared; and there came another day when Rudolf, in whom the slow infiltration of ideas had been working almost without his knowledge, realized that it was he who had been "misinformed," and joined the "Harvard Regiment" to drill. With the declaration of war Rudolf enlisted, and his father practically disowned him; but when he went to France there was an honest, if regretful, acquiescence in his father's good-bye.

That is, briefly, the story of "The Son Decides." It is told simply, not didactically, but as an interesting narrative.

LORD TONY'S WIFE

LORD TONY'S WIFE: An Adventure of the Scarlet Pimpernel. By Baroness Orczy. New York: George H. Doran Company. $1.35.

THE Scarlet Pimpernel is here once more. It is a hard knot that he has to unravel this time, and a difficult task to achieve. Back of it lies the fury of the French Revolution, the passion, natural enough, of a man unjustly treated, for revenge. He must undo the success of a plot long schemed and worked for, and he does it in a fascinating tale. It is a story, however, that is quite complete in itself and is not dependent for enjoyment upon a former acquaintance with its dashing hero.

In 1789, shortly after the fall of the Bastile, the slow-gathering wrath of the peasants about Nantes, starved and treated like cattle by his Grace the Duc de Kernogan, flames into quick rebellion. It is easily put down by the Duke's men. But the leader, young Pierre Adet, escapes—and the Duke hangs the boy's aged and innocent father by way of vicarious punishment. Pierre does not hear of it until long afterward, and when he does he vows vengeance on all the house of Kernogan.

That is the prologue to the story. Four years later the revolutionists have been victorious and the Kernogans—father and daughter—are among the emigrés who have fled to England to escape the Reign of Terror. The Duke exemplifies the faults of the aristocracy clearly enough; it is easy to understand why the poor of Nantes hate him. But Yvonne, his daughter, is neither cruel nor arrogant nor selfish; she has the virtues of her class without its heartlessness; she is a brave and lovely heroine, and it is small wonder that Lord Anthony Dewhurst adores her and urges her to a secret marriage when the Scarlet Pimpernel warns him that she is threatened by grave peril. Yvonne loves Lord Tony, revolts from the thought of marriage with the banker, Martin-Roget, who is her father's choice, yields to her English suitor's persuasions, and runs away with him; but it is too late to stay the menace of Pierre Adet's revenge on the house of Kernogan. Young Lady Dewhurst is kidnapped almost from the church door.

The story of how her husband and the Scarlet Pimpernel seek and find her at last, how the plots of Martin-Roget and the revolutionists come near to fruition, and how Yvonne is triumphantly rescued in the end, makes an exciting, romantic, and thoroughly entertaining novel.

THE DEVIL TO PAY

THE DEVIL TO PAY. By Frances Nimmo Greene. Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.35, net.

A MYSTERY story which is at once interesting, plausible, and well written is by no means a thing of everyday occurrence, which fact makes doubly welcome Frances Nimmo Greene's new and very clever detective novel, "The Devil to Pay." For this tale not only possesses an ingenious and adroitly developed plot which holds the reader's attention from the first page to the last, but it also contains some excellent character drawing. It would be a pity to impair the reader's pleasure by revealing any of the story, but it can do no harm to describe the situation with which the book opens.

The scene is laid in a small city in an unnamed Southern State. The cashier of the Hampton Bank and Trust Company, Joseph D. Harkness, had been murdered some little time before the story opens; the paying teller, George Roan, was accused of the murder, tried, found guilty, and executed despite the desperate pleadings of his wife. The very day his execution took place the President of the bank, Brent Warren, was indicted by the Grand Jury, charged with complicity in the crime for which Roan had already paid the penalty. Larry Keeling first learned of this latter fact when he returned from a day's fishing trip, and was much perturbed by it—with good reason, too, for Brent Warren was engaged to be married to Larry's sister and only living relative, Dare Keeling. To make matters worse, Cullen Grant, the District Attorney, whose duty it was to prosecute Brent Warren, was also in love with Dare, had been engaged to her at one time, and later jilted by her. Larry, a boy of 20, adored his sister and believed himself a born detective. So he very naturally took a keen interest in the affair, which the reader sees through his eyes, acquiring knowledge only as Larry acquires it, and sharing his perplexities, which were very many. Indeed, he did not for a long time know whether he was on the side of Brent Warren or of Cullen Grant. The use of this boy, old enough to feel a sense of responsibility and young enough to commit all sorts of excusable follies, is a very clever device on the part of the author. Moreover, his character is admirably handled, and he quickly becomes a very real as well as a very likable person to the reader. Dare, though she has certain good qualities, does not win much sympathy, and one is inclined to feel rather sorry for the man whose wife she is to become.

The story is full of complications and surprises; it contains several dramatic moments and as much suspense as any one could reasonably desire. Moreover, these qualities are enhanced by the fact that Miss Greene knows how to write—a kind of knowledge not always possessed by producers of mystery stories. Those who once begin "The Devil to Pay" are not likely to lay it aside before it is finished.

MASHI

MASHI, AND OTHER STORIES. By Rabindranath Tagore. The Macmillan Company. $1.50 net.

A COLLECTION of fourteen short stories and sketches by Rabindranath Tagore, translated from the original Bengali by various writers, is presented in this new volume. The first, "Mashi," gives its name to the book. "Mashi," a footnote explains, is the name by which one's maternal aunt is addressed. It is a pathetic little sketch, showing how the aunt of the dying Jotin tried to make him believe that the wife he adored, and who was utterly indifferent to him, cared for him greatly. Mashi had brought Jotin up, and loved him devotedly; but she could not prevent his breaking his heart over a frivolous woman. This opening sketch is an exquisitely written bit, with some poetic descriptions, and it gives an interesting picture of the daily life of an Indian household.

Touched with irony is the story of "The Skeleton" of what was once a beautiful girl, "a radiant vision of perfect loveliness, glowing against the black background of night." The next tale, "The Auspicious Vision," takes its title from that part of the Hindoo wedding ceremony when for the first time since their betrothal the bride and bridegroom see each other's faces. "The Supreme Night" is the story of one who surrendered love for the sake of ambition and found only disappointment and obscurity. "I could have married Surabada and lived happily. But I must be a Garibaldi—and I ended by becoming the second master of a village school," says the narrator. But one night, a night of wild tempest, he met the woman he should have married, now the wife of another man. Without a word spoken, they stood together, side by side amidst "this desolate, terrible gloom of Nature's death-convulsion." In silence they met, and in silence parted, but the man declares that this one night remains in his memory as "the supreme glory of my humble existence."

"Raja and Rani" gives an Indian version of the experiences of the petted dependent, for a time a favored plaything of the master, the Raja, and therefore the object of the mistress's jealousy. The Rani, however, was a fairly clever woman, and she managed to reverse the situation with results satisfactory to her, but destructive to the once favored servitor, who at last goes penniless "out into the wide world where he had not a soul to call his friend." Later in the volume comes "The Castaway," another story of a petted waif, later abandoned. One of the most interesting of the tales has to do with an ancient Bengali belief that through the performance of certain rites a human being could be turned into a "Yak" or ghostly custodian of treasure, bound to guard it through the years or even centuries, until the appointed owner should appear and claim it. This story, "The Trust Property" is a very interesting bit of folk-lore. Altogether different is the next story in the volume, "The Riddle Solved," a bitingly satirical on suicide corner—alone

ON every side the shells rained fire—poisonous gases from Ypres swept over him in noxious waves—earth and sky seemed to crash about him—but he was only a sentry. His post was on Suicide Corner, and on that hill of death—but why tell you what this unsung Allied hero saw and did when you can read it for yourself? This is a vital story—a story of the inner beauty—of the high idealism of the men who fight and die in battle. But better than that, it is told by a man who really knows how to write. His words are living, burning things that leap and flash even as the battle-sounds of which he tells. Here at last is a war book with a style so brilliant that it may well be called literature. It has been called the great epic of the war. Captain Chute is a Nova Scotian who went out as a private, with the first Canadian contingent—served two years—and was so seriously wounded leading his men at the battle of the Somme that he was discharged. He has been doing big work since in this country addressing thousands on the real meaning of the war. If you want a war book that is worth while, get this marvelous story at your bookseller's today.

RIGHT ABOVE RACE

By OTTO H. KAHN

Mr. Kahn speaks in this book for all those Americans of German birth or German origin who, like himself, feel that an evil rulership and military caste have robbed him and them of the Germany they loved and in which they took a just pride. He reveals many startling facts about the war new to most Americans—facts that came to him as a result of his international connections. "Right Above Race" is a terrible indictment of blood-stained Prussianism and an inspiring confession of patriotic Americanism.

NOTABLE BOOKS IN BRIEF REVIEW

the wounded. There are stories of individual bravery and devotion on the part of particular officers and men. There is some pertinent information on the value of discipline. Almost the only amusing thing in the book is the quotation of the Tommy's triumphant discovery that he could get his favorite four-egg omelet, miraculously, by asking his French hostess for "an omelet with a cat roof"!

But there is sincerity, earnestness, appreciation, all through this little volume. And the impression that it leaves of the fighting man's life is neither horrible nor sad; it is a life of courage, hard work, faith, devotion, lightened by odd little incidents, cheered by fine comradeship. It is a part of something that the author wishes the individual American civilian more poignantly to understand.

IN GERMAN HANDS

IN GERMAN HANDS: The Diary of a Severely Wounded Prisoner. By Charles Hennebois. Preface by Ernest Daudet. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $1.50.

THIS simply written diary of a young Frenchman tells so tragic a story, and one so full of the horrors that lie behind the German lines for wounded prisoners sent to their hospitals, that not many of all the innumerable books of experience produced by the war have been more moving. The author enlisted almost at the very first of the conflict, and within a week was severely wounded before Saint Mihiel, and after lying four days on the field was taken by the Germans and sent to a hospital, where one leg was amputated. After nine months spent in hospitals and prison camp he was exchanged and sent home, in July, 1915. The book throws another revealing ray of the light of intimate knowledge upon German character and methods in warfare. While now and then the wounded young prisoner met a kindly face and a gentle, humane heart—and all such he gladly and gratefully chronicles in his diary—nearly all who came near him, doctors, nurses, hospital orderlies, guards, even clergymen, seemed to give forth hatred, cruelty, vengefulness with every breath. All through his imprisonment he came face to face almost every day with cold-blooded, unnecessary cruelty, either to himself or to other prisoners. It was not always bodily, but the clumsy, determined efforts to impress the minds of the ill and weakened prisoners with Germany's might and righteousness caused the helpless patients as much anguish as did physical cruelty. There was a book of prayers composed for the especial use of French prisoners of war, from which the author quotes, that is unique among all the many astounding things that have portrayed in German colors the German mind.

The preface by Ernest Daudet tells something of the personality of M. Hennebois, who, one of the gifted youth of France, had elected before the war to follow a literary career, and now, crippled, returns to his home without regret for his fate, and sorrowing only that he can no longer serve his country.

COMMERCE

THE ROMANCE OF COMMERCE. By H. Gordon Selfridge. London and New York: John Lane Company. $3.

Mr. Selfridge is well known as a merchant who has had successes in two countries. The transfer of his activities from Chicago to London is as romantic as anything narrated in his book, but is not mentioned in it. The reason for reference to the fact is to give authority to his presentation of his subject in a manner which is a treat both to mind and eye. There is nothing commercial about his style. Rather it reveals him as a man of taste and culture who has made a labor of love of paying his debt to his profession—for trade on his scale is rather generalship than trade. His book of over 400 pages begins without a preface, and includes illustrations listed on a six-page catalogue. He owes much to his publisher, who has given him deckle edges, good print, and fine paper. The workmanship of the author is well matched by the printer, and the volume may almost be called sumptuous. Certainly it is handsome. The text of the book begins with a eulogy of commerce and traces its development from the times of earliest Chinese history through Venice and the Hanseatic Leagues and the British adventures down to our own times, culminating in an account of the organization and management of a department store, not his store in particular—that would spoil everything—but any store of the sort. In his view, which may be pardoned him, the department store is the culmination of commerce. Although the book has no preface, it begins with an excellent dedication to the world's merchants and ends with an equally excellent apostrophe to work and commerce.

Precious Stones

Frank B. Wade, a teacher of chemistry in Indianapolis, presents in a volume entitled "A Text-Book of Precious Stones" an exposition of fundamental principles and methods of identification that will be useful to jewelers and to the "gem-loving public." The author says his book combines the trade information he has gained in the study of precious stones, which is his avocation, with scientific knowledge his educational work has compelled him to master. WHAT IS MAN'S SUPREME INHERITANCE?

By PROFESSOR RICHARD MORSE HODGE,
English and Biblical Literature, Columbia University.

MAN'S SUPREME INHERITANCE: Conscious Guidance in Relation to Human Evolution in Civilization. By F. Matthias Alexander, with an introductory word by Professor John Dewey. American Edition. Published by E. P. Dutton Company, New York, 1918.

MAN'S supreme inheritance is his body, consciously controlled in thought and action. No book could have a greater subject nor a better title. Every one is interested in his own development and that of the race. To this problem the author has made a distinct contribution, based upon first-hand information. His conclusions are couched in popular language, and the result is a very readable book. The first edition, issued three months ago, is already exhausted.

Civilization has made a normal body a problem. Our complex life has developed too rapidly not to make strange and sudden demands upon the human organism. Civilized people are unhealthy in comparison with wild animals and primitive races. Does our health demand that we return to a less civilised life, or can we adapt our bodies to the civilized environment which the race has developed? The author furnishes the evidence necessary to show that we can use our bodies and our minds, therefore, to much greater advantage than the most of us do, and that the way lies in a further general progress of the race from instinctive guidance to conscious control. According to his observation, while some persons are able to adapt themselves to civilized life with a fair degree of success, the great majority fail in adjustment to their ever-changing environment, with results, which, in an alarming number of cases are progressively disastrous. The soundness of the vital organs does not of itself command maximum health and mental power. Diet, sleep, exercise, and sanitation count for much, but their variations by no means account for all of the differences in health to be met among those whose organs are all sound. Our organs are interdependent, and the working power of a complex unit, like the human body, depends upon the co-ordination of all of its parts. The control of the muscular mechanism governing carriage, or habitual posture in standing, walking, and sitting, is a determining factor in the co-ordination of the organs of breathing, circulation, and digestion, and of speech and eyesight as well. If this be so, we identify in posture a cause of subnormal health of far-reaching importance. If also a person whose posture is poor has not the power to command a correct carriage, how one holds himself is all the more significant. The stooping, round-shouldered man knows that he cannot straighten himself entirely when he tries. He cannot throw back his shoulders without hollowing his back. Nor can he maintain this position for more than a few minutes without fatigue. Whereas he observes that in the truly straight person the erect posture is the position of rest. Is there, then, an art of posture, an art which some persons have never been without and which others do not possess? And may not this art be taught? And may not adults learn it, although with more difficulty than children?

Mr. Alexander holds that posture is an accomplishment and that the conscious control of the position of "mechanical advantage" is an art of primary importance. The very large part which posture plays in the evolution of man appears in two phenomena of common knowledge. The first of these is that of the assumption by man of the erect position and is probably the most radical single change in habit in the history of mammals, and we cannot expect that every individual of the species will develop this position of equilibrium with equal skill, especially in our complex civilization of various occupations in the office, home, and shop, and in the general absence of a really intelligent training of babies in their first efforts to walk. The second phenomenon in point is that our so-called vital organs are all hung as though man was intended to go on all fours, a circumstance which argues that these organs cannot be expected to function at their best unless the erect position be maintained in the most favorable manner.

Every person co-ordinates himself somehow, for he must maintain his equilibrium. One maladjustment in consequence will be balanced by another. If the back be unduly bent in and the abdomen out false strains are put upon the feet. If the chest is thrown up an undue strain is put upon the heart and the lungs are cramped. The author contends that the military posture adopted in army training by all nations is abnormal and lowers the working power of the organs of breathing, circulation, digestion, and locomotion, and he intimates that the rule of exercise of the British Army results in the physical breakdown of many soldiers every year and their having to abandon the service. He condemns only less severely the prevalent systems of calesthenics and much of "free expression" dancing, as exercising the body in faulty positions and cultivating some new attitudes still more serious. In the position of mechanical advantage, on the other hand, which he advocates, a man is in the best attitude either to welcome a friend with outstretched arms or to land a blow with the fist, or, on bending the knees and hips, to lift either a heavy or a light weight from the ground without having to know in advance what amount of pull the given weight will demand of him.

The position of one part of the body automatically makes another part rigid or relaxed as the case may be. This law is of prime importance both in diagnosis and in re-education. Suppleness of hands, wrists, shoulders, and neck, for instance, depends upon muscle control. The stiff-jointed person is limited in control, holding some muscles taut which should be relaxed, and some muscles relaxed which should be taut, if he is to execute a given motion with freedom; and he is unable to command these muscles properly. The result is inelastic carriage and movement.

And rigidity of body induces rigidity of mind. A "stiff-necked" people is a designation which occurs more than once in the writings of the ancient Hebrews, and points to an accurate observation in ancient times of the habitual posture of the most obstinate individuals. Does not the rigidity of the German mind of the present generation owe something to the military posture to which the whole male population has been trained? It is the attitude of arrogance and even of throaty speech. A brain highly trained in its way is capable of as amazing stupidities through rigidity as through ignorance. There are few who do not fail frequently to act on their best judgments in time. No one can know how rigid he was in mind or body until after he has been re-educated in physical co-ordination. If one fancies that he has only to be informed vocally how to lengthen and relax his body he will find that his control of his muscles is too limited for the purpose. He learns on being re-educated that what he conceived to be relaxation is collapse. He learns, too, how his debauched sensory appreciations fail him in registering muscular adjustment. Habit has limited his muscle control. But habit is no great stabalizer. It is the power to repeat an action automatically in the absence of a mental order to the contrary. A bad habit has to be overcome by a conscious control which inhabits it and at the same time cultivates a new habit by a repetition of another action until it in time becomes automatic. The first step in this re-education is the development of the brain tracks necessary for the mental orders required. This is promptly accomplished, however, under the voice and hands of an expert. How long it will take to re-educate a given individual depends upon the mental rigidity of the person in question.

The correct co-ordination of the muscular system results in accelerated lung action, better circulation, and the conditions present, which command these advantages, brings about also a constant and effective massage of the organs of digestion during sleeping and waking hours. Upon the much-debated subject of respiration Mr. Alexander speaks at some length. He claims that a correct co-ordination of the muscular system induces normal respiration, and also that a partial vacuum in the lungs gives atmospheric pressure its opportunity, and that this should prevent that harmful depression of the larynx and lowering of air pressure in the nostrils which are forerunners of throat and nose troubles. He has something to say, too, in regard to the evils of what is called "deep breathing."

A so-called cripple may lack only a proper control of certain muscles in order to become normal. Corpulence and flat-foot are involved in the question of carriage. A stammerer presents a case of local control.

Parents will be especially interested in the chapters on Race Culture and the Training of Children, Synopsis of Claim, and the Processes of Conscious Guidance and Control. The athlete may learn not a little from this book of how to handle himself in his sport. The golfer will appreciate its pages and what they record regarding the position of mechanical advantage and the light they shed by indirect illumination upon the vexed problems of why he goes off his game, and why he does not improve his play. The plowman should be no less interested in the position of mechanical advantage than the golfer. As a brain worker, however, a man stands to gain most of all.

The technique of Mr. Alexander's own art of re-education, which is the subject of the book, is incommunicable on paper, especially as every case for treatment is a special case. It is cheering to note, however, that while it requires an expert to correct the co-ordination of an adult, yet almost any one may be taught by an expert how to train children to hold themselves correctly. Moreover, a correct co-ordination once achieved by child or adult promises to be permanent.

The author has demonstrated his theory in a practice covering a period of over twenty years, first in Australia, and then in London and New York. Obviously, as Professor Dewey remarks in the foreword of the volume, here is a book of basic significance to physiology, psychology, education, and every sphere of contemporary life. In this significance of his work and its theory Mr. Alexander shows himself to be especially interested.

GOLD AND IRON

This new book by JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER contains three notable long stories—Wild Oranges (the Georgia seaboard), Tubal Cain (middle Pennsylvania), and The Dark Fleece (the New England sea coast)—written around men past the adventurous period of youth, and yet each determined not to be absorbed in the featureless oblivion of the commonplace. Mr. Hergesheimer is the author of THE THREE BLACK PENNYS, which John Galsworthy says is the most interesting new American book he has read. It is pleasant to have your own opinion borne out by so commanding a person as Mr. Galsworthy. For the publisher has always been convinced that THE THREE BLACK PENNYS is a really distinguished book, and one that will live.

GOLD AND IRON is as good as you would expect from its author. Not to read these books is to miss the best American fiction of your day. Both are Borzoi Books, of course, published by ALFRED A. KNOPF and are for sale everywhere.

THE THREE BLACK PENNYS

The Imprisoned Freeman
By HELEN S. WOODRUFF
Author of "The Lady of the Lighthouse," "Mr. Doctor-Man," Etc.
In this story the author has not written of Dickens's and Reade's times, nor of their country. Neither are the atrocities of which she tells those committed by Germany, but are one and all committed here and now in our own country, the United States of America.
No lover of a thrilling novel should fail to read it, because it is the gladness, and not the sadness, of the optimistic author which makes the book so doubly worth while.

What a Kelly Thinks

I understand that Harper's will publish on March 17th (a most fitting day for the event) your Irish stories. This is indeed good news.

Though my name smacks of a prejudiced judgment, I consider your stories of the Irish in America and Americans with Irish blood in their veins the best of the many good things that have come from your brilliant pen.

The characters of your stories are not the Chauncey Olcott creatures, but real flesh and blood people—people that men with names like mine know and can tie real names to. For this, thank you! And for the real good stories that they are, thank you again!

Sincerely,
J. B. Kelly.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS

ANSWERS BY THE EDITOR

T. S. TRACEY.—In reading "The History of Old Cheraws," by the Rev. Alexander Gregg, published in Columbia, S. C., in 1905, I came across one Colonel Abel Kolb, who was referred to as the hero of a book by A. D. Sims, the title of which was "Bevil Faulcon." Can you give me any information about this book and its author?

"Bevil Faulcon" was written by Alexander Dromgoole Sims, who was born in Brunswick County, Va., in 1803, and died in Kingstree, S. C., in 1848. He practiced law in South Carolina, and was a member of the Legislature of that State in 1840-44. He was subsequently elected to Congress as a State

Believing that your correspondents might be interested, as I have been, to learn of the existence of another poem bearing the same title, I therefore beg to quote below one by Wilbur D. Nesbit:

WITH AUTHORS AND PUBLISHERS

CONINGSBY DAWSON'S account of the work which the United States Government is doing in France in preparation and training for this country's assistance in the war will be published by John Lane Company in the early Summer under the title, "Out to Win." Lieutenant Dawson, whose two war books, "Carry On" and "The Glory of the Trenches," have had many sympathetic and admiring readers, was commissioned by the British Government to make a study of what America is doing in France and write a book about it, and spent a month there making his investigations. He has now returned to the fighting line.

Under the title, "Flashes from the Front," the Century Company will this month publish a volume of selections from the letters and dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES of Charles H. Grasty from London, Paris, Switzerland, the American camps, and the battle zone. The book will have an introduction by General Pershing.

"With the Fighting Fleets," Ralph D. Paine's account of what the American destroyers, battleships, and cruisers are doing in the war zone of the Atlantic, is announced for early publication by the Houghton Mifflin Company. Mr. Paine has just returned from five months with the American fleet, where he had experience with every branch of the service.

"Q," the mysterious sign by which the initiated recognize the hand of Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, will appear once more upon a title page when the Macmillans publish, the middle of this month, "Foe Farrell," a new novel, which is said to be at once a rousing story of adventure and a psychological study of the transformation of character.

Harold Titus, author of "Bruce of the Circle A," just published by Small, Maynard & Co., is in training at Camp Joseph E. Johnston, Jacksonville, Fla. His home is in the Middle West, and concerning that region he lately wrote to his publishers: "The Middle West, I think, is more solidly in the war than any other section of the country; recruiting records, Liberty bond sales, Red Cross support, &c., make up my evidence."

Alexander Woollcott, author of "Mrs. Fiske: Her Views on Actors, Acting, and the Problems of Production," and, until he went to France a year ago to join the American Ambulance Corps, dramatic critic of THE NEW YORK TIMES, is now a Sergeant in the American Army and associated with Franklin P. Adams in the editorship of that organ of the American forces in France, "The Stars and Stripes."

Boni & Liveright will publish this week, postponed from some months ago, a volume of selections from the poetry of the North American Indians under the title, "The Path on the Rainbow." George Cronyn has gathered and compiled the selections, Mary Austin has written an introduction, and the illustrations and decorations have been made by J. B. Platt, who only waited to complete them before joining the American Camouflage Corps.

For immediate issue the Harpers announce John Spargo's new book, "Social Democracy Explained," which, the author says, "is an attempt to state in simple, popular, and untechnical language the essentials of the socialism of the Marxian school—not only of the philosophical and economic theories of socialism, but of the principles underlying the policies of the Socialist movement."

"The New America at War" is the title of a new little book by Major Ian Hay Beith, which Doubleday, Page & Co. announce for early publication. It will contain the result of his observations during the many months that he has been traveling widely over this country, and will set forth how the United States came into the war, how America under war conditions compares with Great Britain, and how soon the American forces may be expected to take the field at full strength.

The Marshall-Jones Company of Boston is publishing in book form the "Over Here Stories" of Timothy Hay (Montgomery Rollins) which he wrote for the assistance of the Liberty Loan Committee in New Hampshire. The stories are said to have had remarkable effect in stimulating bond buying in that State, and Liberty Loan committees in other States are planning to use them in the next Liberty Loan campaign. The author gives all his royalties to the Red Cross.

Joseph Pennell has had a letter from President Wilson saying that his lithographs of "War Work in America" "are remarkably interesting and remarkably fine," and a letter from M. Jusserand, French Ambassador in Washington, informing him that the French Government will show a set of the prints in the Luxembourg.

A new and very different kind of investigation of psychic manifestations is described in "The Reality of Psychic Phenomena," by W. J. Crawford, which E. P. Dutton & Co. announce for early publication. The author, a well-known professor of physical science in an Irish university, has endeavored to examine and measure by physical apparatus the character, power, and direction of the forces that are supposed to produce such phenomena as the levitation and other movements of material objects. He tells in his book the nature and results of his investigations and experiments.

Mrs. Mabie, widow of Hamilton Wright Mabie, is collecting material for a book of memoirs of her husband, and has announced that all those who have letters from him or personal recollections of incidents connected with his life which would be of interest in the preparation of the proposed volume would confer a favor by allowing his literary representatives to see such letters or accounts of such incidents or stories.

President Wilson has consented to the issue of his various addresses during the war in a textbook edited by Professor George McLean Harper of Princeton in Henry Holt & Co.'s English Readings for Schools, under the general editorship of Professor Wilbur S. Cross of Yale. The book will probably appear early in May and about a quarter of it will contain ante-bellum papers.

The Macmillan Company has taken over the entire book business of the Outing Publishing Company, and recently reissued about one hundred volumes previously published by the latter concern.

Winston Churchill's "Traveller in War Time," now appearing serially in Scribner's Magazine, narrates Mr. Churchill's impressions of France and England as he found them on his recent trip abroad. It will be published in book form by the Macmillan Company early in May.

CUMBERLAND BALLETS

SINGING CARR AND OTHER SONG-BALLADS OF THE CUMBERLAND. By William Aspenwall Bradley. Alfred A. Knopf.

IT was only a few months ago that Mr. Bradley published a volume, "Old Christmas and Other Kentucky Tales in Verse," of which "Singing Carr" is little other than a continuation. One wonders why the two bites at a not very large cherry, but these be matters between a poet and his printer too deep for the comprehension of the multitude.

These song-ballads, or "ballets," as the mountaineer calls them, are interesting, as we have before explained in these columns, less for their poetic quality than for the light they throw on the vanishing spirit of a race. And this, we take it, is Mr. Bradley's object. He has been reproached for claiming, on the one hand, that the language of the mountain people is full of an untaught poetry, and on the other, for making them speak in a verse full of clichés. The contradiction may be more apparent than real. Expressions that have grown to be cliché to us may very well be still fresh and poetical in the Cumberlands, as they were to our own ancestors 300 years ago. Any one who has heard old people in remote places talk knows that many a word, as "yon," and "lone" and "grieve," linked in our minds with a conventional and artificial verse, continues to be to them a living means of expression. And though some of his verses, it is true, betray that their author took the easiest way to get his tales "across," when a harder and more painstaking one was plainly indicated, in many of them we feel that Mr. Bradley has deliberately sacrificed a possible poetical to a positive ethnographical value.

In "Singing Carr," as in "Old Christmas," we see a life so simple, primitive, and passionate that it is hard to believe in its existence at our very doors. The music of the "dulcimore" itself is not more strange to us than the merrymakings where it is played, and "St. Francis on Quicksand" bridges the centuries for us at a breath. But back of all the picturesque colors of a civilization earlier than our own looms the dark shadow of the feud, and of the sorrow of women. Not a pretty, sentimental sorrow, patiently borne, but one stern, heavy and hopeless, endured with fierce stoicism. The heroine of "A Mountain Mother" watches by the bedside of her dying son, and reflects:

Oh, ay, his borning cost me sore.
The very night my brothers bore
His father home, my pains began.
And I, who should have had my man
To hold me close upon his knee,
Must lie low in my bed and see
The old midwoman nodding there
Beside the wood fire, in her chair.

And when, at last, my pains were done,
And to my breast I clutched my son,
I knew what custom I must use,
I took and drew my dead man's shoes
Upon my feet, and on my head
I placed his hat, then from the bed
I struggled up, stood on the ground,
And, though all turned, I walked around

For must have been an hour, to dreen
Myself and make my body clean,
Like my dead man, when still in life,
I made the midwoman take her knife,
And when from his back the blood she pressed,
Mix it with warm milk from my breast,
And give it to the child, to make Him strong for his dead father's sake.

Day by day and year by year the mother trains her child with a single idea, that of vengeance. She even protects the slayer from other enemies—"The prey was ours—and ours alone." Finally, grown to young manhood, the son meets his father's foe. Both fire, both fall. The mother is satisfied; blood has paid for blood, and the slate is wiped clean.

Differing in kind from this brief and savage epic, but no less foreign to our latter-day minds, is the "Travels (From Nature to Grace)," in which the sinner hoeing in the cornfield suddenly falls beneath the power of the Spirit and beholds the angelic host about him "Like candles guttering in a gale," or the "Mother Goose on Goose Creek," which presents the novel view of a term in jail as a social and educational opportunity, calculated to fit the cleansed murderer to become a candidate for county office.

It is a strange world which Mr. Bradley reveals to us, one without half-lights or neutral tones—all clear sun and black shadows. It is a world in which humanity partakes of the cruelty, the indifference, the sharp loves and hates, the slow and wasteful selection of nature herself; an Elizabethan world, without the widening horizon of the Elizabethans which constantly beckoned them onward. It is a world whose differences from our own are bound, in the nature of things, to vanish, perhaps very soon. The poem, "The Feudist on the War," betrays the working of new forces. In the meantime, we can hardly have too much of it. We hope that Mr. Bradley will make it a subject of further and deeper study, and—if a reviewer may make a suggestion to a poet—it would be that a volume of prose sketches interspersed with "ballets" would make an ideal means to transmit its colorful melodrama to our soberer and more sophisticated minds.

Robert Herrick, in The Dial, says: "The book has all those intimate signs of truth that carry immediate conviction. Barbusse gives the thing itself—War."

French Nobleness--British Grit
Belgian Martyrdom

Told in 3 vital books which pry into the very heart of things.

YOU have been an eye-witness to America's plunge into the war—you have seen America put her shoulder to the load and march steadfastly toward victory.

But you have not been an eye-witness of how France, Great Britain, and Belgium unsheathed the sword in the cause of liberty.

Only a witness can tell you the deep, innermost feelings of our allies. You cannot know how brave France, with the scars of her last cruel war just healing, again cheered, "Vive la France," and marched off to protect her beloved land. You cannot know what these mud-stained, suffering heroes of the trenches are thinking and feeling deep down in their very souls.

You cannot know how courageous little Belgium sacrificed its beautiful country and its very life to hold back the fiendish Hun and to save civilization for the world. You can never know how the glorious Belgian spirit, rather than kneel before the Prussian will, suffered her country to be ground to the earth, her men shot like dogs, her women violated and left to die or else carried off into slavery.

Neither can you know how dogged Great Britain met the proud German warriors of the sky and thwarted their high hopes of complete supremacy in the air. Only an actual airman can tell you of thrilling battles more than two miles up in the sky upon the result of which depended the safety of the entire army.

The only way you can really know about these vital points is to READ the stories of eye-witnesses.

Read below about these three vital books which dig deep into the soul of the French, the heart of the Belgian and the courage of the Britain. These are books which scrape off the veneer of life and pry deep into the souls of the fighters.

These three books chronicle the incidents of war, it is true, but they go deeper than that—they discover the good that will come of this war. Glorified France, no longer classed as a volatile, selfish nation—New Belgium, well beloved, and purged by the white flames of suffering—Unified Great Britain, joined in spirit, heart and deed by the common menace of the enemy.

Read below about these three wonderful books—three of the greatest books the World Conflict has produced.

COMRADES IN COURAGE
By LIEUT. ANTOINE REDIER.

"So fine is its spirit, so noble its faith, so undaunted its acceptance of the ugly verities of war, that one can easily fancy this thin volume embodies all the wonderful spirit of war-torn France which has so won the admiration of the world. The fourteen chapters are indeed meditations, shot through and through with vivid anecdote and picturing, on ideas which have become now of crucial importance." So says the New York World of this book which the French Government calls one of the three greatest books of the war.

The author is a true Frenchman, a lieutenant of the trenches. No man could have gotten closer to the heart and soul of the French nation. No other Frenchman has told us with so much faith and devotion the future of his beloved land. It's one of those books that you wish you could remember word for word. Net, $1.40.

A JOURNAL FROM OUR LEGATION IN BELGIUM
By HUGH GIBSON,
American First Secretary at Brussels.

"I know of no book which so vividly presents the actual day-to-day impressions of what occurred in Belgium without exaggeration or attempt at effect," says the late Sir Cecil Spring-Rice of this authoritative book.

This is the book with the facts about the unbelievable Rape of Belgium. This is the book to which the future will turn for proof of the barbarism and brutality of the Huns.

Mr. Gibson, in his official position, saw acts committed that made his blood fairly boil. His daily notes tell of all he witnessed. He knows the German invaders as they really are. He tells how entire towns were wiped out of existence over night—how the Germans battered down the doors of houses, dragged out the peaceful, law-abiding Belgians, stole everything of value, left houses in ruins, the men dead—the women worse.

This book tells the true tale of a nation's fiendishness—its veracity can never be questioned. Net, $2.50.

CAVALRY OF THE CLOUDS
By CAPT. ALAN BOTT, M. C.

How are fought the thrilling battles of the air? How can an aviator hope to escape when five German airmen are attacking him from every side, and the anti-aircraft guns are puncturing the air all round him? What does a airman do when attacked 6,000 feet in the skies?

These are but a few of the exciting adventures experienced by an officer of the British Royal Flying Corps. As the London Daily Chronicle says, "All the exhilaration, poignancy, terror, of his combats throb anew in his narrative."

This is a book which will make every fibre of your being tingle, and it is the first great book about "the great tradition and noble chivalry" of the air. Net, $1.25.

Germany: "How many will be left to enjoy the fruits of your 'victory'?"

The Outlook for Ultimate Peace

By SIR GILBERT MURRAY

IMAGINE a large, well-to-do country village in some remote region with a few farmers, a few shopkeepers, and the due number of laborers and workmen. Times are good, and the people, as Hamlet says, "indifferent honest." One farmer may be a bit of a skinflint; one shopkeeper rather a schemer and not quite to be trusted in the quality of an article sold after dark; another man may be all right except when he has a horse to sell. They have their preferences and their quarrels. But on the whole they know one another's habits, and they get on decently together. They are no better than they should be, but no one of them is an absolute scoundrel or an enemy to all the rest.

Next it is discovered that one member of the society, and he a very rich and powerful one with a family of vigorous sons and nephews and cousins, has made a plot to murder one of his old rivals, and has also been carrying on all sorts of mean intrigues and slanders against his neighbors for some time past. He has been nursing a secret grievance against everybody, and means at all costs to have his revenge. The whole community is shocked and horrified, and most of the members form a Vigilance Committee to seize and punish the wicked man and all his family.

Thirdly, they find this difficult to do. They burn his barn and he burns theirs, they sack his shops and he blows up theirs. They cut off his food supplies, and he kills their women and children on the ground that they are starving his. And furthermore, it appears that various of his children, though they will not exactly side against their father and join the enemies who wish to kill him, are nevertheless very angry with him and think he has gone mad; while, on the other hand, the Vigilance Committee has naturally among its members a fair number of young rowdies who quite enjoy the fighting, and a few savage people who would like to do to the other side every conceivable evil which anybody says that the other side has done to them.

Lastly, suppose that, in the midst of this state of affairs, when the fight is at its hardest, the discovery is suddenly made that the general food supply has nearly run out, and that if people do not stop fighting and attend to their farms they will all equally begin to die of famine.

The last stage is where Europe is now; and the other three are stages through which Europe has passed. First, the nations, dealing with each other by means of the old diplomacy, more or less honestly, with a good many exceptions to this honesty, but with a certain general observance of decent rules; then the conspiracy and crime of Germany and her allies; then the war proclaimed by an indignant world against the gigantic liar and lawbreaker; and now the period of gradual ruin threatening every nation in Europe. What is the way out?

Sir Gilbert Murray, Regius Professor of Greek, Oxford University.

If I were in that village, I should say:

"Get hold of those of the old scoundrel's sons who are reputed to be decent fellows. Talk with them. Find out what their grievances are and explain to them ours. See on what terms, if any, they will take charge of their own house and put the old man and his bad advisers under control, and then proceed to live at peace with their neighbors.

"But," I would add very emphatically in my speech to the village meeting, "remember that, if you want to be able to trust them, you must make them trust you. You cannot go back to the old state of things just as it was. You must give up the pleasure of an occasional piece of sharp practice about a horse, give up any nice little bits of property you have acquired during the riots, and agree—honestly and without reservations—to submit all your outstanding disputes to a board of judges which shall represent both sides. And if you want secretly to cheat about the formation of that board of judges, to bribe them or nobble them beforehand, to arrange that your friends shall always have a majority on the board or that you shall grab all you can get first and only agree to arbitration about the rest; if you want to do that, why it is not worth while stopping the fight. Better go on till there is no fighting man left."

In Europe there are three possible ways of ending the war: First, by conquest, complete or incomplete. If it is incomplete, it will be a mere breathing space till the exhausted enemies can begin to fight again. If it is complete, the breathing space will be a little longer. One side will get the other down and bleed him as near to death as possible. Then, in course of time, the conquered party will proceed to recover and to arm for a war of revenge; a just war of revenge. And both sides will spend all their money on armaments far greater than those which are ruining us at present, and the next war when it comes will involve the blotting out of most of the large towns of England and Ger-

PASSPORTS FOR REAL WORKERS ONLY

State Department Insists That All Grandstand War Spectators Shall Return from France at Once—A Ban on Pretenders in Relief Units

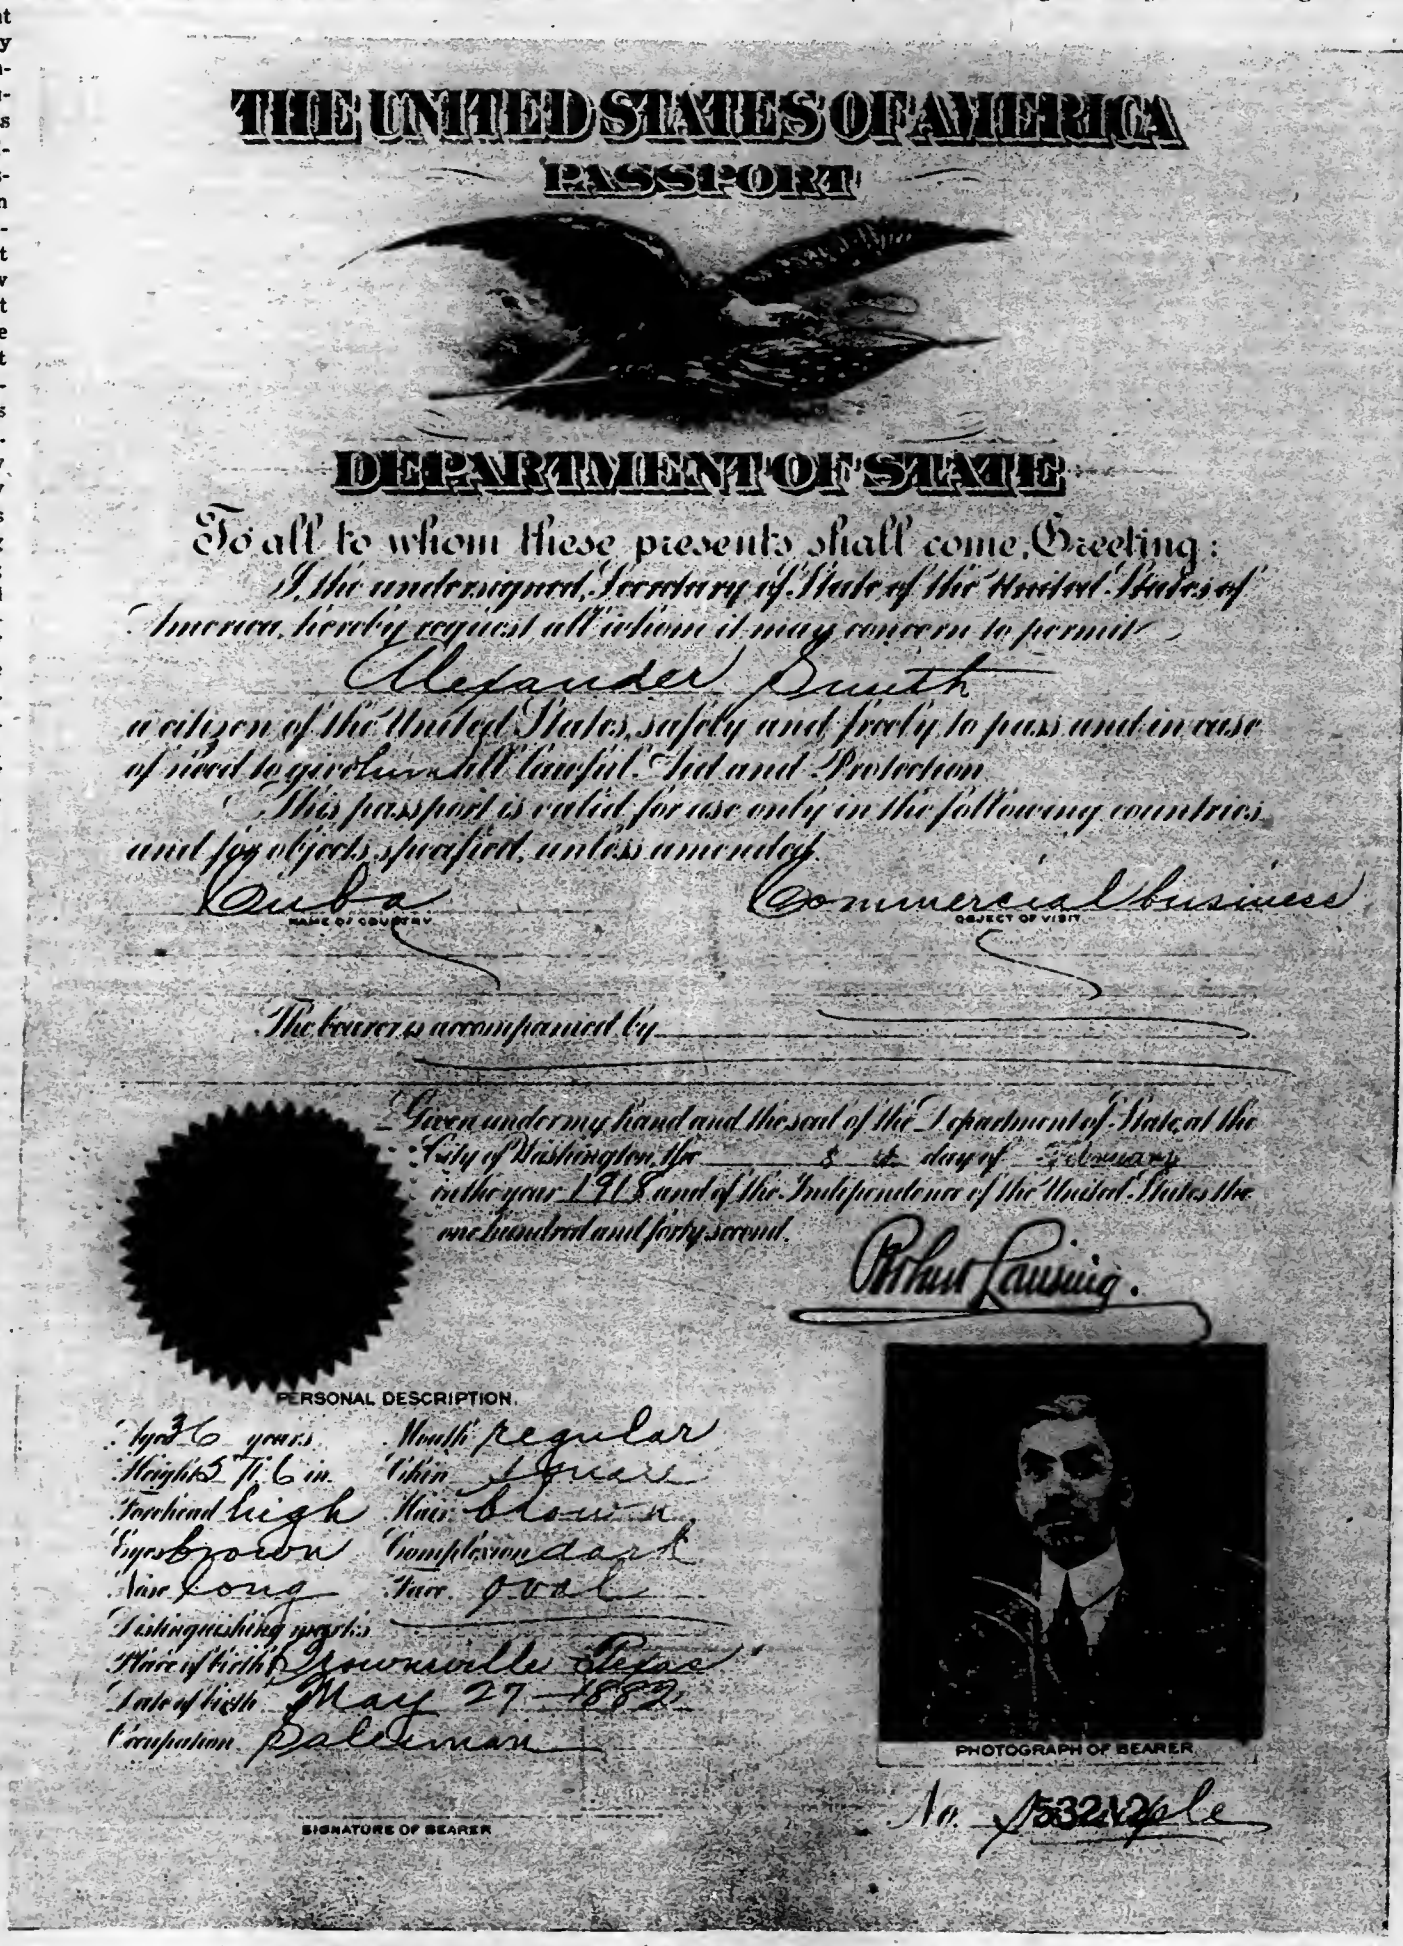
IT becomes more and more difficult for an American civilian to get out of this country into Europe. As the war progresses it will become as literally true as vigilance can make it that the only American civilians in France will be there because of some approved necessity. This will be brought about by the State Department in two ways—by restrictions imposed on the issuance of passports and by the cancellations of passports now held in France by Americans who are not needed there. New measures just put into effect by the State Department are designed to accomplish this end as speedily as possible.

There are now in France many American civilians who are "enjoying the war," so to say; not in any morbid way, but still having the time of their lives in the midst of its tremendous excitement and thrill. They are full of sympathy for the cause of the Allies, voice that sympathy on the slightest occasion, and yet, apparently do not, or will not, recognize the fact that their presence in Paris as onlookers in a great world crisis is a hindrance to the cause for which they express such overflowing devotion.

Practically all of this class of Americans in France obtained entrance through the same door, as relief workers. Some of them went with good intentions, but were found to be unfitted, mentally or physically, for the arduous work. In relief centres near the front they were in the way; hence it was most welcome to the earnest and capable relief workers when the incompetents departed for Paris as a centre of excitement where war thrills could be enjoyed without having to put up with the inconveniences and exactions of the fighting zone.

Others had no intention of doing any relief work from the start, but used it merely as a pretext to get into France, so that they could behold the great spectacle of war from a front seat. They engaged luxurious apartments. Their doings, sometimes made more prominent by gossip and scandal, have been a source of keen regret not only to the great American relief organizations working in France, but also to the great army of American relief workers who are rendering such valuable service. There are both men and women in this class of sbirkers, where shirking is most out of place. By far the greater number are women. In recent cablegrams from Paris reference has been made to the disagreeable situation created by the idlers.

But they are not to idle much longer. However much they would enjoy seeing the war through as sympathetic bystanders, they will be compelled to return to the United States. Steps to bring this about have already been taken by the State Department. Passports expire every six months. Americans in France must obtain renewals from the American Embassy at Paris. Thus, the State Department controls the stay of all Americans in France. The Embassy has been instructed to make a thorough investigation of all American relief workers in France. On the basis of this report a way will be found to bring back to America those who are only making a pretense of doing relief work or who are simply lingering, after having discovered that they were incapable of the duties required.



FIRST REPRODUCTION OF NEW-STYLE UNITED STATES PASSPORT.

Hitherto the State Department Has Refused Permission to Print Pictures of the Small Passport, Which Folds Into a Stiff Cover and Fits in One's Pocket Like a Thin Book. The Old-Time Passport, with Numberless Visés Pasted on It, Sometimes Extended to Nearly Six Feet in Length and Was a Clumsy Document to Handle.

It is an undertaking of much detail, and arrangements have been completed by the State Department for the establishment of a special passport office in Paris, to have charge of all American passport business, including such checking up as may call for the employment of intelligence officers. The Embassy, in carrying out the investigation, has been instructed by the State Department to obtain from each American relief organization in France information on the following points, to be submitted to the Embassy two weeks after the request is received:

1. Character of organization, nature and amount of work undertaken and performed and present and prospective facilities for carrying it on.
2. Arrangements with French authorities and American military authorities.
3. Co-operation with other American or French organizations.
4. List of Americans now employed by it, stating as to each (a) name and address, (b) number and date of passport, (c) age and special qualifications for work, (d) period of employment, (e) nature of work performed, (f) time devoted to work daily.
5. List of Americans formerly employed by it who have left France, stating as to each (a) name, (b) period of former employment, (c) why employment has ceased.
6. List of Americans now in France formerly employed by it, but no longer employed, stating as to each (a) name and address, (b) number and date of passport, (c) period of former employment, (d) why employment has ceased, (e) present occupation.
7. Approximate number of additional Americans whose services are desired within the next two months, nature of work to which they are to be assigned, and necessary qualifications.

In order to establish a strict check on workers going abroad in the future, the State Department sent a circular letter a few days ago to all relief organizations in this country. After stating that the excellent work of many American relief workers in France had been discounted to a considerable extent by numerous Americans who had obtained passports for that purpose, but had not been employed in work of such a nature as to justify their presence in France, this circular said:

"To meet this situation the department has adopted the following regulations:

"Hereafter relief and hospital organizations in France and other European countries who desire to obtain workers from this country will be required to satisfy the American Embassy that the services of a certain number of workers for a particular kind of work are needed. The Embassy, which will keep in touch with the work being done by the various organizations, will, upon request, telegraph the department as to the needs of the organization in question, stating, for instance, that an organization needs a certain number of nurses, motor drivers, or dietitians. The department will then inform the representative of the organization in this country, who will select the workers needed by the organization abroad and advise them to make application for passports in the usual way.

"The department will be obliged to depend, to a great extent, upon the representative of the organization in this country in selecting only such persons for relief or hospital work as are specially fitted for the tasks which they are to do, and it, therefore, wishes to emphasize the necessity of exercising the utmost care in choosing persons for this work.

"Under this arrangement the department will not require, before granting a passport to a relief worker, that her individual application should have been approved by the organization abroad under which she expects to serve. However, it is deemed desirable for the organizations in the United States, when it is possible, to inform their representatives abroad in advance of the special training and qualifications of the individuals whom they propose to send.

Each applicant, the circular continues, must be at least 25 years of age, and will be required to submit with her passport application a sworn statement that she [illegible] abroad solely for relief work, qualifications which she has for the proposed work, and that she is of sound health and physically capable of performing the work.

At the same time the State Department has taken steps to inquire more closely into the antecedents of all persons seeking passports. Consequently, it will be necessary to make application further in advance than heretofore, in order to insure action before the ship sails.

"Each applicant is required to show to the State Department that his contemplated trip is imperative," said Richard W. Flournoy, Jr., head of the Citizenship Bureau, which has charge of the issuance of passports. "He must support his passport application with documentary evidence proving the necessity of his trip. Each applicant is also investigated by various other offices of the Government in order to establish the applicant's good faith and the true object of his trip abroad. This procedure necessarily takes time, and applicants should accordingly send in their applications at least three weeks prior to their intended departure from New York."

The State Department investigations may require a week, sometimes longer. Of first importance is the loyalty of the person who applies. If there is any question as to this, the passport is, of course, refused. Checking up on the object of requires three days for his visé, indicating that he, too, in each case makes a careful investigation. In addition the passport must be checked up and countersigned by customs officials in New York, for which another forty-eight hours is needed.

Some persons seek passports to Europe on the grounds of health—that a change to Europe is necessary for this reason. There are all kinds of climates in this country and altitudes also, and it should be known, Mr. Flournoy remarked, that this is a most difficult ground upon which to obtain a passport. Physicians' certificates, supported by most careful investigations by the Bureau of Citizenship, are necessary. Without an important reason for going abroad it is a waste of time to apply for a passport, and in addition it adds to the burden of work of the bureau. No passports are now issued to any country in Europe on the ground of pleasure or recreation. This decision was made some months ago, because it was not possible to keep the check required in time of war on the vast number of persons who would go from this country to Europe.

"The number of American civilians in Europe now," said Mr. Flournoy, "is very much less, of course, than in ordinary times, but the work in the Bureau of Citizenship is far greater than ever war the greater number of Americans who went to Europe did not have passports. Passports were not really needed except in Russia, Turkey, or the Balkan countries, or they might have been called for under certain circumstances in Germany. Americans making their first trip to Europe in the days before the war, who carefully provided themselves with passports, usually found on their return that they had made the whole trip without the passports having been called for a single time. However, when the war broke out those who had taken the precaution to provide themselves with passports did not regret it.

Now a passport is needed every day in Europe, perhaps every hour. So the State Department recently changed the form of the passport. It was formerly a good deal like a diploma and folded like one; it was not convenient for the pocket. The new passport folds up into a small compass, and with its strong cardboard back looks like a small pamphlet when so folded. It is designed to be quickly opened when needed. The forgery of it is difficult. It might be said that within the last year only one case of an attempt to forge a passport has been heard of.

There are many good reasons for increased restrictions in issuing passports at this time. One of them will appeal to everybody. This one is the shipping situ-

School Problems as Seen by New Superintendent

Dr. William L. Ettinger Says Double-Sessions Plan Is Only a Makeshift, and the City Must Put Up Many New Buildings

IMPORTANT increases in the plant of the New York City school system and considerable extension of changes in organization already begun are among the immediate problems faced by Dr. William L. Ettinger, just elected Superintendent of the city schools to take the place left vacant by Dr. William H. Maxwell. The new Superintendent, who was born in New York and graduated from Public School 2, and whose entire career except for a few early years at De La Salle Academy has been spent in the city's schools, is best known as the leader in developing prevocational work in the later grades of the elementary schools, and as the author of the so-called "Ettinger plan" of double sessions, which has been regarded as a rival of the Gary system in recent school policy.

But Dr. Ettinger does not regard the Ettinger plan of double sessions as anything but a makeshift to be utilized while adequate accommodations for the school population are being obtained. When spoken to, about three days ago, he said that the beginning of a comprehensive program of building construction, to be carried over a long term of years, was something that ought to be taken up at once.

The matter of prevocational work, or vocational guidance, as it has been more commonly but less precisely called, is on a different plane. The system is now in operation in seven schools in Brooklyn and Queens, serving some three thousand pupils. Its object is to take pupils at the beginning of his seventh school year, at the period when the pupils are approaching the age at which many of them will quit school for good, and by giving them a round of trials in a number of elementary industrial studies to help the boy or girl who must soon go out to work find out what particular occupation he or she most likes and can work at best—or, at any rate, what occupations would be the least congenial. The extension of this system all through the city schools, the carrying on of the alteration of the school system (already begun) from eight grades with a fairly rigid course, topped by four years of academic, technical, and commercial high schools, into a system of six grades with a uniform curriculum, on top of which is a three-year junior high school of prevocational work and a three-year high school of more advanced, specialized, and thorough academic, commercial or technical training—this is one of the principal tasks with which Dr. Ettinger expects to be occupied in the coming years.

"The congestion of the school population," he said, "is a serious problem which will have to be met frankly by the people of New York City. It will be necessary to devise a sane building program to enlarge the physical facilities of the schools, bearing in mind particularly the necessities of elementary education, for the great body of the children who never get beyond the elementary schools ought to receive first attention. This program will have to be extensive, but it must be done in a sane manner, because everybody realizes the stress which the city's financial ability is now undergoing. The pay-as-you-go plan can't handle the building program and catch up with the necessities of school accommodation.

"This is a problem which affects not only the present population of the city, but those who will live here in the future; for we may expect a steady growth in the number of pupils, and any plan must allow for the constant necessity of expansion. And since it concerns New Yorkers of coming generations as well as those of the present, the construction should be spread over a term of years.

"We lack a sufficient number of buildings to house the children properly, and all devices to take care of them in any other way than by providing additional buildings are more or less makeshifts. This applies even to the double-session system with which my own name has been associated. I don't believe that any system calling for duplicate use of building facilities, with the consequent necessity of a program which has the children in constant movement, can give the best type of education. There is no rest, no time for concentration; the attention of the pupils is distracted, some of their energies are used up; whereas, there ought to be an atmosphere of repose about their working hours to insure habits of concentration upon the task."

"Then you regard the so-called 'Ettinger system' as nothing more than a provisional measure?" was asked.

"It was only intended as a means to tide us over till sufficient building facilities could be obtained," replied Dr. Ettinger. "But even as it was, it was far better than the Gary plan, which purported to be a complete system of education based on duplicate use of classrooms."

"What is to be done with the congestion problem while the additional school buildings are being erected?"

"For the time being," said Dr. Ettinger, "we shall have to take care of the children in the best way possible, which will be different in different localities. The plan in any particular district which meets with the approval of the Principal of the school, the District Superintendent, and the community will be the best system for that particular section. There should be no attempt to impose a system on a school without consideration of the ideas of the people who know best, the people actually in charge on the spot. The storm of opposition aroused by the forcible city-wide extension of the Gary plan is the best proof of that."

"What is to be the future of the prevocational work which has been started?"

"I hope we shall find it possible to extend that method very widely and before long to bring it into the entire city under the junior high-school system," Dr. Ettinger answered. "Prevocational work, as we have tried it, is in only a minor degree industrial training; it is rather industrial and vocational education and guidance. In the shops of the prevocational schools the average child is sent from time to time from one shop to another. He gets an opportunity to study several trades, to find out which one he likes, and which one he seems to do well in, as well as which occupations inspire positive dislike or entire lack of interest. An attempt to make the prevocational schools self-maintaining, or anything like it, through the value of their products, misses the point. We try to give the children a chance to learn by trying themselves what work seems best suited to them.

"This work we hope to extend in the installation of the junior high schools with three-year industrial, commercial, and academic courses. A child will be allowed the initial option, at his entry into the junior high school—that is, at the end of the six years of elementary school—of choosing which course he will take, industrial, commercial, or academic. But if actual tryout shows that his aptitude lies in some other direction than the one he has selected, there will be an opportunity for transfer.

Dr. William L. Ettinger, the City's New Superintendent of Schools.

"In the first six years, the elementary school, there must be a marked stressing of the elementary subjects. But differentiation begins with the junior high school. This school is the democratization of education. More than 80 per cent. of the school children of New York must go out into life as soon as they reach the age at which the law will permit. It should consequently be the aim of any scheme of education to provide the proper training for this by far most numerous class. I have said that the junior high school means the democratization of education because, recognizing the fact that these children who come to it may not all be destined to go to high school or college, it tries to differentiate to suit their needs and to make them as efficient as possible for their entrance to the workaday world. The prevocational school gives them some chance to orient themselves; it gives them a little training at least, it enables them to find their way around. It does not turn them out as 'educated derelicts,' to use a term which I have previously employed to describe some of the products of the eight-year elementary schools as we have them at present.

"Languages ought to be taught in the academic and commercial courses of the junior high schools. So far we have had one year of modern language work in the elementary schools, unarticulated with the high-school work and usually of no profit at all. By taking this out of the elementary school and giving a three-year course in the junior high school, we can at least teach the children something useful about modern languages. As taught in the junior high school, these ought to be approached from the practical side—not so much the literary values of French, German, or Spanish as the commercial side, the ability to gain a conversational knowledge. Teach the children to know something about the language and how to use it. This is particularly important for those in the commercial courses.

"The struggle for commercial supremacy will follow the war, and our school graduates ought to be prepared as well as possible. I think we ought to give a preference in language teaching to the languages of our allies, governed, however, by the consideration of practical advantages. For the present, I think, the languages we need most are French and Spanish.

"There is another aspect of technical training which needs early attention—this in the higher and more particularized work of the technical high schools. These must be vocationalized so that their work will be of more practical value, so that the technical part will not be overshadowed by the scholastic side."

"Do you have in mind any changes in the general methods of teaching?"

"As a man with experience as Principal and Superintendent," said Dr. Ettinger, "as a man whose business it has been for a long time to observe teachers, I can say that I never entered a classroom yet without learning something from the teacher. To make a rigid standard of methods is a mistake; a resourceful teacher will often show you that your own particular method, no matter how excellent in theory, is not so well adapted to his specific problem as the plan which he has worked out himself. The method ought to be sound, but a good teacher is more important; and the allowance of free scope for the individual intelligence and initiative of the teachers is one of the most important considerations."

"Then you think a good teacher can do more with a bad method than an incompetent teacher with a good method?"

"A good teacher won't have a bad method," replied Dr. Ettinger. "It may not be such as to fit in with the theories that the supervisor has learned, but the underlying principles may be the same and the differences due to the teacher's skilled application of the principle to particular conditions. Development of the initiative and the ideas of teachers and principals is highly important. If we have a system in which there is complete co-operation between teacher and Superintendent, the problems of teaching are made easy.

"One other thing which is a serious problem to a large part of our teaching staff is the need for salary increases to teachers in the kindergarten and the lower grades. The salaries of the beginning teachers should certainly be increased, in view of the enormous reduction of the purchasing power of money in the last two or three years."

Dr. Ettinger is a graduate (A. B.) of Manhattan College and (M. D.) of the University Medical College. He is the author of a series of successful school readers. His friends know him as a hard worker and an outdoor man. He is a better than average golf player, goes in for boating, and is something of a fisherman.

On the biggest question of the day, the war, he is an extremist. He has been outspoken for preparedness and for ousting disloyal school teachers, and does not hesitate to voice his hostility to any compromise with pacifism or pro-Germanism in city or national affairs. Two of his three sons are on the firing lines in France, and the third is only 15 years old. William L. Ettinger, Jr., of the Ambulance Service, is just out of a base hospital, where he spent many weeks after being gassed in taking a wounded man from the trenches. Albert, the second son, a private in the 165th Infantry, (old 69th of New York,) the regiment that has suffered probably as many casualties as any American unit in France, was under age when he enlisted, and so had to get his father's written consent.

Uncle Sam's Chart Locates Every Ship at Sea

Each Cargo Carrier Is Listed in Shipping Board's Card Catalogue, and Any Government Department Can Find the Vessel It Needs at a Moment's Notice

FROM a window of the building at 45 Broadway, for many years headquarters of the Hamburg-American Line, more recently rendezvous for Privy Councilor Heinrich Albert and a band of German agents, there was observed last week a steamship plowing up the North River. The vessel was camouflaged like a huge toy from some giant's nursery.

Pressing a button on his desk, the observer caused an employe to throw open the door leading into a large room.

"Bring me all the information on the steamship So-and-So," said David Love Ewing, Assistant Director of Operations of the United States Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation.

The clerk slipped out quickly and returned in a few moments bearing a yellow card and a slip of paper. It bore the imprint of one of the Government's bureaus and said that the former German liner had passed Sandy Hook at 9:20 A. M. of that day and Quarantine at 10:10 A. M. The vessel itself passed within view of Mr. Ewing's office at 10:50 A. M., and the information concerning it

"For example: Mr. Hoover wants two ships each to carry 5,000 tons of wheat to the starving Belgians. When this information reaches us, we go to the filing cabinet where cards are kept, and locate by the signals which ships are immediately available, bearing in mind, of course, the proximity of the ships to the ports from which the wheat could be moved most advantageously. In this particular instance it would be New Orleans or one of the other Gulf ports. There would probably be, as is frequently the case, fifteen or twenty ships in the ports which could be used for this errand.

NO NEED OF HYSTERIA OVER SPIES

Government Will Have Problem Well in Hand When Laws Are Stiffened, Without Resort to Indiscriminate Courts-Martial

By ALBERT BUSHNELL HART,
Professor of Government, Harvard University

THE traveler in the parlor car was patiently plowing through a mass of extracts and clippings which he had brought with him, working hour after hour, hardly looking to the right or left, barely aware that there were men in khaki seated in the neighboring chairs or moving up and down the aisle.

Somewhere in the latitude of Bridgeport the train conductor appeared, standing over the writer, and inquired in a fatherly manner:

"Pretty busy, aren't you? What are you doing?"

"Oh, just preparing a patriotic address."

"Some of these military and naval gentlemen have been sort of curious about you. They have looked over your shoulder, and they don't understand all these manila covers and things."

"That's all right. See for yourself. There's nothing mysterious about this."

"Well, I guess it must be all right, a professor [had the military and naval gentlemen also looked into the professor's bag at the end of the car?] and wearing a service pin with two stars. I guess there's no trouble."

"Certainly not, and no offense. No honest man need take umbrage at being asked what he is doing in these times."

Of course it was all right. Yet it is a new sensation to discover that what in peace are the most obvious and innocent actions, may arouse suspicion in time of war. Might not a German spy be taking notes on the vessels building in the slips alongside the track, or the destroyer in New London harbor, or the troop train at New Haven? Though it is to be expected that he would use his cuff as a place of memorandum, rather than a bundle of visible manuscript. Is the country, then, so full of spies that special precautions have to be taken by military and naval gentlemen, and by other official gentlemen with keen eyes and no uniform?

We have the best of reasons for knowing that there is a systematic, organized, continuous secret intelligence service directed by the German Government, and carried on by special German agents, resident Germans, and in some cases by American citizens of German birth or origin. Fortunately, the methodical habits of the German, and especially of the official German, extend to the spies. Whenever a haul is made of their effects, a festering mass of evidence appears, showing that a ramifying Secret Service during the first three years of the war was busy in suborning newspapers and furnishing incendiaries and labor disturbers with means to destroy the lives and property of the citizens of a country that was trying hard to maintain its neutrality.

As far back as 1902, Prince Henry of Prussia made a visit to the United States, which we now know was connected with an effort at secret diplomacy. At that time the writer heard his Royal Highness make a little speech in vernacular English, containing the significant phrase, "We in Germany have been aware of the growth and the greatness of this country; and the one who keeps his eye upon you is his Majesty, my brother, the Emperor."

It is that "keeping his eye upon you" which has aroused the indignation and fury of the American people. We can never forget that Boy-Ed and von Papen, two of the members of the Diplomatic Staff of Germany in this country, and the Austrian Ambassador, Dumba, had to be ejected out of the country for low, unneutral, and scullion practices; that the despicable von Igel was the creature of those enemies of the Republic; that Bopp, Austrian Consul General at San Francisco, had to go to prison.

The country is on the qui vive whenever there is a rumor of German plots.

Yet Attorney General Gregory, who is practically the Chief of the Secret Service, declares that there is no evidence of considerable fires caused by alien enemies; that "every possible effort is being made to ferret out and punish activities of this character, and that * * * the department has accepted the services and to a great extent supervises the activities of more than 200,000 citizens of proved loyalty, systematically organized throughout the country as an auxiliary to the work of the department."

Of course there are German spies in this country, official and unofficial, paid and gratis, educated and studied. Earlier and also in this crisis German spies in various countries have shown an intention of backing up words with deeds; for instance, recommending that a factory be blown up, and then carrying out their own recommendation. So that it is hard to distinguish between the scooper-up of information and the active criminal. This uncertainty leads to some errors. A large number of persons have discovered pounded glass in confectionery, and apparently are somewhat disappointed when microscopial examination shows crystals of sugar instead of glass. The trouble is that we know the Germans have procured the placing of bombs on board merchant ships, sailing while we were at peace from the harbor of New York; and we infer that the same men would use pounded glass if they had the chance.

To prevent or punish this combination of collecting information to the injury of the conduct of the war, with the destruction of property and lives, there exists a complex legislation, State and national. Many of the States have on their statute books sedition laws which can be and are frequently applied to dangerous or obstreperous persons. For example, Mary Tekah, 57 years old, was arrested on March 27, and locked up in the East 126th Street Police Station, New York, on complaint that she was flying a German flag, though she explained that she had "washed the German flag and hung it out to dry." Subsequently she pulled in an American flag and threw it on the floor, saying, "To hell with the American flag, I want my own flag." Decision: six months in jail!

Up to the present war the United States has had no national sedition act since the expiration in 1801 of the famous and unfortunate Sedition act of 1798; but the place has been adequately filled by the Espionage act of June 15, 1917; the pending act to punish the destruction or injury of war material and war transportation, and the act of May 18, 1917, to authorize the President to increase temporarily the military establishment of the United States. In addition there are the acts for punishing treason, which offense, however, is by the text of the Constitution confined to "levying war against the United States, or adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." If those laws are inadequate for a proper proof and trial, should we be better off with Senator Chamberlain's proposition that provides punishment for "injuring and destroying the things and utilities prepared or adapted for the use of the land and naval forces of the United States"?

The basis for this proposal is the assertion that all this panoply of law is fatally ineffective, because prosecutions are not sufficiently active and because the penalties are too weak. In fact, the newspapers abound in accounts of the capture of spies or supposed spies on board incoming steamers, or after arrival from abroad or wandering about. As for trials, on April 7 it was recorded that six Germans had the day before been sentenced to prison for terms ranging from two years with $5,000 fine, down to six months with $500 fine for conspiring to blow up with bombs merchant vessels carrying munitions. One other prisoner, Captain Fritzen, a German officer, was convicted of conspiring to blow up the Welland Canal. A few days ago it was also announced that Dr. Carl Buenz, who, as head of the Hamburg-American Line in this country, attempted to ship supplies from New York to German cruisers, contrary to the neutrality laws, was about to take up his sojourn for two years at the Federal prison of Atlanta.

Two serious weaknesses in the Government prosecution of spies and plotters are here revealed: the first is what one would be tempted to call a scandalous arrest of justice, were it not that United States courts are above criticism. Dr. Buenz was convicted of his crime two years ago and stayed out of prison under bail on the ground of "ill-health." The other defect is the infantile penalties attached to such crimes as conspiring to blow up ships and destroy routes of transportation.

Of course, these convictions are under the law that prevailed previous to the breaking out of war between Germany and the United States; but the Espionage act of June 15 last also lacks teeth, inasmuch as it makes the penalty for obtaining information, for making photographs of military structures, or communicating confidential documents "a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than two years, or both." Transfer of such information to a foreign Government in time of peace would raise the penalty to twenty years which in time of war could be increased to the death penalty.

So far as Senator Chamberlain's bill, which he has now withdrawn, aimed to make the penalties for betrayal of trust and injury to the United States more suited to the crime, it should have been supported; but the main purpose of his proposition was to provide, not so much a different penalty, as a different court; by enacting that not only persons engaged in spying operations but those "guilty of causing or attempting to cause insubordination or refusal of duty," or of "transmitting or printing or publishing" any written or printed matter which "shall support or favor the cause of the enemy country or of its allies in the war, or which shall oppose the cause of the United States therein, or which shall contain any false reports or false

When Cannibals Got German Officers

Native German East African Soldiers Fighting Under a German Officer.

WITH the close of the East African campaign, which began early in 1915, German East Africa, one of the Kaiser's richest overseas possessions, passed from the German Empire, and thus ended one of the most bitterly contested colonial campaigns of the war.

This colony, with its coast line of approximately 620 miles and an estimated area of 384,000 square miles, was defended by about 50,000 native troops, highly trained, equipped with machine guns, and commanded by some 3,000 German officers. Moreover, they had modern ordnance, occupied almost impregnable positions, and were well supplied with provisions and ammunition.

All that now remains of these troops are a few shattered detachments that escaped from the colony when it fell into the hands of the allied East African forces and took refuge in a wild and rugged section of adjacent Portuguese territory. Here they are making a last stand. Notwithstanding the dense tropical vegetation that covers the region, these fugitives are being hunted down like beasts of the jungle, and utter extermination seems to be their inevitable fate. A dispatch to London reporting operations in the region up to the middle of April showed that those still holding out were being hard pressed by British and Portuguese forces.

A German officer who recently fell into the hands of a detachment of Portuguese troops told the story of his experience after escaping from German East Africa in command of a body of Askaris, or native soldiers: He and two other German officers, with twenty-two Askaris, had hidden themselves in a jungle. When their rations ran out and ammunition was nearly exhausted the natives became insubordinate, and it was necessary to shoot three of them. The situation came to a climax when the remaining nineteen Askaris attacked and overcame the three Europeans. The German officer's two comrades were immediately put to death and eaten by the natives. He was an eyewitness, of the gruesome disposition of the bodies of his fellow-officers and escaped their fate only because he was suffering from blackwater fever at the time of the mutiny.

The German officer said that these same Askaris had fought under him most loyally during the entire East African campaign.

Today Is 100th Anniversary of Marx's Birth

Bitterly Opposed to Prussia and an Ardent Admirer of America—His Record Shows Where He Would Have Stood in the Present War

By JOHN SPARGO

THE world war will greatly lessen the impressiveness of the celebration by the Socialists of all lands of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Karl Marx, which occurs today. There will be celebrations in many cities in this and other countries by Socialist organizations, but there will be no great international celebration such as would have been held but for the war. There will not even be a great national commemoration of the event by the Socialists of any country; the war has torn and strained the Socialist parties and destroyed their enthusiasm.

Nevertheless, the Marx centennial is an event of importance which merits serious commemoration. Few men have more profoundly influenced the life and thought of their own and succeeding generations than the great author of "Das Kapital," upon whom the world has, with questionable accuracy, conferred the title "Father of Modern Socialism." Millions of men and women in all civilized countries have been proud to call themselves disciples of Marx, and upon his teachings one of the greatest political movements in history has been based. In exposition of his theories and views many thousands of books and pamphlets have been written in all the languages of civilization. In the Parliaments of the great nations his inspiration has been profoundly felt.

Karl Heinrich Marx was born on the 5th of May, 1818, in Treves, (at that time called Trier,) the ancient city of the Rhine Province founded by the Romans, which during the present year has been so frequently and seriously bombed by British aviators in reprisal for German aerial raids on London and other British cities. Until four years prior to the birth of Marx, Treves belonged to France, having come under Prussian rule after the crushing defeat of Napoleon I. and the restoration of Louis XVIII. During the French régime liberalism prevailed in the Rhineland, and the Jews enjoyed a measure of freedom and equality with their Christian neighbors, which speedily disappeared when Prussian rule was established. Prussian patriotism soon came to imply anti-Semitism. To these facts we may fairly attribute Marx's lifelong admiration for France and his hatred and contempt for the Prussian system.

Heinrich Marx, father of the great Socialist, was a lawyer and Justice of the Peace, a man of great learning, liberal in philosophy and religion but conservative, and even reactionary, in politics. "Mordechai" was the real patronymic of the family, but for some reason it was abandoned by Heinrich's father, who was a rabbi. In 1824, when the future revolutionary leader was 6 years old, Heinrich Marx embraced Christianity and was baptized, together with his wife and children.

Henriette Marx, wife of Heinrich and mother of Karl, was a native of Holland, of Hungarian-Jewish descent, and to the day of her death spoke no other language than Dutch, except enough broken German to make herself intelligible to her neighbors.

Karl Marx studied at the Universities of Bonn and Berlin, and in 1841 the University of Jena granted him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, conferred "in absentia," for a dissertation on the Epicurean philosophy. During his student days he became engaged to Jenny von Westphalen, a playmate of his boyhood, daughter of Baron von Westphalen, a high Prussian official, a half-Scot, distantly related to the Duke of Argyll. Much of his time while at the university young Marx spent in writing poetry. It was his ambition to become "the great Prussian poet." Such examples of his verse as have been preserved do not manifest any great poetical gift.

In the Summer of 1843 Marx and the beautiful and gifted Jenny were married, and after a brief honeymoon went to Paris, where Marx at once became the centre of a brilliant group of radical intellectuals. In the group were Heinrich Heine, George Sand, Proudhon, and Michael Bakunin, the stormy petrel of the Russian revolutionary movement. The friendship of Heine for Marx and his beautiful young bride was tender and affectionate. In 1845 Marx was expelled from France, and for three years resided in Brussels, returning to Paris again in 1848. The February Revolution took place just after the Belgian Government had served notice of expulsion upon Marx and his family. His stay in Paris was very brief, however. With his great co-worker, Friedrich Engels, he hastened to Germany to participate in the revolutionary uprising there. At this time he made the acquaintance of that other great and picturesque Socialist, Ferdinand Lassalle.

Karl Marx.

Summarily expelled from the Fatherland early in 1849, Marx again went to Paris with his little family, but was not permitted to remain there long. The June Revolution failed, and Marx was ordered to leave Paris with his family in twenty-four hours. He sought refuge in England, arriving in London in June, 1849. Except for brief journeys to the Continent and one visit to Algeria for his health, he spent all the rest of his life an exile in England, where he died March 14, 1883. Much of the time he and his family endured terrible poverty. The literature of poverty contains few accounts of misery more heartrending than those to be found in the diaries and letters of Mrs. Marx. That some of her children perished from lack of food is evident. But throughout all their privations the devotion of Marx and his wife to each other was never dimmed. Sometimes the foes of the movement of the masses sought to take advantage of Marx's poverty and to silence his revolutionary ardor by offering him lucrative employment. The wily Bismarck offered to let Marx name his own salary if he would accept the chief editorship of the great Chancellor's personal organ. None of these attempts ever succeeded; Marx was incorruptible.

It is well known that socialism first came to Marx in a semi-religious garb. The "New Christianity" of Saint-Simon captivated his mind and heart. In the writings of Saint-Simon are to be found the germs of the most important elements of Marxian Socialist theory. How far Marx is entitled to be called an "original thinker" is a subject upon which opinions will always differ. There can be no doubt that he was indebted to Saint-Simon. Perhaps he was even more indebted to that almost forgotten thinker, A. P. J. M. Barnave, who perished by the guillotine in 1793. Barnave, a collected edition of whose works appeared in Paris in 1843, just about the time Marx and his bride arrived there, anticipated both Marx and Herbert Spencer in developing the theory of social evolution. He pointed out that the determining factor in social evolution is economic, not moral or ideological, and showed how class struggles shape and direct human progress. Thus he anticipated the great fundamental Marxian doctrines of economic determinism and class conflict. But it is to Marx that the credit belongs of making these ideas the inspiration of a great movement, the faith and spirit of a passionate struggle. In that sense he was a great creative thinker—one of the greatest of all time.

For many years the terms "Marxism" and "socialism" were regarded as synonymous. The great Socialist leaders in the Parliaments called themselves "Marxists," and the words of Marx were held to be almost infallible. The movement has, indeed, been more Marxist than Marx himself was. Indeed, Marx was fond of saying, "I am no Marxist." In recent years this Marx-worship has declined. Close criticism of the Marxian theories and generalizations have revealed many flaws. The rise of the Revisionist school of Socialists, led by Bernstein, in 1899, marked the beginning of a conscious abandonment of Marx by a considerable part of the Socialist movement. The great war seems destined to mark the close of the era of Marxism in Socialist history. The Socialist movement will be rehabilitated; peace and the demobilization of the armies will certainly bring a great growth of socialism in all countries, but it will not be the doctrinaire socialism of Marx. It will not be concerned with theories of social evolution or abstract economics. The centennial of Marx's birth may be regarded, at the same time, as the end of Marxian socialism.

Because Marx wrote in the famous "Communist Manifesto" that "the workingmen have no country," and because he was a strong advocate of internationalism, it has been generally supposed that Marx did not believe in nations or nationalism. This is a profound misconception. Even the context of the words just quoted from the "Communist Manifesto" makes it clear that Marx believed in a healthy and generous nationalism. He was a bitter and relentless foe of Prussian militarism and autocracy, but he was nevertheless an intense German nationalist. He believed, above all else, in the unification of Germany. When, at the time of the Franco-Sardinian war for Italian independence, Lassalle and other German radicals held that Prussia should permit Austria to be crushed, Marx took an opposite view. Despite his belief in Italian independence and his hatred of the Austrian dynasty, he opposed the view of Lassalle, and favored support of Austria by Prussia, because he believed the war on Austria was a Franco-Russian intrigue to weaken Germany.

In 1870 he again proved himself to be a strong German nationalist. Utterly opposed as he was to Bismarck, and vigorously condemning the provocative policy of the Iron Chancellor, when war began he favored a policy of supporting the Prussian Government. Liebknecht and Bebel, Socialist representatives in the North German Parliament at that time, difered in their views, and Marx differed from both of them. Bebel could not bring himself to vote against the war credits, since that would be, in effect, taking sides with Napoleon III. On the other hand, to vote the credits would be, in effect, taking sides with Bismarck. Therefore, he favored abstention from voting. Liebknecht, on the other hand, wanted to vote against the credits. Marx believed that the war should be vigorously prosecuted until the downfall of Napoleon and the rise of French democracy. He believed that such a policy would end in the unification of Germany on the one hand and the democratization of France on the other.

Asked by the German Party Executive to give his views on this subject, Marx laid down the following principles:

1. The party should take part in the national movement so long as it kept to German defense and did not become a war of aggression.

2. The fact should be kept before the public that German national interests are not the same as Prussian dynastic interests, which must be opposed.

3. Any attempt to annex Alsace-Lorraine or other French territory should be actively opposed.

4. As soon as a democratic government was established in France—preferably a republican government—the party should work for an honorable peace with it.

5. The essential unity and solidarity of German and French workingmen should be kept in view.

6. Attention should be kept fastened upon the menace of Russia in the political background.

When the war ceased to be a war of defense and became one of conquest, Marx, the internationalist, could no longer support it. Three days after Sedan the German Social Democratic Party issued a manifesto, which was prepared by Marx, setting forth that, although "so long as the mercenaries of Napoleon threatened Germany" it was their duty "as Germans to defend the independence of the Fatherland," it was now their duty to recognize that, with the empire overthrown and a republic established in France, Germany must make an honorable and generous peace; that it was the duty of the German Socialists to oppose all annexations of French territory. The manifesto solemnly warned the people of Germany that the conquest of Alsace and Lorraine would lead inevitably to an alliance between France and Russia and to a general European war, beginning as a war of Russia and France against Germany. Such a war was, Marx believed, inevitable, "except in the doubtful event of a Russian revolution."

Four days after this remarkable document was issued in Germany the General Council of the International issued from London another manifesto written by Marx, in which the following significant paragraphs appeared:

> Do the Teutonic patriots seriously believe that the independence, liberty, and peace of Germany may be secured by driving France into the arms of Russia?
> If the luck of arms, the arrogance of success, and the intrigue of the dynasties lead to the robbing of French territory, then there are only two ways open for Germany.
> It either must pursue the dangerous course of being a tool for Russian aggrandizement, a policy which coincides with the traditions of the Hohenzollern, or it must, after a short pause, prepare itself for a new "defensive" war—not one of those new-fangled "localized" wars, but a race war, a war with the united Slav and Latin races. This is the peace prospect held out by the brainless patriots of the German middle class.

Germany's Financial Weakness

the notes of this central bank have increased from about 500 millions of dollars to almost 3,700 millions, and its floating advances to the Austro-Hungarian Government total nearly seven billions of dollars!

"It is clear, then, that Germany's policy (and Austria's as well) has been to raise all the money needed hy paper issues, regardless of inflation or depreciation of the currency. The value of the mark has fallen, and it is plain that one of Germany's greatest problems after the war is to restore the mark to its normal value in international exchange. If Germany is not already bankrupt, as many think she is, it will be nothing short of miraculous if she escapes bankruptcy when she undertakes to resume trade relations after the war. During the war she can apparently hold down the lid by main strength, but when once that ruthless war power is ended, many people look to see that lid blown sky high."

Here Mr. Lamont called attention to the grave danger of overemphasizing Germany's weakness in financial policies and underrating her strength in material resources.

"I think," he said, "that, in dwelling so much on Germany's weak hanking situation and upon her dangerous financial practices, I have given you a wrong impression. Let me say again that these weaknesses, which I have described are likely to have a baleful effect on Germany after the war; but they are not the factors that will end the war. For instance, ever since Germany's commercial and financial communications with the rest of the world were cut off, a great many people have believed that she would steadily grow weaker and eventually be forced into submission by sheer exhaustion.

"I'm afraid we overemphasize Germany's financial weakness and underrate her strength in the things that really count. While we have been watching the value of the mark fall, we have overlooked the men and the guns and the supplies with which battles are really fought. It doesn't matter so much how you raise money during the war as long as you get what you need to fight and win the battles. The financial program is subordinate to military necessity. You may have to worry about it after the war—but that is another story.

"Take a few instances in past history. England's bankruptcy was freely predicted in the early days of the Napoleonic wars. She didn't break; she fought on through those twenty years till victory was hers. Take the war of the American Revolution. The thirteen colonies had no funds in their treasuries at all. Yet they fought through eight years of war on paper money of their own manufacture, which, before the end of the war, fell 99 per cent. But they fought on to victory. When the civil war broke out, the Federal Treasury was empty, and in the Fall of 1861 a panic was in full swing, the Government had practically no credit, and it was next to impossible to raise money. But the war was fought through to victory, and again the manufacture of paper money played an important part in the financial program.

"And so," added Mr. Lamont, "I think it is high time for America to forget completely any idea that peace will come through the financial collapse of Germany. We must focus our attention and energies on the problem of proving to Germany that, despite such military advantages as she has gained, she can never hope in the long run to withstand the combined resources and power and determination of the Allies. Germany has been preparing and organizing for war for decades past. Her campaigns of conquest were planned to provide her with the men and materials for pushing her conquests still further. It has been stated, and there seems no reason to question the accuracy of the statement, that ten days before war was declared Germany sent two army corps to occupy the Lorraine iron fields along the frontier, where they mounted batteries and got ready for action; and, a few days later, German troops, before war was declared, occupied the iron district in the neutral territory of Luxemburg and crossed into France to occupy the French iron district at Longwy. Without these iron fields Germany could never, I believe, have carried on the war. This is simply one sample of her foresight.

"So I repeat that we must realize, and act upon the realization, that we are not fighting an enemy about to collapse, but an enemy strong in all the things that count in winning battles."

Mr. Lamont pointed out the great advantage Germany had in the matter of transport. Her railways and transport facilities have been designed and developed along lines adapted to military uses. The lines radiate from the producing centres to all parts of the frontier. She can move troops and supplies with dispatch to any part of the front and from one front to another.

"Contrast that great advantage," he said, "with the enormous disadvantages under which the Allies are fighting. France has defended herself against Germany notwithstanding the loss of most of her iron and steel-producing territory. England and France, even more than Italy and Russia, have had to rely on supplies from overseas to carry on the war. And now America, coming into the fight—thank Heaven that it is not too late!—sends her armies 3,000 miles across the water and must maintain a transport system which must unfailingly supply her armies and the armies of her allies at that enormous distance.

"To America I say: 'Seek no comfort, find no false security, in the supposed weakness of our enemies, hut summon all your strength to give hattle to an adversary whose defeat will tax your powers to the utmost.' America has the strength and the resources. But she must bring them all to bear—and swiftly, at that—if she is to prove decisively to Germany that the German dream of world-dominion is over forever."

The Ultimate Outlook for Peace

many hy aircraft and the eventual downfall of European civilization. For another war between the great European powers is—without any exaggeration—something which civilized human society cannot survive.

Secondly, there may be the same end as in Russia. The Governments may be unable either to win a conclusive victory or to conclude a clean peace. They may drift as they are now drifting. In that case the misery of the world will grow and grow till it becomes intolerable. The masses in Russia, where things were worst, already feel that they have suffered long enough; they have been beaten, wounded, starved, frozen, kicked, bludgeoned, and treated as cannon-food long enough; and now they are ready to kill any one who will not leave them alone, and to rob any one who seems to have food or clothes. The same spirit is already astir in Poland and in parts of Austria. If we go on long enough it will march westward, and nation after nation go down in mire and blood; not in a noble revolution for the sake of high principles, but in a miserable anarchy produced by sufferings that were too great to bear and by the inability of Europe's rulers to cope with a situation that has outgrown them.

Thirdly, there is a reasoned peace. There may be good peaces and bad; the test of them is to see whether they are based on justice or on force, and how far they set up a tendency toward another war. But the chief test of all is this: That the peace must represent, not the haggling of so many hostile powers, each trying to overreach the other, but the co-operative effort of honest statesmen from all the nations to find a means of escape from a situation which has become intolerahle to all of them. We want not to haggle, hut to co-operate. That is the essential point. And, of course, we cannot co-operate as long as any one of the great powers of Europe is openly or secretly militarist in its aims.

We all know that Germany at present is militarist. Read von Hertling's speech; read Kühlmann's explanation of it. Read the lessons drawn from the great war by General von Freytag-Loringhoven. It is perfectly clear that they all regard peace as the starting-off ground for the next struggle, a struggle first of swindling diplomacy and ultimately of another war, but a war in which they shall be "better armed and better prepared" than in this! While that Government lasts there can be no peace.

And what of the other Governments? It is not polite to discuss the Governments of our Allies, and it is very undesirable to weaken by small or captious criticisma the authority of our own. But this is not a small question. It is the question of all others. And unless our own War Cabinet can convince the nation that it is sound on this vital point, that its aim is honestly the Peace of the World and not the military and economic advantage of the British Empire, it ought to be changed.

That is the peace we need; a peace by co-operation, in which the basis shall not be the so-called "right of conquest" nor any similar bedlamite self-contradiction, but, firstly, the will of the governed, and, secondly, the interest of Europe and mankind. I will not go into details on this point, which needs, of course, careful consideration and careful statement. But, as soon as any idea of co-operation, or even of just agreement between the warring nations is started, it becomes absolutely necessary to find or create some impartial international body. There must be some tribunal to which points of difference can be referred. There must, I think, also be some place of discussion, some sort of international parliament, in which international questions may be discussed and treated before they grow dangerous. There must be some permanent machinery by which the separate Governments in future may meet each other in a calm atmosphere; not the atmosphere of diplomacy in which each nation tries to overreach its neighbor, hut the atmosphere of public right in which people try to find the just decision. There must, in fact, be a League of Nations.

The League of Nations is wanted, because the nations must be related to each other in some way; and if they are not in one league they will be in two leagues, each intriguing against the other; or in three or more, when the intrigues will merely be thicker on the ground and more complicated. We must have a League of Nations because without a league we cannot either come to an agreement or afterward maintain that agreement as a permanent and living thing, changing with needs of the times. Without a League of Nations we cannot agree. And we must agree, because if we do not agree we perish.

100th Anniversary of Marx's Birth

by the circumference of the square miles conquered from France, but by the intensity of the crime of having re-established in the second half of the nineteenth century the policy of conquest.

Marx was no pacifist. Like all radicals, he was in general a lover of peace. He hated militarism with all the fierce passion of which he was so magnificently capable. There was never a time, however, when he was willing to endure tyranny for the sake of peace; never a time when he was not willing to wage war for the advancement of liberty and democracy. Always he asked himself whether a particular war, or the triumph of one or the other side in a particular war, made for human progress or against it. If the answer was in the affirmative he was in favor of that war. On at least one occasion he labored with might and main to cause war.

In 1853, when Russia made war upon Turkey and marched her troops into the Danube principalities, the English aristocracy openly sided with Russia, but a considerable section of the people demanded that England intervene in the war against Russia. Under the leadership of Richard Cobden and John Bright a great pacifist agitation arose. Marx, on the other hand, stirred himself to create on the part of the radical workingmen of England a demand for war against Russia. His assaults upon Cobden and Bright were characterized by all his genius for invective. They were "the hypocritical, phrase-mongering, squint-eyed set of Manchester humbugs"; Cobden had "all the sharp ingenuity and fair sincerity of the monomaniac, with all the contradictions of the idealogue and with all the calculating cowardice of the shopkeeper"; Cobden and Bright were averse to war "not so much out of real love of peace as from a narrowness and timidity of mind which holds in horror all great crises and all decisive action." When at last the Government was, much against its will, forced to intervene in the war, to a large extent in consequence of the agitation which Marx engineered, the great Socialist kept on prodding the Government and agitating for a more vigorous and efficient prosecution of the war. He was the author of a resolution which was adopted at many great meetings of working people pledging themselves to war and declaring that "before liberty is established peace would be a crime."

Marx advocated war upon the Russia of 1853 because he believed that thereby the Russian autocracy would be overthrown and democracy strengthened throughout Europe. Pacifism and reaction were, in the circumstances, one and indivisible. For the same reason he gloried in the war against the Confederate States. It is not so well known as it ought to be that to Marx, more than to any other single influence, must be attributed that great successful movement of the working people of England in sympathy with the North which made it impossible for the Government of Palmerston to declare war against the Union and intervene on the side of the Confederacy. The great agitation among the working people of England, many thousands of whom were suffering severe privations through the closing of British factories unable to obtain American cotton, all through 1862-63, was inspired by Karl Marx. He it was who suggested, and in many cases drafted, the remarkable series of resolutions which gave so much comfort and inspiration to President Lincoln. But for that agitation the Union cause would almost certainly have been lost.

In 1864, when the famous International Workingmen's Association was formed, under the leadership of Marx, its first action was a renewal of the agitation in support of the Northern States of America. Seizing the opportunity offered by Lincoln's re-election, the General Council of the International Workingmen's Association, composed of the men who had carried on the earlier agitation, renewed the fight against the attitude of the manufacturers and the Government. A brilliant address to Abraham Lincoln was written by Marx and adopted by the General Council. From one of Marx's letters we know that Lincoln personally replied to this address, but unfortunately no copy of the reply seems to have been preserved. Of course, Lincoln's replies to the workingmen of Manchester and London in the previous year are well known.

Karl Marx was a great friend of America. He rendered this nation a service of inestimable value, for which he deserves lasting honor at the hands of the American people. He was an ardent admirer of Lincoln, as the address to Lincoln in 1864 and that to President Andrew Johnson in the following year, abundantly prove. He rejoiced in the final triumph of the Union cause. He approved of the war as a great struggle for liberty and democracy, and scorned the pacifists upon both sides of the Atlantic who demanded a premature peace. To his friends in this country, German Socialists, he wrote urging that they give whole-hearted support to the war. The manner in which the German workingmen's societies responded to the call of the Union is well known.

It is not so well known that Marx was a profound student of American history and that he wrote extensively upon the civil war and upon Anglo-American relations at that time. To one Austrian journal, the Presse of Vienna, he wrote from 1861 to 1863 a remarkable series of articles on American conditions which reveal him as a profound student of our history and politics. In the first of the long series of articles, dated London, Oct. 20, 1861, and published in the Vienna Presse five days later, Marx analyzes the conditions that led to the war. His point of view is expressed in the following sentences:

> As we see, the entire movement was and is based upon the question of slavery. Not in the sense whether or not the slaves within the existing slave States should be emancipated, but whether the 20,000,000 freemen of the North should continue to submit to an oligarchy of 300,000 slaveholders; whether the immense territories of the Republic should become nurseries of free Commonwealths or of slavery; finally, whether the national policy of the Union should adopt as its slogan the armed propaganda of slavery throughout Mexico and Central and South America.

Having regard to his life's record, we are justified in believing that, if Marx were alive today, he would hold in scorn those Socialists who, in the name of Socialist Internationalism, have proclaimed their opposition to America's participation in the great struggle for freedom, democracy, and that independence and integrity of nations without which there can be no internationalism.

The Salvation Army "Over There"

THERE has been such an outpouring of men, women, boys, supplies, and equipment across the seas that public attention has not taken in all the details of this immense conglomeration of cargo, and the little girl with the tambourine has slipped across unnoticed.

She is on the battlefront, scores of her, and she is wearing not the familiar dark blue serge and poke bonnet to match that of the Salvation Army, but a natty suit of khaki. The Salvation Army girl has ventured so near the front that, under General Pershing's orders, she has added to her millinery a gas mask. When this conflict is over, the value of what she is doing will receive greater publicity. She and her companions live in little huts back of the fighting line. Here they make doughnuts, cakes, and coffee which they serve free to returning soldiers. They mend rents in the soldier's clothes, sew on buttons, write letters to his folks back home, and when there is a battle, they are among the first to minister to the wounded.

Traits That Wreck Children's Lives

BY RALPH S. THOMPSON

It is sometimes difficult for the parent to realize the effect on a child's entire life that some little unpleasant or naughty trait may lead to.

And yet it is easy to see how this works, for character is nothing more than a set of established habits, and the little naughty trait that seems trivial in childhood often develops into a habit that makes a big black mark on that child's character when it grows up.

Little traits of disobedience and willfulness often grow into serious habits which wreck parents' nerves and children's lives.

Disobedience, ill-temper, jealousy, selfishness, fear, untruthfulness and other childish characteristics must be cured and the corresponding good traits substituted. Unless this is done successfully in each and every instance the child will not develop into the man or woman of your hopes.

New Methods

There is now a new system of child training which has completely revolutionized old methods, founded upon the principle that confidence is the basis of control.

Under this new system children who have been well-nigh unmanageable become obedient and willing, and such traits as bashfulness, jealousy, fear, bragging, etc., are overcome. But the system goes deeper than that, for it instills high ideals and builds character, which is of course the goal of all parents' efforts in child training.

Do You Know How—to instruct children in the delicate matters of sex?

to always obtain cheerful obedience?
to correct mistakes of early training?
to keep child from crying?
to suppress temper in children without punishment?
to discourage the "Why" habit in regard to commands?
to prevent quarreling and fighting?
to deal with supersensitive child?
to cure impertinence? Discourtesy? Vulgarity?
to remove fear of darkness? Fear of thunder and lightning? Fear of harmless animals?
to encourage child to talk?
to teach child instantly to comply with command "Don't touch"?
to inculcate respect for elders?
to engender interest in work or study?
to teach honesty and truthfulness?
to cultivate clearness of speech and thought?
to break a child of sucking thumb?
to prevent fickleness? Jealousy? Selfishness?

These are only a few of the hundreds of questions fully answered.

Physical punishment, shouted commands, and other barbarous relics of the old system have no place in this modern system. Children are made comrades, not slaves; are helped, not punished. And the results are nothing short of marvelous.

Instead of a hardship, child training becomes a genuine pleasure, as the parent shares every confidence, every joy and every sorrow of the child, and at the same time has its unqualified respect. This is a situation rarely possible under old training methods.

To put in practice these new ideas in child training, strange as it may seem, takes less time than the old method. It is simply a question of applying principles founded on a scientific study of human nature, going at it in such a way as to get immediate results without friction.

The founder of this new system is Professor Ray C. Beery, A.B., M.A. (Harvard and Columbia), who has written a complete Course in Practical Child Training. This Course is based on Professor Beery's extensive investigations and wide practical experience, and provides a well-worked-out plan which the parent can easily follow. The Parents Association, a national organization devoted to improving the methods of child training, has adapted the Beery system and is teaching the Course to its members by mail.

Nothing Else Like It

Membership in the Parents Association entitles you to a complete course of lessons in child training by Professor Beery. These lessons must not be confused with the hundreds of books on child training which leave the reader in the dark because of vagueness and lack of definite and practical application of the principles laid down. It does not deal in glittering generalities. Instead, it shows by concrete illustrations and detailed explanations exactly what to do to meet every emergency and how to accomplish immediate results and make a permanent impression. No matter whether your child is still in the cradle or is eighteen years old, this course will show how to apply the right methods at once. You merely take up the particular trait, turn to the proper page, and apply the lessons to the child. You are told exactly what to do. You cannot begin too soon, for the child's behavior in the first few years of life depends on the parent, not on the child.

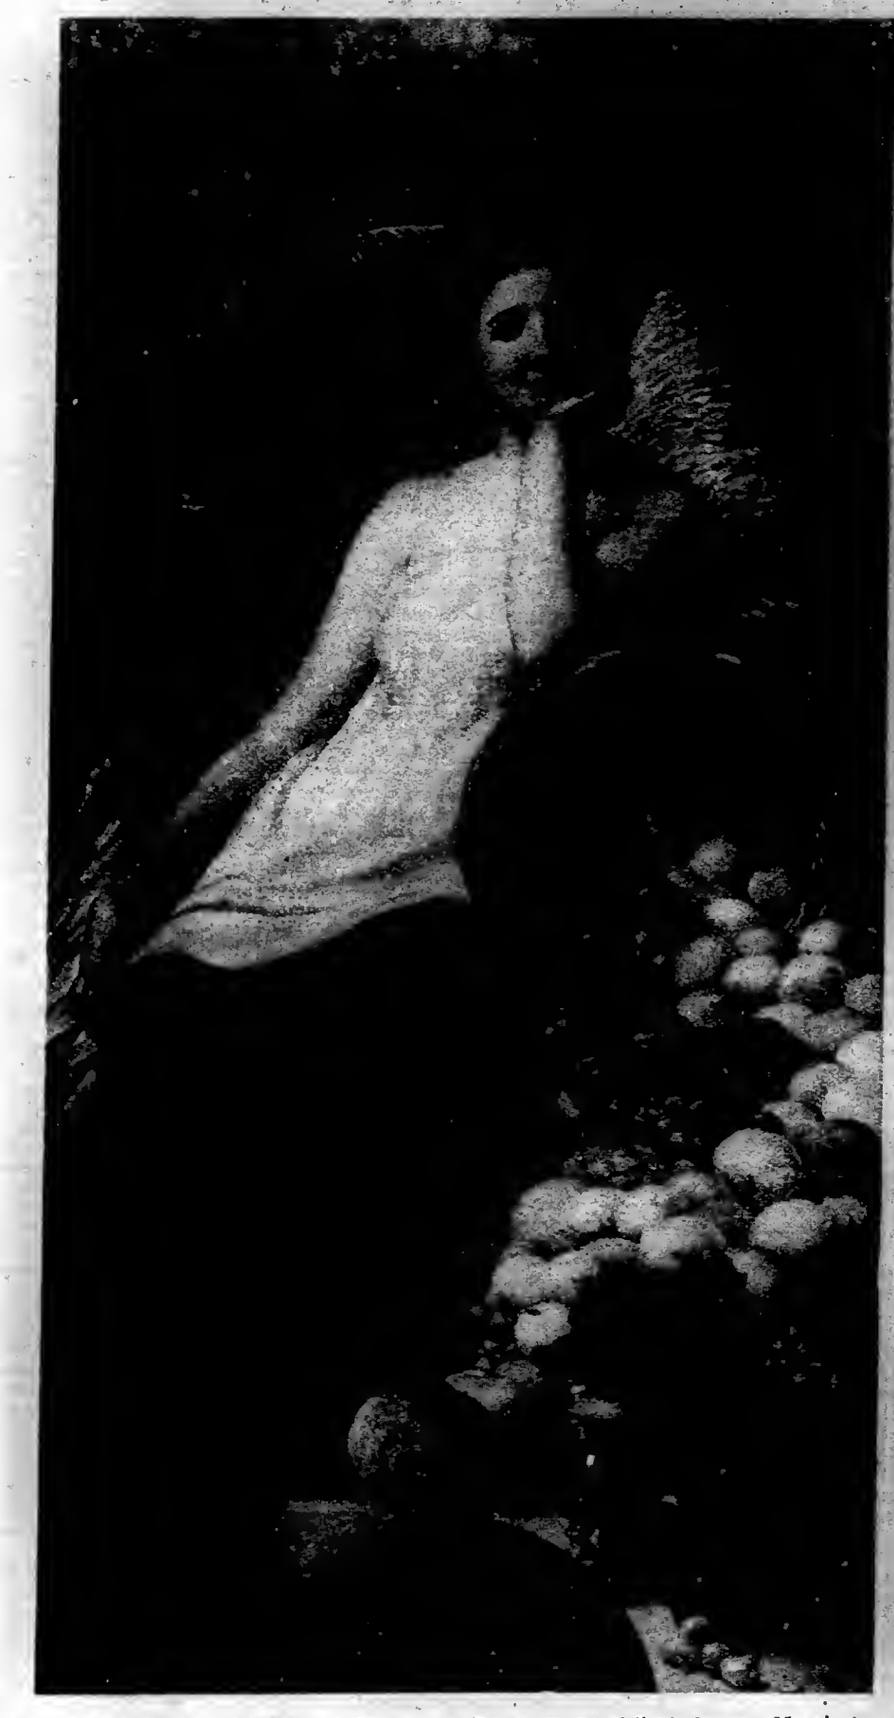
American Industrial Art Shown in Textiles

Art at Home and Abroad



"Abundance," from the Painted Cartoon by Edwin H. Blashfield, for the Mosaic to be Placed Above a Fountain at the Entrance to Queensboro Bridge.

THE National Textile Exhibition at the Grand Central Palace speaks to the imagination of the public in the announcement that it covers the progress of the woven fabric from the spinning wheel to the mill. The spinning wheel with all its charming and homely associations belongs essentially to the past, as does the hand loom. The machine has come to meet the great and constantly increasing needs of a wide-flung civilization demanding prompt and multitudinous satisfactions. The wonders of machinery have been sufficiently applauded, and the subtle mystery of an efficient mechanical device performing at high speed, and with mechanical accuracy, the work formerly done laboriously by human hands, appeals to all but the very few who cling to the personal expression of the craftsman in the exercise of his craft as no less a mystery and a more sympathetic source of pleasure. What is not yet recognized is that art is entirely capable of adjustment to the medium of machinery. We have had much to discourage this belief. We have had machinery making endless repetitions of inartistic designs, and of artistic designs unsuited to their destination. We have had patterns borrowed from metal work and woven in silk, and lace patterns cheerfully carried out in iron and brass—a fundamental lapse of taste and artistic conscience by no means confined to the machine worker, however. And in a confused reaction against this glib readiness of the machine to do whatever might be asked of it, certain designs have been made requiring an apparent awkwardness and carelessness of the machine to simulate the free work of the hand. All this, of course, has been very trying, since it has been the outcome of the false idea that the machine should produce an art identical with that produced by handicraft.

The true idea that only now is beginning to penetrate the industrial consciousness is that art, which is the servant and not the master of the human mind, must be asked to meet the needs of the machine to create a form not to be produced adequately in any way except by machinery, in a word, to co-operate with science in expressing the mood and answering the legitimate necessities of the present. It is a poor compliment to art to think it incapable of such adaptation.

There remains to be created, then, an art which is based upon a thorough training in handicraft, so that the designer will know without doubt whether his design is suited to wood or leather, metal or paper; upon a thorough training in drawing, so that personal invention and the individual stamp of the designer's taste shall not be omitted from the design; upon a thorough knowledge of history, so that the resources of the past shall be known and used as a point of departure for the research of the present; upon habits of thought and reflection that develop in an artist personality and soul and prevent his sacrificing these qualities in reconciling his genius to the exigencies of an industrial age; there remains to be created this art based upon the great essentials of all art, but differing from the arts of the past in its mastery of present science and its service to present needs.

The new age is an industrial age. A war that has been dominated by industry must be followed by a peace in which industry dominates. And if this peace of the future in which machinery and chemistry, transportation and construction are the ruling powers is to be tolerable to a civilized people art will be called upon to play its important part everywhere. There must be, then, an art especially designed for the machine and inseparable from its limitations as from its capacities. There is nothing in this to frighten the artist, whose fairest product flowers from science, whether he knows it or not. There is much in it to stimulate his powers, which have flagged somewhat in an age that has insisted upon a conventional separation between art and science.

The designs shown at the Textile Exhibition as the work of American designers are of a character to inspire confidence in the future of industrial design in this country. Woman's Wear exhibits silk and cretonnes upon which the prize-winning designs in recent contests have been printed, and their admirable effect, when seen in close juxtaposition to designs that follow European models or are perhaps "reconstructed" from French originals, is inspiriting. One should, however, beware of being too inspirited by the undeniably fresh inspiration and ingenious invention revealed. These designs for the most part are intended for the simplest forms of reproduction. There are one or two Jacquard specimens in which the figure is woven into the fabric, not printed upon it, and these, of course, call for special acquaintance on the part of the artist with the technical side of weaving, but years of study will be necessary before American designers will be able to compete with the trained foreigner in the production of designs suited to various and complicated types of machine. What we see in the Textile Exhibition is that talent, originality, and courage exist among our own artists, who, in many instances, have adopted the sometimes amusing, but, on the whole, extremely rewarding, notion of going to primitive American sources in the museums of this city for their starting point. We see also an amazing progress in the creation of dyes suitable to artistic fabrics, and an amazing skill in creating beautiful textures and surfaces with the machines and workmen employed in this country. There is every reason to think that the stamp, "Made in America," will carry with it an assurance of excellence, and it should be used now in every instance where those using it can do so with confidence and pride in the American-made fabric. There is still a feeling that the imported thing is of necessity better than the American thing, and a vulgar and unpatriotic readiness on the part of a certain type of salesman to conceal the American origin of his wares, instead of making it appear admirable and an attraction.

When artists and art students realize that the country depends upon them to uphold its reputation for beautiful, as well as for honestly and skillfully, executed manufactures, they will show their patriotism by recognizing the dignity of industrial art and giving to it the long and arduous training it requires. There is no doubt whatever of their willingness to sacrifice time and money to achieve excellence in their art if they are given the opportunity. It is what artists always have done and always will do, whatever their particular field of study. But as yet they have not been given adequate opportunity. There are a few private schools of industrial art, and the public schools are giving an increasing amount of attention to it, but this is an altogether insufficient provision for the great demands of the present and future. There should be in America, all over America, technical schools of the highest type, with thoroughly trained and efficient teachers to give the student of industrial art his chance to become an expert in his subject, and to give America her chance to stand first among the industrial communities of the world not only in the quantity and variety of her manufactures but in their technical and aesthetic quality. Then we shall see this modest little war garden of American design expand to imposing dimensions and feed a hungry world with beauty.

An Enamel Screen for the Brooklyn Museum.

The most recent addition to the Avery collection of Chinese cloisonnés in the Brooklyn Museum is a screen about nine feet wide by eight feet high, of cloisonné and Peking enamel, mounted in an elaborately carved frame of teakwood, with costly lacquer decoration on the reverse side, of bats, clouds and waves in gold on a black ground. The screen is composed of seven panels, each with its individual scheme of raised decoration representing fruit trees and flowering shrubs in powerful design, and in bright colors, on a bright yellow background. The piece stands on a teakwood base decorated with oblong cloisonné panels with floral decoration on turquoise blue ground, and was purchased by Mr. Samuel P. Avery a few days ago, as a gift to the museum, from this Excellency the Hon. V. S. Liao, recently Chinese Minister to Cuba, and now passing through New York on his return to China.

The screen is one of a pair which formerly stood behind the Imperial throne in the Winter Palace at Peking.

The big Independent Exhibition has a formidable rival in this month's little exhibition at the MacDowell Club. Four groups of artists are showing their work in the so-called lighter mediums, and so much of it is good work that an excursion about the comparatively small gallery is much more stimulating and rewarding than a visit to the Independent Exhibition, where eyes and mind are battered and bruised by a large propor-

Group III. is homogeneous again. Elizabeth Elmore's etchings, Harriett S. Phillips's drawing of Anton Lang and her unhappy German peasant woman, Elizabeth Cady Stanton's Red Cross nurse, and the chicken picture of Elizabeth A. Knowles, with most of the other work in the section, compose a unit to be depended upon for interplay of impression. Only the swift little red chalk drawings of Margery Ryerson, expert indications of direction, dart off at a tangent from the compact collection, which further includes the work of Christiana Huckel, H. Kownatzki, Grace P. Noxon, E. E. Richards, Mary C. Skinner, Isabella St. Leger, and Heppie En Earl Wicks.

Group IV. includes Margaret W. Huntington's ingenious camouflage of pleasant conventionality, with modern divisions of color and absence of tone; Jane Peterson's portrait studies; Bernard Rasmussan's Ibsenish conceptions; Frederick Weber's scrupulous portraits of place; clean, succinct little studies in pure wash on smooth paper, with pen-and-ink outline, by Mary C. How I Improved My Memory In One Evening

The Amazing Experience of Victor Jones

"Of course I place you! Mr. Addison Sims of Seattle.

"If I remember correctly—and I do remember correctly—Mr. Burroughs, the lumberman, introduced me to you at the luncheon of the Seattle Rotary Club three years ago in May. This is a pleasure indeed! I haven't laid eyes on you since that day. How is the grain business? And how did that amalgamation work out?"

The assurance of this speaker—in the crowded corridor of the Hotel McAlpin—compelled me to turn and look at him, though I must say it is not my usual habit to "listen in" even in a hotel lobby.

"He is David M. Roth, the most famous memory expert in the United States, said my friend Kennedy, answering my question before I could get it out. "He will show you a lot more wonderful things than that, before the evening is over."

And he did.

As we went into the banquet room the toastmaster was introducing a long line of the guests to Mr. Roth. I got in line and when it came my turn, Mr. Roth asked, "What are your initials, Mr. Jones, and your business connection and telephone number?" Why he asked this, I learned later, when he picked out from the crowd the 60 men he had met two hours before and called each by name without a mistake. What is more, he named each man's business and telephone number, for good measure.

I won't tell you all the other amazing things this man did except to tell how he called back, without a minute's hesitation, long lists of numbers, bank clearings, prices, lot numbers, parcel post rates and anything else the guests gave him in rapid order.

When I met Mr. Roth again—which you may be sure I did the first chance I got—he rather bowled me over by saying, in his quiet, modest way:

"There is nothing miraculous about my remembering anything I want to remember, whether it be names, faces, figures, facts or something I have read in a magazine.

"You can do this just as easily as I do. Anyone with an average mind can learn quickly to do exactly the same things which seem so miraculous when I do them.

"My own memory," continued Mr. Roth, "was originally very faulty. Yes it was—a really poor memory. On meeting a man I would lose his name in thirty seconds, while now there are probably 10,000 men and women in the United States, many of whom I have met but once, whose names I can call instantly on meeting them."

"That is all right for you, Mr. Roth," I interrupted. "you have given years to it. But how about me?"

"Mr. Jones," he replied, "I can teach you the secret of a good memory in one evening. This is not a guess, because I have done it with thousands of pupils. In the first of seven simple lessons which I have prepared for home study, I show you the basic principle of my whole system and you will find it—not hard work as you might fear—but just like playing a fascinating game. I will prove it to you."

He didn't have to prove it. His Course did; I got it the very next day from his publishers, the Independent Corporation.

When I tackled the first lesson, I suppose I was the most surprised man in forty-eight states to find that I had learned—in about one hour—how to remember a list of one hundred words so that I could call them off forward and back without a single mistake.

That first lesson stuck. And so did the other six.

Read this letter from C. Louis Allen, who at 32 years became president of a million dollar corporation, the Pyrene Manufacturing Company of New York, makers of the famous fire extinguisher:

"Now that the Roth Memory Course is finished, I want to tell you how much I have enjoyed the study of this most fascinating subject. Usually these courses involve a great deal of drudgery, but this has been nothing but pure pleasure all the way through. I have derived much benefit from taking the course of instruction and feel that I shall continue to strengthen my memory. That is the best part of it. I shall be glad of an opportunity to recommend your work to my friends."

Mr. Allen didn't put it a bit too strong.

The Roth Course is priceless! I can absolutely count on my memory now. I can call the name of most any man I have met before—and I am getting better all the time. I can remember any figures I wish to remember. Telephone numbers come to mind instantly, once I have filed them by Mr. Roth's easy method. Street addresses are just as easy.

The old fear of forgetting (you know what that is) has vanished. I used to be "seared stiff" on my feet—because I wasn't sure. I couldn't remember what I wanted to say.

Now I am sure of myself, and confident, and "easy as an old shoe" when I get on my feet at the club, or at a banquet, or in a business meeting, or in any social gathering.

Perhaps the most enjoyable part of it all is that I have become a good conversationalist—and I used to be as silent as a sphinx when I got into a crowd of people who knew things.

Now I can call up like a flash of lightning most any fact I want right at the instant I need it most. I used to think a "hair trigger" memory belonged only to the prodigy and genius. Now I see that every man of us has that kind of a memory if he only knows how to make it work right.

I tell you it is a wonderful thing, after groping around in the dark for so many years, to be able to switch the big searchlight on your mind and see instantly everything you want to remember.

This Roth Course will do wonders in your office.

Since we took it up you never hear anyone in our office say "I guess" or "I think it was about so much" or "I forget that right now" or "I can't remember" or "I must look up his name." Now they are right there with the answer—like a shot.

Have you ever heard of "Multigraph" Smith? Real name H. Q. Smith, Division Manager of the Multigraph Sales Company, Ltd., in Montreal. Here is just a bit from a letter of his that I saw last week:

"Here is the whole thing in a nutshell: Mr. Roth has a most remarkable Memory Course. It is simple, and easy as falling off a log. Yet with one hour a day of practice, anyone—I don't care who he is—can improve his Memory 100% in a week and 1,000% in six months."

My advice to you is don't wait another minute. Send to Independent Corporation for Mr. Roth's amazing course and see what a wonderful memory you have got. Your dividends in increased earning power will be enormous.

VICTOR JONES

Send No Money

So confident is the Independent Corporation, the publishers of the Roth Memory Course, that once you have an opportunity to see in your own home how easy it is to double, yes, triple your memory power in a few short hours, that they are willing to send the course on free examination.

Don't send any money. Merely mail the coupon or write a letter and the complete course will be sent, all charges prepaid, at once. If you are not entirely satisfied send it back any time within five days after you receive it and you will owe nothing.

On the other hand, if you are as pleased as are the thousands of other men and women who have used the course send only $5 in full payment. You take no risk and you have everything to gain, so mail the coupon now before this remarkable offer is withdrawn.

Have your coffee just right every time you make it

This is the way the Greatest Coffee Merchants say coffee should be made . . . .

IN THE OLD DAYS, our grandmothers roasted and ground their own coffee. Think of the tragedy of having a whole batch of coffee burned—not roasted to just the right degree! Think of the quantities of choice beans the fragrance of which was utterly dissipated from the very beginning and the numberless cups of coffee which simply could not be delicious!

Today, more than half the responsibility of making good coffee is removed from the housewife's hands.

Roasting has been brought to a science. The exact amount of heat for a particular coffee, the period of time to within a few seconds for which it should be roasted, have been determined by years of scientific study by the greatest coffee merchants

Long years ago Arbuckle Brothers realized that with their facilities for selecting the finest coffees in the world, and for developing scientifically the processes of handling, roasting and packing coffee, they could make it easy for every woman to serve coffee that was perfect every time she made it.

Arbuckle Brothers have a staff of experts who are constantly experimenting with new ways of making coffee.

Read their recipes given below and learn how experts make coffee. Try Yuban yourself tomorrow morning. It is prepared for you in either whole bean, steel-cut or pulverized form. No matter which is your favorite way of making coffee, you will always find in Yuban the same individual flavor, the fragrant aroma which has made it the favorite coffee of the most critical cities in the world.

Paste these recipes in your Cook Book

DRIP COFFEE

Drip coffee may be made in a drip pot provided with a muslin cloth, a metal or porcelain dripper, or with filter paper. It may also be filtered through a muslin or linen cloth into a plain china pot.

If a drip pot with a cloth is used, allow a heaping teaspoonful of Yuban, pulverized, to each cup of fresh water, briskly boiling. Redrip two or three times when stronger coffee is desired.

If a metal dripper or filter paper is used, allow one heaping dessert-spoonful of Yuban clean-cut ground to each cup of fresh water, briskly boiling. Allow the water to remain on coffee about five minutes to steep before releasing.

PERCOLATOR

Use a heaping dessert-spoonful of clean-cut ground Yuban to each cup of fresh cold water. Pour the water in the percolator, then place coffee in the regular filter or basket—let the water percolate over the coffee five or ten minutes, depending upon the temperature of the heat. With electric percolator it will take fifteen to eighteen minutes.

PLAIN

Use one heaping dessert-spoonful of clean-cut, ground Yuban to each cup of water. Put the coffee in the pot and pour over it the fresh water, briskly boiling; let the coffee steep five or ten minutes over a low heat or flame, but do not boil. Settle with a dash of cold water.

Today—more than ever—choose the glove you know

IN former seasons many women who always choose a dress or a suit with care have bought their gloves in the most casual way.

They never realized how the little accessories of dress count up—especially when they are bought carelessly.

But in these days of conservation, women are learning that a cut price glove, hastily bought, means an actual waste of money because of the poor service it gives. They have found that it pays to buy the silk glove they know.

Kayser Silk Gloves fit perfectly in palm, finger-length and wrist. They are made of pure silk and the double finger tips are guaranteed. They wear better and are more economical for Spring and Summer use than any other kind.

The genuine carry the name Kayser in the hem.

Have you reached the point where you have no strength left to overcome fatigue?

Fatigue—
The Danger Signal

Is the slightest act an effort?

Do you feel cross and irritable at night?

Do you worry over petty troubles?

These are the Danger Signals of Fatigue. When we reach the limit of our mental and physical endurance—when overwork of brain or body starts its drain upon our nervous energy—Nature never fails to flash the danger signals of Fatigue.

How fatigue grips you

Fatigue poisons work gradually—subtly. If each day you are using up more than your normal amount of surplus energy—you are slowly drawing more and more heavily on your health capital, and diminishing your powers of efficiency. That "tired feeling" creeps over you a little earlier each day till finally your night's sleep is no longer sufficient to refresh you—to restore your wasted health vitality.

How can you tell when you are nearing the limit of your natural energy? You must look out for the danger signals sent out by Nature—loss of appetie, insomnia, increasing exhaustion from day to day without increase in the amount of work done, mental depression, lack of interest and initiative. No one can afford to disregard these danger signals.

"Plus Health"

The spirit of the times demands nothing less than the most perfect development of body and mind, and maintaining the highest degree of efficiency of the adult worker for the longest possible term of years.

A surplus of energy must be persistently aimed at—what Harrington Emerson, the well-known Efficiency Engineer, calls "plus health." No fatigued woman can be at her best; she is doomed to inferior work, and to be mentally depressed.

Conserve your energy

Economize your energy wherever you can. Make every activity build up your vitality instead of wearing it down.

Whatever your daily work may be, there is no reason why it should exhaust you. It should use up only a normal amount of your surplus energy. It is the added strain on your nerves, the shock and jar of every step you take on hard city pavements and hardwood floors, that wastes your strength, and leaves you tired out.

Change city pavements to cushioned paths

Save your nervous system from the useless shock and strain of hard heeled shoes on city pavements. Replace your nail studded leather heels with soft, springy O'Sullivan's Heels—city streets and hardwood floors will feel like cushioned walks.

O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the shocks that now wear you out. They give you the quiet, elastic step and easy swing of youth—a feeling of increased energy and "life."

Get a pair of O'Sullivan's Heels today. Notice the difference they make. They are one of the most important modern devices for making life quieter, smoother, happier.

O'Sullivan's Heels are guaranteed to outlast any other heels. They will last three times as long as leather heels, and will give uniformly satisfactory service to the very last.

Because of our special process, O'Sullivan's Heels combine the greatest durability with the greatest resiliency. They are made of perfect heel material.

Buy your new shoes O'Sullivanized. Good dealers sell the latest style shoes with O'Sullivan's Heels already attached. Have O'Sullivan's put on all your shoes today.

In black, white or tan; for men, women and children. Insist on O'Sullivan's—avoid the disappointment of substitutes.

Skin Blemishes

How to get rid of them

Skin specialists are tracing fewer and fewer troubles to the blood—more to bacteria and parasites that are carried into the pores with dust, soot and grime.

Clear your skin of any blemishes caused by this most powerful and persistent enemy by using this effective local treatment. Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap and then dry your face. Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this soap cream and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully with clear, hot water; then with cold.

Use Woodbury's regularly in your daily toilet. This will make your skin so firm and active that it will resist the frequent cause of blemishes and keep your complexion free from them.

You will find a 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment and for general cleansing use for this time. Get a cake today and begin to bring to your skin that greater clearness, freshness and charm you have longed for. Woodbury's is for sale at drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere throughout the United States and Canada.

Write today for a week's size cake

For 5c we will send you a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough to last for a week of this Woodbury treatment, together with the booklet "A Skin You Love to Touch," which gives the proper treatment for all of the commoner skin troubles.

For 12c we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Cream and Facial Powder. Send today to The Andrew Jergens Co., 5,108 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, 5,108 Sherbrooke Street, Perth, Ontario.

Fatigue—
The Danger Signal

Is the slightest act an effort?

Do you feel cross and irritable at night?

Do you worry over petty troubles?

These are the Danger Signals of Fatigue. When we reach the limit of our mental and physical endurance—when overwork of brain or body starts its drain upon our nervous energy—Nature never fails to flash the danger signals of Fatigue.

Pompeian Beauty Powder

Adds a pearly clearness
Stays on unusually long

"The Compelling Charm"

MANY cluster around! Her days, evenings and dances are spoken for in advance. And why not, for who can deny the compelling charm of a beautiful complexion? Skin, white and soft as satin; lustrous, the rich color glowing in the cheeks. To gain and retain this charm, women find Pompeian beauty aids indispensable. The three aids shown here have met with great success in New York City. They can be used separately, or together as a "Complete Complexion Toilette." They are guaranteed pure and safe by the makers of the famous Pompeian MASSAGE Cream, Pompeian NIGHT Cream and Pompeian HAIR Massage.

Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing) keeps the skin smooth and velvety. Protects it against the weather and dust. Daintily fragrant. Can be used as a foundation before applying Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. 50c jars at the stores.

Pompeian BEAUTY Powder imparts a pearly clearness to the skin. Stays on unusually long. Has a delightful fragrance. White, flesh and brunette. In a beautiful purple and gold box. 50c at the stores.

Pompeian BLOOM, a rouge that adds the final touch of youthful bloom. Imperceptible when properly applied. Do you know that a touch of color in the cheeks beautifies the eyes, making them darker and more lustrous? Three shades, light, dark and medium, exquisitely perfumed. In a cake that won't break. Sold in a vanity box with French puff and mirror. 50c at the stores.

The Pompeian Mfg. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Says "We Are All Comrades," and Extols Skill of the Men in the Camden Yard.

SCHWAB IS OVERJOYED

"Go to It, Boys!" He Cries, and Says That the Most Decisive Blow in Months Has Been Struck.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 5. — "This greatest day in the history of the American shipbuilding industry," was the way Marvin A. Neeland, President of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation of Camden, N. J., put it this morning, just after he had seen the 5,548-ton steel freight steamship Tuckahoe slide off the ways, exactly twenty-seven days and three hours from the time that her keel was laid, beating the best previous record for speed in ship construction by twenty-eight days.

"And a damn bad day for the Kaiser," added "Tommy" Mason, Superintendent of the Hull Division, who was directly in charge of the riveting gangs who built the Tuckahoe.

It was not alone the launching of the Tuckahoe, however, which made yesterday historic in the annals of the shipbuilding industry on the Delaware. Great as was the enthusiasm which marked the occasion at the New York Shipbuilding Corporation's yard, it was at least equaled in the afternoon, when Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board; Charles M. Schwab, Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation; Rear Admiral F. T. Bowles, U. S. N., in charge of the Government ship-fabricating program, and Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Commerce and Shipping, journeyed over to the great Hog Island yard, and held such a spontaneous patriotic rally, in the course of telling the workmen there what their brethren across the river had just accomplished, as never was seen before.

Practically every fighting leader of the shipbuilding program on the Atlantic Coast, including the heads of most of the rival yards, had been invited to be present at the launching of the record-breaking ship, and every one of them that could possibly leave his own yard had accepted.

Senator David Baird of New Jersey, who is nearing his eightieth birthday, whose home is in Camden, refused to go up on the platform, and had a chair placed for him directly under the Tuckahoe's towering bow, where he could watch every move of the workmen as they drove home the wedges, lifting the ship off the keel-blocks, and sawed through the massive wooden keypiece releasing her in her cradle.

The ship herself looked practically ready to go to sea as she lay on the ways. Her funnel, bridge, and masts were in place, her deck fittings shipped, and her sleek sides, which showed every rivet driven home, freshly painted in war color. Along the forecastle rail and in the portholes showed the faces of many of the men who had built her, taking the full measure of their triumph by going over the side with the ship, while the others were clustered like swarms of bees all over the gigantic framework of the overhead crane runways on either side and above the ship. The entire upper surface of the big concrete shipway was covered with the thousands of other workmen in the yard, their families and friends.

The New York Shipbuilding Corporation band had been playing lively airs through which sounded the dull blows of the mallets driving home the wedges on either side of the ship, but as the last blows rang out, they stopped, and silence fell over the great throng, above which could plainly be heard the buzz of the big crosscut saw, biting through the keypiece.

Named by Helen Hurley.

Miss Helen Hurley, the sturdy twelve-year-old daughter of the Chairman of the Shipping Board, took her stand beside the prow, with the champagne bottle in her hand. The next moment the huge structure began to tremble.

"Now," said Mr. Neeland, and little Miss Hurley swung the heavy bottle, and as the foaming wine poured down the ship's stem, a roar of cheers drowned her voice, saying, "I name thee Tuckahoe," and the big freighter

Dutch-German Tension Ended by Pledge on Sand and Gravel

THE HAGUE, May 5.—Jonkheer Loudon, the Dutch Minister of Foreign Affairs, informed the Chamber today that the tension between Holland and Germany was ended.

He said that, as Germany had agreed to limit the quantity of sand and gravel transported through Dutch waterways to a maximum of 1,600,000 tons per annum—an amount considered needful for the repair and maintenance of the Belgian roads—and had undertaken not to use the material for military purposes, Holland had withdrawn her demand that a commission of control should be constituted in Belgium to supervise the employment of the materials.

BOLSHEVIKI ASK ALLIES TO EXPLAIN

Invite American, British, and French Envoys to Define Attitude to Soviet Government.

WANT CONSULS RECALLED

Accuse Officials at Vladivostok of Plot—Japan Requested to Explain and Act.

MOSCOW, April 26, (Associated Press.)—Foreign Minister Tchitcherin has addressed the representatives in Moscow of the United States, England, and France requesting the speedy recall of their Consuls at Vladivostok and an investigation of their alleged participation in negotiations said to have been conducted between the Peking embassies of the powers named and the Siberian autonomous government. They are also asked to define their attitude toward the Soviet Government and explain what the Minister alludes to as the attempts of their representatives to interfere with the internal life of Russia.

M. Tchitcherin submitted copies of the documents seized on the person of M. Kolodoff, a member in Vladivostok of the Siberian autonomous government, who was recently arrested, which, the Minister declares, "establish incontrovertibly that the consular representatives of Great Britain, France, and America participated in this plot and that the diplomatic representatives of those Powers in Peking negotiated with the counter-revolutionary organization calling itself the "Siberian Government." (These reported negotiations have previously been declared in Bolshevist quarters to have been prefected with a view to the recognition of Siberia by the allied powers.)

M. Tchitcherin also addressed to the Japanese representative in Moscow a communication stating that the letters taken from M. Kolodoff establish the extensive participation of Japanese officials in the counter-revolutionary movement, despite repeated official assurances of non-interference with the internal life of Russia.

"Such actions," continues the communication, "prompt us now to clarify in a manner beyond doubt the position of the Tokio Cabinet regarding the government of the Russian Federated Republic, and to ask, in particular, if the Japanese Government intends in the future to support the counter-revolutionary elements in Russia or wishes immediately to institute a public investigation of the activities of some of its agents, recall those incriminated and give definite instructions to the others. In the contrary event, the government of the Russian Federated Republic will have to take the measures used against Russian counter-revolutionary citizens."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Nothing had reached the State Department at a late hour tonight in confirmation of the report from Moscow that the Soviet Foreign Minister had addressed the representatives of the United States, England, and France asking for the recall of the Consuls at Vladivostok in connection with an alleged counter-revolutionary movement seeking the establishment of an autonomous government in Siberia.

The State Department has received messages of a later date than April 26 from David R. Francis, the American Ambassador to Russia, and none of these contained any reference to such a communication from the Soviet Foreign Minister.

17,000,000 BUYERS SET A NEW RECORD IN THE BOND DRIVE

7,000,000 More Investors in Third Liberty Loan Than in the Second.

MAKES OFFICIALS JUBILANT

Wide Distribution Accepted as Evidence That the People Are Behind Issue.

FINAL TOTAL IS NOT KNOWN

But Known Subscriptions Already Exceed $3,316,000,000—Likely to Go Much Higher.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The final official total of the Third Liberty Loan bond sales, which is expected to reach $4,500,000,000, will not be announced until after May 13, but analysis today of incomplete returns shows that the loan just closed probably is the most successful ever floated by any nation. This assertion is based not so much upon the volume of sales as upon the wide distribution of the loan.

A total of the returns provided by the Federal Reserve districts indicated that approximately 17,000,000 individual purchasers participated in the loan. This estimate includes fairly accurate returns from the Atlanta, Minneapolis, Cleveland, San Francisco, St. Louis, Chicago, and New York districts, and estimated totals from the Dallas, Kansas City, Richmond, Philadelphia, and Boston districts.

With only a part of the last day's returns showing, the number of subscribers in each Federal Reserve District may be fairly indicated as follows:

Dist.	Subscribers.	Dist.	Subscribers.
New York	4,000,000	Minneapolis	1,000,000
Chicago	2,498,000	Kansas City	900,000
Cleveland	1,561,979	Richmond	900,000
Philadelphia	1,200,000	St. Louis	866,342
Boston	1,200,000	Dallas	850,000
San Francisco	1,000,000
Atlanta	1,000,000	Total	16,976,321

One in Every Six Bought.

This distribution of the Third Liberty Loan indicates that one out of every six persons in the United States may have participated in this loan. It is estimated that 20,000,000 subscribers would have been required to have attained one subscription to each family in the land.

The total of 17,000,000 purchasers exceeds the number of buyers in the Second Loan by 7,000,000, and is 12,500,000 more than in the First.

In announcing tonight that the final figures on subscriptions would not come for at least eight days, the Treasury Department explained that incorporated banks and trust companies would make their final reports to the Federal Reserve Banks on May 9, and four days later the Federal Reserve Banks would report to the Treasury Department.

Loan committees and bankers who have been actively engaged in the great drive which closed Saturday night rested today, and as a result very few additional sales reports filtered in to the Treasury Department. Totals now on hand showed subscriptions of $3,316,028,250 in the hands of incorporated banks and trust companies. They represented only sales in the Boston and Philadelphia districts up to 11 o'clock Saturday morning, in the New York district up to 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and in the remaining districts up to 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Final returns doubtless will greatly increase the total now available.

Jubilation Among Officials.

The record of sales distribution caused jubilation among Liberty Loan executives. It was taken as ample evidence that the Third Liberty Loan had been in fact a people's loan, and that banking institutions had been called upon to assume a smaller share of the burden of the Third Liberty Loan than of any other war loan yet floated. It is pointed out that the banks have been kept unimpaired and that the wide distribution means a minimum of financial displacement on account of the loan.

Even though the volume of sales probably will not reach the total of the Field Marshal French Made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland

LONDON, May 5.—Field Marshal Viscount French has been appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Official announcement of the appointment of Field Marshal French and that of Edward Shortt as Chief Secretary for Ireland was issued tonight.

Forecasts a Strong Policy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, May 6. — The Daily Telegraph's Parliamentary correspondent says:

"Field Marshal French's appointment means that the Government will now pursue the strong and firm Irish policy which they recently announced to Parliament, offering Home Rule first and then calling upon Ireland to do its duty in the war. Conscription has already been extended to Ireland by law, but the law will not be enforced by an Order in Council until the Home Rule bill also finds its way to the statute book.

"That measure will be completed this week and introduced in the House of Commons early next week. The Government intended to press it forward with vigor and to stake their existence on its passing."

GUNFIRE GROWING ON ITALIAN FRONT

Italian and British Aircraft Bomb Foe's Bases and Down Eight Machines.

EMPEROR WATCHES BATTLE

Vienna Reports Arrival—Movement of Tyrol and Trentino Troops Portends Offensive.

ROME, May 5.—An increase in the intensity of the hostile artillery fire along the front, notably in the Lagarina and Astico valleys, [Trentino front] and in the Fossalta sector, [Piave front] is reported by the War Office today. The Italian artillery also has carried out numerous bombardments, and there has been additional intensive activity by the Caproni and British airplanes, in the course of which eight enemy machines were destroyed and many tons of bombs dropped.

The official statement reads:

There has been increased intensity of the hostile harassing fire in the Lagarina and Astico valleys and in the Fossalta sector.

Our artillery dispersed carrying parties in the Sielvio area, fired with good effect on the Rovereto station, obtained direct hits on trains in the Conegliano station and caused a heavy explosion on the left bank of the Piave, opposite Nervesa.

There were patrol actions on both sides between the Brenta and the Piave.

The activity of our aircraft has been intense. Caproni flights and British airplanes, protected by numbers of chasers, dropped about nine tons of bombs on the hydro-electric works at Cavedin, north of Mori. While this operation was in progress other machines renewed the bombing of the aviation ground at Campo, Maggiore, south of Lonico.

Last night our airships, reaching by surprise the railway stations at Primolano and Bolzano, dropped their loads of bombs with good effects. At the same time an airship of the Royal Navy engaged enemy columns on the march beyond the Tagliamento.

Eight enemy machines were reported destroyed, two of which fell in flames within our lines.

GENEVA, May 5.—It is officially announced from Vienna that Emperor Charles, the Chief of the Austrian General Staff and several high German and Austrian officers reached the Italian front yesterday. This, with the considerable movements of troops in Tyrol and the Trentino reported from the interior, is interpreted to mean that the long-predicted offensive on the Italian front soon will be begun.

Bohemian Protest Splits Vienna Cabinet; Three Ministers Out; Food Policy Reshaped

AMSTERDAM, May 5.—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin says:

"The announcement by Premier von Seidler of Austria of the appointment of District Food Administrators in Bohemia is the fulfillment of one of the most insistent demands of the German population of that region. It is proposed to create ten districts in Bohemia for food administration purposes. Five of them will be Czech; three German, and two mixed."

Dispatches from Copenhagen report the resignation of three Austrian Cabinet members, the Minister of Agriculture, and the Ruthenian and Slavonian Ministers, as a protest against measures which the Austrian Government is planning to take against Slavonic agitation in Bohemia.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The Czech Union, according to an official dispatch from Switzerland, has addressed to the President of the Hungarian Chamber of Deputies a letter stating its refusal to take part in the meeting of the party leaders which the President has convoked, and protesting against a further postponement of the plenary assembly of the Chamber.

OUR BARRAGE EFFECTIVE

Enemy's Attempt to Occupy Our Former Trenches Foiled.

AIRMEN KEEP IN ACTION

Engage in Four Fights in the Same Sector and Germans Are Driven Off Each Time.

PATROL PERFORMS EXPLOIT

Attacks an Observation Post, Killing Three of Foe and Capturing Four.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 5, (Associated Press.)—The Germans again today attempted to occupy one of the former American trenches in the Bois Brûlé, west of Apremont, in the Toul sector, which was the scene of the fighting on April 10 and 12. Soon after midnight the American patrols discovered that the Germans had crept into the position with a large number of machine guns and tools, apparently intending to consolidate the trenches with the German system.

The American artillery got into action quickly, sweeping a high explosive barrage back and forth across the newly occupied ground. The guns rained steel on the Germans until nearly daylight, and when the patrols went out to investigate they found not a single enemy. Some material, however, had been left behind.

There appeared to be reason for believing at one time, after the Germans were discovered, another attack on the Americans was about to be launched, probably to cover the consolidation effort. Only quick action by the artillery smothered it.

The Germans seem determined to carry out their designs against this position, and it is not unlikely that more sharp fighting will be seen here, for it is valuable to the enemy, although not very valuable to the Americans because of the nature of the terrain.

Four more aerial battles were reported today by American airmen flying in the sector northwest of Toul. All of the combats were indecisive, although one of the American machines returned with bullet holes in its wings and two others with holes torn by fragments of shells from anti-aircraft guns. How the Germans fared is not known.

The first report was from the pilot of a pursuit airplane who encountered the enemy over the lines at a height of 5,000 metres. The pair fought a duel for several minutes, the German finally turning quickly and, running into the direct line of the sun in his homeward way, getting clear.

Later one of the American photographing machines was attacked by two enemy airplanes. The American observer emptied one of his guns into one of the enemy machines. Then the American pilot exercised discretion and turned homeward. The Germans remained in pursuit until the American anti-aircraft guns picked them up. Then they turned and went home. The American airplane circled once or twice and then went back over the lines and calmly resumed the photographic operations where they had been left off.

Another report now available relates a somewhat similar incident, except that this time three of the enemy attacked two of our machines which were working with our artillery.

In the fourth engagement a German sailed up in the direction of one of the American photographic planes, but one of the fast American fighting machines rushed in, causing the German to turn tail and flee toward home. The German anti-aircraft pieces, got busy at the same time and broke out numerous "flower pots," or, as the British airmen call them, "flying onions." This is an "Archie" shell which, when it bursts, throws out in all directions smaller projectiles, each of which also bursts.

CAPTURE FOUR GERMANS.

Patrols Kill Three Others in Luneville Sector—Our Guns Rule There.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 5, (Associated Press.)—One of the American patrols in the Luneville sector entered the hamlet of Ancervilliers early this morning and penetrated the German lines to a distance of 300 yards. On the way back the patrol discovered an enemy observation post, in which were a corporal and six men. The Americans promptly attacked, killing three of the enemy and taking the other four prisoners, one of them in a wounded condition.

The first the Germans knew that the American patrol was near was when a shower of hand grenades, followed by bullets, hit the post. The patrol ceased

Furnace Test for Our Troops on Amiens Front; Like Veterans Under Fire, Ready, Steady, and Sober

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

PARIS, May 5.—An officer from our division in the French line southeast of Amiens, in Paris for one day, came into the Ritz Hotel for luncheon today and gave me a cheering account of how the Americans are sizing up in fast company. He summed it up in good Americanese —"Our men are standing the gaff."

They soon discovered, he said, that what they thought was war down on the old section was not war at all compared with the furnace on Fritz's favorite front. The Americans have settled to their work like veterans. They go about it quietly and soberly. Although brandy is obtainable in the French villages, our boys do not seem to want to drink; they have excitement enough. They are steady under shellfire, very ready with their rifles, and have learned to hide in a rabbit warren if a shell hole is not available.

Everybody is surprised to see the Americans so entirely amenable to discipline, their temperament having been heretofore rated rebellious. They are heroic under surgery. The officer described this scene that occurred in a hospital recently. The surgeon was operating on a bullet wound in the scalp, using no anaesthetic. After a few minutes the patient quietly remarked:

"Say, Doc, are you through up there? I've got another one in my thigh."

It was true, though the surgeon had not known there was a second wound.

The French are taking care of this particular division, including food. While the soldiers miss their waffles, batter cakes, pie, and other peculiarly American dishes, they know the nature of the emergency and take everything philosophically.

"There is a quality that passes current in any country and in all circumstances," remarked the officer, "and our soldiers have it. It is common sense."

British Guns Harass Enemy's Roads And Assembly Places By Fierce Fire

French Make Gains in Raids and Patrol Actions in Locre Region—Hindenburg Preparing More Heavy Blows—Captured Letters from German Homes Reveal the Agony and Discontent of the People.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Sunday, May 5.—Early this morning the British guns doubled their usual dose of harassing fire, and kept the enemy's roads and assembly places under fierce bursts of shelling, so that more deaths will be notified in German villages, and the enemy's guns were very active along our front all day yesterday in Flemish villages like Fletre, and La Motte, and Hazebrouck, and Vlamertinche with its skeleton church, then in the Lens area, by Gavrelle and Arleux, and further south above Albert, along the Ancre.

Round about Locre the French troops made a few small gains in raids and patrol actions, capturing some ruined farms and houses, and some high ground south of Koudekot. The gunfire hardly ever ceases round about Locre itself and the hospice there, where, as I have described, there has been bitter fighting, so that the place has been taken, lost, and retaken several times by the French, with small parties of poilus led by a young officer with most gallant courage.

I know this hospice well, and it will interest many people to be reminded that in the garden Major Willie Redmond was buried, after the battle of Wytschaete, where he fell. In the garden there on the day of his funeral there was a guard of honor of Ulster soldiers and Nationalist soldiers, and, among the Generals and staff officers, the reverend mother and her nuns, to whom the hospice belonged.

They laid flowers on the grave and went back then into the long refectory, where the Irish soldiers used to dine, waited upon by these good women, who, as a sign of their love for Ireland, had painted on their walls the Irish harp, and next to it the red hand of Ulster and the little shamrock with the lily, flower of France.

Redmond's grave was quiet in the garden when we went away from it, and birds were singing in the bushes. Now the hospice is a ruin, and the nuns fled, and the garden trampled down by the feet of fighting men, and near Redmond's grave lie other bodies of the dead.

The Germans Terribly Pounded.

The enemy has many divisions, both up in the Flemish fields and on the Somme, divisions in line and divisions in reserve — divisions crowded in reserve—and there are few roads for them down which to march. There is not much elbow room for such masses to assemble, and not much cover in trenches or dugouts from high explosives or shrapnel. So we pound them to death, many of them to death and many of them to stretcher cases, and relief comes up, gets wildly mixed with the divisions coming down, and at night there is mad confusion in the ranks of marching men and transport columns, which gallop past dead horses and splintered wagons and wrecks of transport columns, and among the regimental and divisional staffs trying to keep order in the German way when things are being smashed into chaos, while the Red Cross convoys are overloaded with wounded and unable to to cope with all the bodies that lie about.

This is what is happening behind the German lines—I have not overdrawn the picture, believe me—and it is upsetting somewhat the plans of the high German officers who are arranging things from afar through telephones, down which they shout their orders. It is upsetting, but not more than that. The enemy will proceed with his plans a day or two late, perhaps a week or so late, but approaching completion with certainty.

I believe the German plans are what they were before March 21, only modified by the exigencies and occasions of battle, but not changed in essential ideas. Their purpose still remains to destroy the British Army, by continual sledgehammer blows to divide the French and British armies as much as possible by driving in a wedge in the neighborhood of Amiens and, with luck, so to cramp us in the north by the capture of the last remaining hills in Flanders and by depriving us of the free use of the roads and railways that we may have to draw back from our northern front.

This strategy, like all good strategy, is childlike in its simplicity. It needs not an enormous brain to work it out. The map on the schoolroom wall is good enough for Ludendorff to draw out its lines. It is the men who have to take those lines with their bodies who have the difficult task, and those men, those German soldiers, know every mile of the way will be another graveyard, and that strategy so simple as this means for them months more of sacrifice, but they will have to try to do it. The German high command is not going to spare them.

Heavy Blows Expected.

The Germans have five months ahead of them this year, five months of fighting weather, and they will use them, in my judgment, for a series of blows interrupted only by short periods, such as that now on, for reorganization and preparation.

There is only one chance of avoiding these tremendous onslaughts, though many chances, I hope and believe, of thwarting them. It is a

GERMANS LOSE NEAR LOCRE

500-Yard Advance of British and French Aids Allied Defense.

FOE'S FORCES DISORGANIZED

Movements Hampered by Heavy Rains—Their Tanks Unwieldy in Action.

HAIG CHECKS HINGES ATTACK

British Also Improve Positions East of Amiens and North of Albert.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, May 5, (via Ottawa.)—Franco-British forces, in the course of a successful operation between Locre and Dranoutre, advanced their positions on a 1,000-yard front to an average depth of 500 yards. The British took forty-eight prisoners and the French thirty-two.

The enemy was driven from two or three ruined farms, and the Allies took some high ground near Koutkot, [west of Dranoutre.]

The French, continuing their operation, carried some strongly held buildings in the neighboring sector. All the enemy counterefforts were broken up with considerable loss.

These local successes are of distinct value, strengthening the Allied defenses of the approach to Scherpenberg and Mont Rouge.

Some disorganization is indicated among the enemy troops, who are hindered by heavy rains.

There is little doubt that the new German tanks are proving a disappointment, developing various defects in actual service. Their ponderous weight makes manoeuvring over bad ground difficult. Generally they are much inferior to those of the British.

Attack Near Hinges Repulsed.

LONDON, May 5.—A German attack early this morning on the British positions near Hinges, won from the enemy Friday night, was repulsed, the British line remaining intact. Artillery activity on both sides is reported in Field Marshal Haig's bulletins.

That received this evening announces the capture of a number of prisoners last night by the French in the neighborhood of Locre and "local encounters at different points today."

Yesterday, according to the afternoon bulletin, the British improved their positions in local operations east of Amiens, near Sailly-le-Sec, and north of Albert, in the neighborhood of Hebuterne.

The text of the night report follows:

French troops captured a number of prisoners in local fighting in the neighborhood of Locre during last night. With the exception of artillery activity on both sides and local encounters at different points today, there is nothing of special interest to report.

Following is the text of the afternoon report:

By successful minor enterprises carried out last night in the neighborhood of Sailly-le-See and east of Hebuterne we effected improvements in our line at these points and captured several prisoners.

Early this morning the enemy attacked the new positions gained by us Friday night northeast of Hinges and was repulsed. Our line is intact. We carried out a successful raid in the Forest de Nieppe sector.

The artillery has been active on both sides on the Lys battlefront.

ONLY GUNS ACTIVE ON THE FRENCH FRONT

Intermittent Exchanges of Fire North and South of the River Avre.

PARIS, May 5.—Intermittent artillery engagements, in continuation of last night's fighting, north and south of the Avre River, were the principal feature of the day on the French front. There were no infantry engagements. Last night the guns on both sides were active in the Douaumont sector of the Verdun region and near Flirey, in the Lorraine sector.

On the night of May 3-4 French aviators effectively bombarded half a dozen railway stations behind the German lines.

Following is the text of this evening's official bulletin:

There was intermittent activity by the opposing artilleries north and south of the Avre River today, but there were no infantry engagements.

During the days of May 3 and 4 nine German airplanes were brought down by our pilots, two were shot down by our defensive fire, and other enemy machines were disabled. During the same days and on the nights of May 3 and 4 our aviators effectively bombarded enemy establishments in a number of sorties, 28,000 kilograms [61,600 pounds] of projectiles being dropped upon the railway stations of Ham, Nesyon, Chaulnes, Jussy, Peronne, and St. Quentin.

The day statement reads:

The artillery on both sides was active north and south of the Avre and also in the sectors of Douaumont (Verdun front) and Flirey (Lorraine, near the American Toul sector.) There was no infantry action.

In Lorraine a raiding operation was carried out by the French in the region of Letricourt. Patrol operations in the region of Anservilliers resulted in the taking of prisoners.

The night was quiet on the remainder of the front.

COOKED BETWEEN SHELLS.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 5.—How a German bombardment caused an interruption in a household task is described by Miss Dorothy Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Jones of 83 Plymouth Street, serving in a Red Cross canteen of the French Army at Aisne, in a letter just received here.

"I was attempting to make some cream sance," she wrote, "when there was a whiz and a most disconcerting bang that made me spill most of the milk on the stove. I dashed to the door and discovered that the boches had begun shelling the town. The shells came regularly every eight or ten minutes. We had lunch by the cellar door. One of us took charge of the time, one set the table, and I cooked the lunch. Every seven minutes we descended to the cellar, where we remained until we heard the whine of the 'obis,' and then reappeared. It got to be a science after a while.

"The worst part of the shelling of a town like this is that it is such a mite of a place that every 'obis' that falls is not far from any place, but the shelling is so much better than bombs that it seems almost like nothing. We have a lovely cannon that we think must be almost at our backyard. It goes off every ten minutes. The first time it was discharged we were in bed, and my companion and I just about hit the ceiling."

TO MARK JOAN ANNIVERSARY

Three Days of Prayer in France for Success of Allies.

PARIS, May 5.—The anniversary of the deliverance of France by Joan of Arc will be celebrated with great solemnity at Orleans, on May 12, and three days of prayer have been ordered in Catholic churches throughout France for the success of the Allied troops. Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris, in his notice to the churches, says:

"While the terrible battle which will mark the decisive and final issue of the war is being fought, and while the Allied armies are valiantly contesting its bitter struggles, this is an opportune moment to invoke the liberator of France."

Bishop Jinisty of Verdun will deliver the oration of eulogy upon Joan of Arc at Orleans.

BULGARIA EXPECTS AMERICA'S SUPPORT

Looks to Us to Confirm Her Conquests at Peace Conference, Leader Says.

An indication of the feeling of Bulgaria toward this country, in the absence of a declaration of war between the two countries, is given in a recent interview with Dr. Todoroff, leader of the Bulgarian National Party, published by the Kambana of Sofia and translated by the Serbian Press Bursau in Geneva. Dr. Todoroff declared that Bulgaria must have not only the annexations demanded from Serbia and Macedonia, but also the Dobrudja and Greek territory including Serres, Drama and Kavalla.

"I do not consider that the intervention of the United States will be very important from the military point of view," he said, "but I should not underestimate its influence in the arbitration of matters in the peace conference. Since the Bulgarians have heretofore enjoyed American sympathy, I believe that we shall get America's vote for all our demands at the peace conference."

The question of conquest is not the only one that is stirring Bulgaria. A recent dispatch from a staff correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES in France told of the German policy of absorbing the gold reserve from the countries allied with Germany and leaving them with large quantities of German paper and of their own paper money secured on gold in German hands. This policy seems to have given rise to sharp debate when the Sobranje (Parliament) was called upon to vote a new war credit of about $227,000,000. This money, it appeared had already been spent, and Dr. Liapcheff, ex-Minister of Finance, complained that there had been no accurate accounting to the Sobranje for the nation's war expenses, which he said amounted to $360,000,000.

"The burden of all these debts will not fall on Bulgaria," interjected the Minister of Finance.

"These words ought not to be merely the expression of a hope," retorted Dr. Liapcheff; "they ought to become a reality. If we finish the war with an enormous debt owed, not to our own people, but to foreigners, it will be impossible to remain masters of our own products; we shall be obliged to hand over to others all the riches of our soil and our mines."

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Last week's fighting saw the Germans break their backs in a thoroughly defeated effort to break through the British and French along the northern leg of the salient the apex of which is Merville. Now the indications are that, having found the line from Merville north too strong to be seriously dented, the Germans are about to attempt an action against the Merville-La Bassée section of the line which forms the southern leg of the salient. The reports of the last two days have been filled with references to the heavy bombardment along the River Lys front. The Lys flows past Armentières and practically bisects the entire salient. It divides the battleline as at present constituted between Merville and St. Venant, where the river is canalized. This point is just along the southern border of Nieppe Forest, which is a part of the defensive screen before the railroad centre of Hazebrouck.

There has been going on a sort of general feeling out of this part of the line both on Saturday and Sunday. The British reported on Saturday that after a heavy bombardment the Germans endeavored to advance behind an artillery barrage near Locon, a town about three miles due north of Bethune. This attack was stopped without gain. While no details are given, the probabilities are that it was no more than a heavy reconnoissance in force to determine the British strength at this point. Evidently the information which was acquired as a result was not sufficient, so the same thing was tried again. This time the attempt was made a little further west, near Hinges, which is just south of La Bassée Canal, about two miles northwest of Bethune. Again, however, the attempt was stopped before the British lines were reached. But these two efforts, combined with the heavy artillery fire along the Lys Canal, indicate that this part of the line is about to be attacked, although the plans may be changed as the result of the British show of strength.

There is, however, good reason why this section of the front should be the next to receive attention. In the first place, it is a section which has been relatively quiet for a long time. Not for at least two weeks has there been any German attempt to advance, the fighting being all centralized in the hill zone about Mont Kemmel. In the second place, the battle of Flanders is not an independent operation unconnected with the fighting before Amiens. The Amiens battle was held up because of the British defenses about Arras-Vimy Ridge and the heights of Notre Dame de Lorette. The advance along the Somme and the Avre could not continue while these two points were held directly on the German flank. Therefore, the Germans endeavored to flank them out by a drive on the north. They were somewhat diverted from this plan by what appeared to be the sudden giving way of the Portuguese division which held the line near Armentières. The Germans, thinking then that they had an opportunity to drive through to the sea, changed their plans to make the attempt. Now, however, this has been broken up. The German way to the sea by way of Ypres or Hazebrouck is blocked by British and French reinforcements, so that it is impracticable without suffering unjustifiable losses.

The Germans, then, are confronted with the necessity, after a waste of precious time during which the Allies have had an opportunity to gather themselves together and prepare for the blow, of falling back on their original plan of flanking the Arras defenses. The point of attack for this purpose is naturally the southern side of the salient, where a break in the British line or even a material bending may have serious consequences in opening the way for further activity in the Amiens sector. This is the real meaning of the attacks of the last two days and of the heavy artillery firing along the Lys.

The British hold and have held continuously the southern bank of La Bassée Canal. During the time when this front was active the Germans made strenuous efforts to deprive the British of the protection of this obstacle, but to no avail. The attacks, however, were not made with the same weight or the same intensity as that which marked the Kemmel fighting. The length of the preliminary bombardment presages a more serious effort, a more determined attack on this occasion. The advantage in such an attack will lie entirely with the defense.

All of the ground between the Lys and La Bassée Canal is low. There is not a single element in the entire terrain above the general level of the plain of French Flanders. It is a difficult matter, then, to mass troops for such an attack without the concentration becoming at once known to the defense. Moreover, the very existence before the British lines of the canal over which the Germans must pass gives the British a material advantage which has already cost the Germans heavily. Finally, immediately in the rear of this line and within easy range of the smaller field guns of the British there is a line of hills of which the heights of Notre Dame are but the eastern limit, affording excellent artillery positions.

A part of the German plan in this attack may well be also the clearing of the Nieppe Forest by a flanking operation along the southern border. This object has also been previously tried by a frontal attack based on Merville, but has proved a failure. If the Germans can stretch their lines out along the canal by driving forward the point of the salient, they will have half surrounded the Nieppe Forest, and will thus have taken a step preliminary to clearing out the woods. Thus two objects will be accomplished at the same time.

Philip Gibbs's Story of the Great Battle

chance, a slender one, but not beyond possibility, that the German people will be so horrified by this spilling of their soldiers' blood in the frenzied desire for a decisive victory that they will rise in passion against it, with cries against those who order it to go on.

Already the German people are beginning to realize that, notwithstanding the jubilations of their newspapers, the letters from the Emperor to his Generals, and from the Generals to their Emperor, and all the stage management of a victorious drama, their losses have been frightful since March 21.

Germany's Agony Revealed.

A day or two ago in Flanders a wagon drawn by two mules dashed into our lines. Their drivers had been killed or scared by our harassing fire, so these mules came to us. In the wagon was a German mail of unopened letters. Those letters reveal the agony, the spiritual revolt of the people, who understand something of the truth, and see nothing but death in all this:

"Do you think you won't be coming on leave soon now?" so one letter says. "It's high time you got away, for it is past your turn. Oh, how much longer is it all going to last! It is full time the wicked humbug of it were at an end. In the last few days we have had news of the death of five relatives in the big offensive. It is frightful, and still no sign of peace! The world is full of sorrow and misery! If only this wicked war would end, this murder cease! A youngster from here has just been killed, and he would have been 19 in May. Oh, what a cost, and how much more to pay before the end!"

In another letter there is the same wail of grief:

"You can imagine there is no rest for me in these times, and all my thoughts are taken up by the new offensive and all that it will cost. Karl has been killed. What a shame it is, but we can do nothing to make things any better. Peace does not seem to be coming along, as we fondly hoped. All this in the west is too wicked for anything, and we are full of worry and anxiety. A whole crowd out hereabouts have had news of the death of their men folk.

"It is too awful for anything. Four years of it now, and no sign of the end! We hope every day it will come to a decision and the English will be driven into the North Sea, but they stand firm."

Meanwhile the war goes on, and will go on.

May 4.—How many days will there be before the next battle? Now that nearly a week has passed without German attacks since that morning of April 29 when our British and French troops staggered some of the enemy's best divisions by a slaughtering fire, there has been no action but a ceaseless action of artillery.

Last night again, as on the night before, our guns were loud with that far-carrying rumbling and laboring which shakes the hillsides and shocks the valleys, and through sunlight and storm, in quiet woods and in fields far behind the lines is almost continuous like the surge of the sea.

Yet because immense numbers of men have not for six days come together in bloody strife, one has out here, when not within shell range, a passing illusion that the passion and fury of these battles are ebbing out. It is an illusion caused partly by the beauty of these May days, when every wood, copse, and hedge is on fire with little green gleams, and the glades and meadows are carpeted with flowers, and the cuckoo is calling all day with a wistful human voice, which somehow puts pain in one's heart.

All that is foolishness and nonsense that intrudes into this grim business of war. There is a lull in the big battle only because the enemy is reorganizing his divisions, rearranging and maintaining his gun power, preparing for another phase of the offensive which will be as formidable as the gathering of all his forces for another supreme effort can make it.

We are not making it easy for him to get on with his plans, and heavy rains have made his roads bad, and filled the bogs behind him. That bombardment of ours last night and on other nights, beyond any question, confused his arrangements with such a confusion as one sees in a neat house in Arras or Amiens when high explosives enter in and disturb the scheme of things.

Behind the German lines there are scenes which must make men sick and silly if they get into them—and out of them. From prisoners and other sources, we know something at least of the effect of our gun-fire over there in Albert and on the Bapaume road beyond, and up in Flanders, in the old places of horror which were our places, beyond Shell-fire Corner and Hooge, and along the duckboards down from Wytschaete and the tracks that go past Kemmel Hill.

BRITAIN RETALIATES ON GERMAN OFFICERS

LONDON, May 5.—In an address delivered at Newton, Lancashire, Lord Newton, Assistant Secretary of Foreign Affairs, after referring to those who are dissatisfied because German prisoners of war in England are not employed under the same brutally severe conditions as British and other prisoners are in Germany, said his experience was that the best policy was to treat the prisoners well.

"It would, however," he said, "be idiotic not to retaliate when necessary, and during the last few days retaliation has been put into operation at a certain German officers' camp in Great Britain, because a Corps Commander of the 10th German army persistently refused to remove grievances complained of by our men."

"If this question were left to me," he added, "in view of recent captures, and knowing what our men will have to undergo, I would be prepared to go further than we have done."

POPE CONTEMPLATES NO NEW PEACE MOVE

Occasion Not Favorable, Nor Does an Opening Seem Near, Vatican Announces.

ROME, May 4, (Associated Press.)—No favorable occasion for a further peace move by Pope Benedict has presented itself, nor does one seem near, it was stated at the Vatican today when inquiry was made there regarding the report that the Pope would make a new peace offer on Whitsunday.

"It is no secret," replied the Vatican authorities of whom the correspondent inquired regarding the report, "that the Pope, since the beginning of his pontificate, has interested himself regarding three great issues concerning the war. First, to maintain absolute impartiality; second, to limit as much as possible the extent of the conflict and its horrors; third, to work in very way, on every propitious occasion, to restore concord and brotherhood among the peoples.

"Given this program, it is only natural that should a propitious occasion arise the Pope would do his best to carry it out.

"It is an easy task to prophesy from time to time, within a few weeks or months, some new action on the part of the Pope, which may occur at any moment, if a favorable occasion shall arise, which, however, has not yet occurred, nor does it seem near."

FOR IRISH GOVERNMENT NOW

Plunkett Favors It as War Measure —Doesn't Like Lloyd George Plan.

LONDON, Monday, May 6.—The Government's two-fold policy of conscription and home rule for Ireland is disastrous, says Sir Horace Plunkett, President of the recent Irish convention, in a letter to the press.

The Government ought, he says, to establish a responsible government in Ireland at once as a war measure and Ireland would then voluntarily join in the war.

BATTLE FOR IRISH SEAT.

Sinn Fein and Nationalists Have Thus Far Refused to Compromise.

DUBLIN, May 5, (Associated Press.)—The opening of the election campaign in East Caven today brought to the constituency about twenty Irish members of Parliament and many representatives of the Sinn Fein organization. Attempts to arrange for rival speakers to use the same platform were unsuccessful and many rival meetings were held.

Priests spoke on opposite sides, but generally urged the Bishop's appeal for a compromise by the withdrawal of both candidates. Both sides agreed in denouncing conscription, but the Sinn Feiners repudiated the action of Parliament and asserted that Ireland's case must come before a peace conference.

In Dublin today the collection for the anti-conscription fund resulted in a payment of first installments averaging £200 to a parish.

PAMPHLETS IN PEACE DRIVE.

Germans Flooding Switzerland with the Revived Propaganda.

GENEVA, May 5.—Germany's new "peace offensive," which was launched in Switzerland a week ago, seems to be directed principally against English and American residents and visitors, whose letterboxes are overflowing with pamphlets.

A typical instance of the propagande is seen in the fact that the Lichnowsky revelations regarding the events leading up to the war, published by a Zurich firm, and which have been bought by the wholesale, have been followed by a distorted Germanophile version, which is distributed gratuitously.

AMERICANS ON PIAVE TRIP.

Impressed by Motor Boat Journey Along the Italian Front.

ITALIAN FRONT, April 10. (Correspondence of Associated Press.)—Three Americans have just enjoyed the unusual experience of taking a motor boat ride on the Piave River, the dividing line between the Austrian and Italian fronts. They are probably the only Americans who have been on a boat on the Piave since the fall of Caporetta. They are Henry Carroll, Jr., the United States Consul at Venice; Major Guy Lowell and Captain William Hereford of the American Red Cross. Major Lowell and Captain Hereford were in Venice to inspect the distribution of gifts of useful articles to soldiers on the marine front. The trip on the Piave was arranged by the Italian General commanding the headquarters near Venice.

"The trip was one of extreme interest," said Captain Hereford. "It was necessary to pass the barriers before getting out into the Piave River. Once there the feeling was of being out in the open between your own men and the enemy. As a matter of fact, the Italians were a few miles further to the north, where they are bravely holding the line against all assaults.

"Major Lowell indicated on the slopes of the riverbank a mass of what looked to be brown cactus leaves. It was really 'chevaux-de-frise, with sharp-pointed spikes, which would make a painful and difficult object to get over. The spikes were planted on the shores as thickly as flowers in a garden.

"We climbed an ascent and had a remarkable view of one of the most interesting battlefields in history. Five miles to the north two lines were fronting each other, and constantly one heard the boom of guns and could see the clouds of smoke from bursting shells. Villages that had been ruined by bombardment were clearly discernible. From the Austrian lines the 'sausages,' or stationary balloons, were seen rising for observation. Airplanes were hovering in the air. From behind us the big guns of the Italians were sending shells into the enemy's territory.

"More, even, than the natural defenses, was the morale to be found among the Italians. Ability to resist and the spirit to conquer were in evidence among all of the men we saw on the marine front. They know that the enemy will come no further, and ask themselves only how long it will be before the Austrians and Germans will give way and begin the retreat to their old stand behind the mountains."

"A LIE," SAYS TUMULTY.

Berthelme Yarn About President's Secretary Malicious and False.

By Telegraph to the Editor of The Times.

The White House,
Washington, D. C., May 5.

My attention has been called to a story appearing in today's NEW YORK TIMES which carries the headline, "Bartheleme Tale Laid to Tumulty."

As usual, the basis for this German story is mere hearsay. The whole thing is malicious and false, and I am deeply grieved that circulation should be given to a lie that had its inspiration in the brain of an enemy intriguer like Dr. Bartheleme without first affording me an opportunity to be heard in the matter.

German Airmen Now Attacking Dutch Fishermen in North Sea

LONDON, May 5.—German airplanes have recently been attacking Dutch fishing vessels with machine-gun fire wherever the little boats have been found in the North Sea.

Five Dutch fishermen landed yesterday at a British port after a harrowing experience. They said that their boat had been attacked by four German airmen, who for two hours rained machine-gun bullets on their unarmed ship.

The crew took to the boats and rowed sixty miles before being picked up by a small British vessel. Their fishing boat was later brought into harbor by a British destroyer and bore numerous signs of the enemy fire.

FRENCH BOY A HERO FACING FIRING SQUAD

Gen. Baden-Powell Tells English Boy Scouts of His Firm Resistance to German Terrorism.

LONDON, May 5.—Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, addressing a central meeting of Boy Scouts at Guild Hall, told of work done by French Boy Scouts in the neighborhood of the fighting line. A heroic deed by one French scout was described in a letter found on the body of a dead German. General Baden-Powell read the letter, which follows:

"A traitor has just been shot—a little French lad belonging to one of those gymnastic societies which wears the tricolor button. The poor little fellow, in his infatuation, wanted to be a hero.

"A German column was passing along a wooded defile and the boy was caught and asked whether the French were about. He refused to give information. Fifty yards further on fire was opened from the cover of the wood.

"The prisoner was asked in French if he had known that the enemy was in the forest, and he did not deny it. He went with firm step to a telegraph post and stood up against it, with a green vineyard behind him, and received the volley of the firing party with a proud smile on his face. Infatuated boy—it was a pity to see such wasted courage."

TURKS ADMIT REVERSE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 5, (via London.)—The Turkish official report, issued today, relative to operations in Mesopotamia and Palestine reads:

On the Irak fronts strong British detachments won ground south of Kirkuk.

In Palestine violent fighting continues in the Jorden sector. The enemy's attacks have been particularly strong, but have failed.

FINNS ASK RUSSIANS TO SURRENDER FORT

tuting part of the Kronstadt defenses. The Kronstadt Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates have refused to comply with this demand and are organizing resistance, co-operating with General Shwartz, the Petrograd commandant. The Russians are disarming all Finnish Red Guards crossing the line.

MOSCOW, May 5, (Associated Press.)—M. Tchitcherin has sent a wireless message to Berlin asking permission to remove Russian property from the Fortress of Viborg, Finland. Under the terms of the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty the supplies at Viborg were held to be Russian property and Germany assumed responsibility for them when her troops seized the fortress.

At the same time M. Tchitcherin requested the German Government to inform the Spanish Ambassador at Berlin that Adolph Joffe was the authorized Russian representative in Germany. The Spanish Ambassador has refused to turn over the key to the Russian Embassy to M. Joffe.

LONDON, May 5.—The General commanding the Petrograd garrison has issued a statement declaring the city now free from any direct menace, and that the populace has no cause for alarm, says a Reuter dispatch from Moscow under date of April 27.

"All measures for defense have been taken against possible Finnish attacks," says the General's announcement. "Some fighting has occurred at a point near the Russo-Finnish frontier between White and Red Guards, but as soon as the combatants crossed the Russian frontier both sides were disarmed."

STOCKHOLM, May 5.—The political party of Young Finns has split on the question whether Finland shall be a republic or a monarchy, the Helsingfors correspondent of the Aftonbladet reports. Four of the Cabinet Ministers, now in Helsingfors, and twenty-three prominent members of the Young Finnish group, it appears, have published an article in the Helsingin Sanomat, which is the only bourgeois newspaper favoring a republic, in which they advocate a monarchy.

This seems significant, in view of the fact that the Young Finns heretofore have been almost a unit for a republic. The advocates of the monarchy explain their standpoint by pointing to the chasm between the elements of the Finnish people—a condition which they believe can be dealt with successfully only by a monarchical form of government.

OUTBREAKS AGAINST JEWS.

Rioters at Vitebsk Loot Stores, but Soviet Troops Kill 7 and Wound 20.

MOSCOW, May 4, (Associated Press.)—An anti-Jewish outbreak, planned by anarchists, has occurred at Vitebsk, where the rioters declared their purpose to "expel the Jews from the Soviet and Soviet institutions," but, instead, looted Jewish stores, a theatre and a hotel, causing large property losses. A riot was started simultaneously in different parts of the town, but this was checked by the local revolutionary troops and Red Army forces, seven rioters being killed and twenty wounded. The remainder were arrested. This was but one of many anti-Jewish riots which have recently occurred and which are attributed to the persistent and widespread anti-Semitic propaganda. The Moscow Soviet is creating a special commission to fight the anti-Semitists by an educational campaign among the masses and in the Red Army.

TO RECOGNIZE ESTHONIA.

Great Britain Answers Appeal of New Nation's Parliament.

LONDON, May 5.—Delegates representing the Esthonian National Council, or Diet, recently laid before the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Balfour, a memorandum dealing with the political situation in Esthonia and asked for a favorable reception of the statement of their national aims and aspirations. They have received a communication from Mr. Balfour to the following effect:

"The British Government greet with sympathy the aspirations of the Esthonian people and are glad to reaffirm their readiness to grant provisional recognition to the Esthonian National Council as a de facto independent body, until the peace conference, when the future status of Esthonia ought to be settled as far as possible in accordance with the wishes of the population."

In the meantime the British Government expresses willingness to recognize M. Piip, one of the delegates, as the informal diplomatic representative of the Esthonian Provisional Government.

MOSCOW, April 26, (Associated Press.)—Transcaucasia has proclaimed its independence, a conservative Government being formed headed by M. Chkhemkeli.

EMERY FREED FROM PRISON.

American Seized in Alands Still Detained in Germany.

BERLIN, (via Amsterdam,) May 5.—Professor Henry Crosby Emery, American, who was seized when the Germans landed in the Aland Islands and taken to Germany, is now at Zauenberg, Pomerania. He is not a prisoner, being merely compelled to report to the local police, and not permitted to leave Germany at present. Professor Emery is suspected of actively identifying himself with the Bolshevist propaganda in the Aland Islands and Finland.

When Professor Emery was first brought to Germany he was assigned to the prison camp at Tuchel, West Prussia, where American prisoners of war are interned, but he was promptly released and transferred to the Pomeranian town, where he is now subjected to the same restrictions as other Americans in Germany in respect to permission to travel.

Threat to Shoot Russian Prisoners.

MOSCOW, April 26, (Associated Press.)—The Austrian military authorities sent a wireless message to M. Tchitcherin, the Bolshevist Foreign Minister, threatening to shoot two Russians in retaliation for the execution of any Austrian prisoner shot when trying to escape, reports of which have reached Vienna. The Foreign Minister denied the charge and demanded proofs, saying that Austrians in Russia enjoyed greater liberty than Russians in Austria and that the shooting of innocent, defenseless men had not been heard of.

Noise Derails the Train of Thought

VITAL energy is consumed, too, in subconsciously combating its deviating influence. Creative minds function best in an atmosphere of peace and quiet.

The Noiseless Typewriter minimizes auditory disturbances by ridding business of perhaps its greatest noise-evil—the distracting clatter of the hammer-blow typewriting machines. It eliminates noise by simply refusing to make a noise.

Instead of the swinging, blatant blow, the Noiseless executes a scientific, short-stroke pressure of type-bar to paper, in unbelievable quiet and with amazing speed. Simply a matter of superior mechanical conception and construction. Write, call or telephone for a demonstration.

BERLIN FEARED FOR ARMY IN UKRAINE

Citizens Plotted to Massacre It, So Eichhorn Had to Act, Vice Chancellor Asserts.

AND THEY WITHHELD GRAIN

Consequently There Was Nothing to Do but Enforce Treaty Rights and Get It.

AMSTERDAM, May 3, (Associated Press.)—The Imperial German Vice Chancellor, Friedrich von Payer, speaking before the Main Committee of the Reichstag yesterday, attempted to justify Germany's use of the iron hand in Ukrainia in the last few days, where, he declared, prominent Ukrainians, under the title of the Committee of Safety, had been caught planning the assassination of all German officers, or, as the Vice Chancellor phrased it, "a sort of Sicilian Vespers."

[Sicilian Vespers is the term given to the massacre of the French in Sicily by the Sicilians, which began at Palermo on March 30, 1282, so called from its commencement at vespers on Easter Monday. The populace ran through the city, crying out, "Let the French die," and 8,000, without distinction of rank, age, or sex, were killed.]

Von Payer declared, according to Berlin dispatches, that the membership of the Committee of Safety included several Ukrainian Ministers, and that the committee held its meetings at the house of the War Minister. The Germans, he added, therefore "took steps to render them harmless."

Were Invited to Restore Order.

"The Germans entered the Ukraine," said the Vice Chancellor, "at the express wish of the Ukrainian Government for the purpose of restoring order. But there were also other grounds. We had a lively interest in getting foodstuffs as speedily as possible. The general idea then was that great quantities of foodstuffs could be procured in the Ukraine, and the Ukrainians undertook to deliver at least 1,000,000 tons by Aug. 1. The Rada, however, had no means of insisting on the delivery of the grain by the population. The Germans, therefore, had to concern themselves with obtaining deliveries in accordance with the treaty.

"Our activity in this direction has been to a certain extent a source of discontent. The recent reorganization of the Ukrainian Government has nothing to do with the decree issued by General von Eichhorn (commander of the German army group in Russia) relative to the sowing of crops, nor with the arrest of members of the Government.

"This reorganization is purely a Ukrainian affair with which we are not concerned. The Rada has recently lost ground to an increasing extent. It undoubtedly had the merit of having created the Ukrainian State and giving it peace. But stubborn adherence to communistic theories that have gained no sympathy among the peasant population, which is attached to the soil, seems to have been principally responsible for bringing about its end.

"The field sowing decree was issued because opposition to the proposed land expropriation created the danger that a great part of the soil would remain uncultivated and that the Ukraine thereby would be unable to fulfill her obligations toward us.

"The interests of our people, therefore, were at stake. The Ukrainian Government was powerless to fulfill its obligations. Moreover, the decree was not addressed to the Ukrainian people, but to the German military authorities.

"Measures have now been taken that in all affairs of political importance our military commanders must only act in collaboration with the German Minister.

Reasons for the Arrests.

"As regards the arrest of members of the Government in the Rada on the night of April 24, Director Dobry of the Ukrainian Bank, and a member of the delegation which conducted the financial negotiations with us, was arrested by three armed men, who declared they acted on the instructions of 'The Committee of Ukrainian Salvation.' This committee pursued an anti-German tendency, and several Ukrainian Ministers belonged to it. They went so far as to aim at driving the Germans out of their country, and met in the house of the War Minister, where on one occasion a sort of Sicilian Vespers—namely, the assassination of all German officers—was suggested.

"Nothing remained, therefore, but to render harmless the foolish instigators of this plan. Our Minister, Baron von Mumm, demanded that the Premier immediately institute an investigation. The Premier promised to do so, but nothing followed.

"There was thus undoubted danger to the lives of our officers and army. The only course open was either to take legal action in the Ukrainian courts, which was impracticable, or to insure our safety by other means.

"General von Eichhorn, therefore, in entire accord with the German Minister, decreed 'a state of enhanced protection,' under which all offenses against public peace and order may be judged by field tribunals. Legal proceedings were thus inaugurated under a new code and thus the arrests ordered by personalities already mentioned."

The Vice Chancellor explained that the arrests made in the Rada while that body was in session was a regrettable blunder for which immediate reparation was made and regret in writing was expressed. The German local commander responsible for the blunder was immediately removed from office and the legal investigation continues.

The new Ukrainian Government, the Vice Chancellor said, was established by the people themselves, namely, by the peasants, who desired an orderly replacement of the previous Government. These peasants, some 7,000 in number, he said, proclaimed the Ukrainian General Skoropadski Dictator and Hetman of Ukraine. He accepted the election, and is now engaged in forming a new Government, which will be a democratic one, distinguished from the former Government by its nonrecognition of communistic theories which deny any ownership of the soil.

Socialists Criticise Policy.

In the discussion that followed the Vice Chancellor's speech, Philipp Scheidemann, majority Socialist leader, described the whole procedure as related by Herr von Payer as incomprehensible and declared that the people do not stand behind Hetman Skoropadski's new Government, composed of Constitutional Democrats and Federalists, "the last people with whom we should work." In conclusion Herr Scheidemann declared that a supply of grain cannot be obtained in this way.

Mathias Erzberger, Socialist, urged that the shape taken by the eastern question would be decisive for the entire future in modeling European affair. He said that Ukraine was the pivot in the east, and as a guiding line for Germany's future policy there he suggested that the political department of the German Government should be the sole deciding factor. The supply of grain promised in the peace treaty could be expected only if Germany, on her part, delivered the goods promised in exchange.

Baron von den Busesche-Haddenhausen, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replying to criticisms, said that further negotiations were proceeding at Kiev. He emphatically contradicted the assertion that Germany's policy was supported by the big land owners of Ukraine.

The Berlin Vossiche Zeitung states that the new Premier of the Ukraine is M. Vassilenko of the Constitutional Democratic Party; the Foreign Minister, M. Losky of the Federalist Party; the Minister of the Interior, M. Lyzchub of the Constitutional Democratic Party, and the War Minister, M. Silvensky of the Polish Party.

The newspaper declares its belief that this Cabinet will favor closer relations between the Ukraine and Russia.

A telegram from Kiev says that conferences are being held there between Ukrainian delegates and representatives of the Russian Ruthenians, with the object of determining the boundary and regulating relations. A union is likely to result, the telegram declares.

An economic treaty supplementing the treaty of peace between Rumania and the Central Powers has been initiated. This will complete all the negotiations connected with the conclusion of the peace between the two countries, and the treaty, which was agreed to on April 2, is ready for final signaturee.

LONDON, May 5.—The Ukrainian Ministers who were recently arrested by the German military authorities were soon afterward set free, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Moscow today.

General von Eichhorn, the German military commander, says this correspondent's report of the German action in the Ukraine, issued a peremptory order Sunday, repealing all constitutional rights in Ukraine territory. On Tuesday he interrupted the Central Rada while it was discussing this order, and arrested several of the Ministers, who, however, were released the next day.

TRANSFER OF EX-CZAR; NO MENTION OF HIS SON

Nicholas, His Wife and a Daughter Taken from Tobolsk to Ekaterinburg.

MOSCOW, May 4, (Associated Press.)—Nicholas Romanoff, the former Emperor, together with the former Empress and one of their daughters, has been transferred from Tobolsk to Ekaterinburg, 170 miles southeast of Perm on the Asiatic side of the Ural Mountains, according to a Soviet announcement. The transfer was ordered because of the alleged efforts of peasants and monarchists in the neighborhood of Tobolsk to promote the escape of the prisoners.

The announcement does not mention the former heir apparent, the young Alexis Romanoff.

From Scandinavian sources there came reports late last month that there had been serious rioting in Petrograd, and that the young Alexis had been proclaimed Emperor, with Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch as Regent. Other advices that have come out of Russia have contained nothing to confirm these reports, and it was announced in the British House of Commons on Thursday last that the Foreign Office was without official confirmation of the report of a counter-revolution in Petrograd.

The reports were ascribed in some quarters to German inspiration, and, in fact, on May 2 they were revived in Vienna. Meanwhile the German Foreign Office had manifested keen interest in the rumors and instructed the German representatives in Russia to make inquiries regarding them, it was reported in Berlin advices.

The whereabouts of the former heir to the throne were not indicated in any of the reports.

The former Emperor and his family have been prisoners at Tobolsk, in Western Siberia, since last August.

GERMANS USE NEW GAS; HURL IT IN BOTTLES

Liquid Gives Off Fumes Causing Nausea and Sneezing, but No Other Harm.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON A FRENCH BATTLEFRONT, Saturday, May 4, (Associated Press.)—What is probably a new German liquefied gas was projected this morning against the Picardy front, where American troops are fighting.

The gas, in its fluid form, is contained in glass bottles. On bursting they give off some substance from which heavy, white fumes, transparent in texture, continue to arise for five minutes.

No detonation was heard as the bottles were hurled through the air, and apparently they were thrown by a spring. The gas caused nausea, sneezing, and coughing, but did not harm any of the Americans.

There has been lively artillery fire, but the Americans here have not been attacked by the infantry.

Last night an enemy Sergeant Major and eight men attempted to raid one of our forward posts, consisting of three men. The Germans captured one of our men, but he escaped before he could be taken into the enemy's lines.

In attempting to recover their prisoner the Germans strayed into the American lines. They were attacked and the patrol leader was wounded and captured. He belonged to a reserve Saxon regiment.

One of the American patrols encountered a superior enemy force of twenty-two men. Fighting as they went, they made their way back to the American lines without losses.

Two German airplanes were brought down today.

BAYLIES BAGS SIXTH FOE.

New England Sergeant Gaining Fame as a Daring Flier.

PARIS, May 5.—Sergeant Frank L. Baylies of New Bedford, Mass., brought down his sixth German airplane a few days ago. In commenting on Baylies's entrance to the ranks of the aces, the Matin says that he promises to develop into one of the foremost of the airmen.

firing when the enemy cried "Kamerad."

During the last three days our artillery in the Luneville sector has completely chased the Germans from their front positions and have wiped certain sections of the targets in the enemy rear area off the map. This is the same artillery that not long ago gave a similar performance in another Lorraine sector. On the present occasion, so far as all investigation shows, the Germans have entirely abandoned the territory at least as far back as a point beyond their second line. The only signs that they are there at all are a few machine gun posts hidden in out-of-the-way places in the back areas, which cut loose when the opportunity offers. Just now, the German first and second lines are in about the same condition as No Man's Land, in which latter area the Americans are working more freely than ever before.

The sections affected by the work of these American artillerymen are the line south, southwest, and southeast of Halloville. (This town is approximately thirteen miles almost directly east of Luneville and about six miles from the German border at its nearest point, to the northeast.) The American raiders have found that the shells worked terrific havoc at many places plainly visible where the big projectiles from the heavy guns had fallen.

McADOO AFTER CAR THIEVES

Property on Railroads Now Under Government Protection.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—To break up car thievery, which has cost railroads and shippers millions of dollars, the Railroad Administration has created a property protection section, with Philip J. Doherty, former Interstate Commerce Commissioner, at its head. The intention of the new agency, announced today, is to make consignments of merchandise shipped on American railroads as inviolate as United States mail pouches.

The section takes over the great army of railroad detectives and, working in co-operation with local authorities and with the aid of shippers, Chambers of Commerce and other business organizations, it will make a determined effort to bring to justice the thousands of car bandits who have operated almost openly in some sections because of the leniency shown them by local authorities.

WILL RATION SUGAR TO MANUFACTURERS

All Except Those Making Essential Foods to Have Their Supply Cut on May 15.

CANDY TRADE TO SUFFER

Highest Allowance to be 80 Per Cent. of Amount of Sugar Used Prior to Last November.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Manufacturers of foodstuffs using sugar, with the exception of those listed in a small preferred class, are to be rationed by the United States Food Administration and their supply cut down to 80 per cent. of the amount used prior to Nov. 1, 1917.

Firms which started in business or expanded their plants after that date will be cut to 50 per cent of their requirements and firms which began operations or increased their production after April 1, 1918, will be cut off entirely.

These rules were announced today as effective on May 15, and have been adopted in order to assure sufficient supplies for home canners and the commercial manufacturers of jams and other foodstuffs regarded as essential.

Producers of non-edible products will be forced to go entirely without sugar, as a survey of the stock on hand and that which will be available during the year has made it evident that careful conservation measures must be adopted.

The candy and soft drink trades will be affected by the new regulations, but it is believed that in the manufacture of candy substitutes, such as nuts, can be used without appreciably reducing quantity production.

Included with the confectionery and soft drinks in the rationing system are condiments, soda water, chocolate, candies, beverage syrups, flavoring extracts, chewing gum, cocoa, sweet pickles, wines, cereals, and invert sugar.

Manufacturers of essential foodstuffs will be permitted to buy sufficient sugar to meet their full requirements.

In this class are some preserves and packers of vegetables, catsups, and chili sauce, fruit and milk, manufacturers of jam, jelly, and preserves, tobacco and explosives, apple butter and glycerine, ice cream, (not including sherbets and water ices,) druggists, (for medicine,) and producers of honey.

Ice cream is put on the preferred list, it was announced, to assure consumption of surplus milk supplies, and thus encourage dairy interests to maintain production. Tobacco was placed in this class largely because the amount of sugar used by tobacconists is almost negligible, the chief source of sweets being molasses.

"These definite classifications," reads an announcement, "protect the patriotic manufacturer who has been observing the request of the Food Administration against competitors who have taken advantage of the sugar shortage to increase their profits.

"Control of distribution will be in the hands of the Federal Food Administrators of each State. They will issue certificates to all manufacturers requiring sugar upon delivery of sworn statements showing the amounts to which each is entitled. None of the distributing agencies will be allowed to sell sugar to any class of manufacturers except upon delivery of certificates. The certificates cover the period from May 15 to July 1, when new conservation measures may be deemed advisable.

"All sellers of sugar who are refiners, jobbers, retail or wholesale grocers must cancel the certificates and return them within one month after the sale to the Federal Food Administrator by whom they were issued. From the returned certificate he will be able to check the record of those who are entitled to sugar and to detect any trading in or counterfeiting of certificates.

"Manufacturers are being required to report the amount of sugar they held on Jan. 1, 1917, and receipts from that date until July 1. Subtracting the amount on hand July 1 will give the total consumption for the first six months of 1917. They must also report stock on hand Jan. 1, 1918, and receipts since that date. From those figures the administrators will be able to determine the additional amount of sugar to which the manufacturers are entitled."

500 CHINESE PERISH IN RIVER COLLISION

Both the Steamship Kiang-Kwan and the Gunboat Chutai Wrecked Off Hankow.

PEKING, Tuesday, April 30, (Associated Press.)—More than 500 Chinese passengers were lost in the recent collision off Hankow, in which the Chinese steamship Kiang-kwan was sunk by the Chinese gunboat Chutai.

The Chutai was accompanying another gunboat, which had on board Premier Tuan Chi-jui, who was on the way to pay a visit to the commanders of the northern troops. A mistake in signals was the cause of the collision.

The collision wrecked the Chutai also, and she was beached.

The Chutai was a gunboat of 750 tons, 200 feet long, of 29 feet beam, and 8 feet draft, built at Kobe in 1906-07. She carried two 4.7-inch guns and two 12-pounders. Her complement was 101 men.

30 FROM WISCONSIN NAMED.

Casualty List Indicates Rainbows Are Again In Action.

The list of casualties cabled by General Pershing yesterday, includee the names of thirty soldiers of the 2d Company of the Wisconsin Machine Gun Battalion of the Rainbow Division. Of these, seventeen are listed as severely wounded, and the rest as slightly wounded. Lieut. John E. Smith of Fond du Luc, who is reported slightly wounded, is in the company which has suffered such heavy casualties.

Three weeks ago another of the Wisconsin machine gun units suffered heavily in action, when out of about seventy casualties reported by General Pershing, fifty-eight were members of the fighting Western battalion. The fact that the Wisconsin men are so numerous in the latest list from General Pershing indicates that the Rainbow Division is again in action.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., May 5.—Twenty-seven Fond Du Lac soldiers, included in the War Department's casualty list issued tonight, were members of what was Company E, 2d Regiment, Wisconsin National Guard, before the unit was mustered into Federal service. Records compiled here tonight showed that eighty-nine members of the company have been wounded in action. This city, with a population which is approximately 20,000, is believed to lead the State and perhaps the entire nation in the percentage of casualties.

"A RING ON THE PHONE—A LINE BY POST BRINGS THIS SERVICE TO YOU."

May 6, 1918.

Mr. and Mrs. Knickerbocker,

New York City.

Dear Sir and Madam:

You will be interested to know that in response to the demand of a large number of the most important firms, organizations and individuals in New York, we have created a special Business Service Department, with unique facilities to meet their needs and yours.

We are doing all kinds of multigraphing, mimeographing, typewriting, addressing, stenographic work, etc., of a new standard of quality and at the lowest consistent prices.

We intend to make this business the largest and most expertly conducted in New York and to that end operate a night force for rush orders and take and deliver work in all parts of the Greater City.

We assure you of our most careful attention to your wishes.

Yours very truly,
Cromwell Childe

AMERICAN WAR BULLETINS SOON

Weekly Review Abandoned and Early Announcement of New Plan Expected.

DAILY STATEMENT PROBABLE

Whether to be Issued at Washington or Pershing's Headquarters Not Yet Clear.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Early announcement of Secretary Baker's new plan for furnishing the country with adequate and authentic accounts of the doings of American troops in France was indicated today when The Weekly War Review, heretofore issued by the department, failed to make its appearance for the first time in some months. In explanation, it was said the new publicity policy was nearing completion and the old form of statement had been abandoned.

It has been customary for the statement to be given out on Sunday for publication the following day and covering operations in Europe up to the preceding Friday or Saturday. The review was made up at the War College, and the fact that it has frequently been certain that it was founded largely on unofficial press reports in commenting on the situation, even on the operations of American troops, has made officers here skeptical as to its value.

It is now believed that a more official summary, dealing almost exclusively with the activities of American troops as officially reported, will be substituted. Probably a daily statement will be made, although it is not clear yet whether this will be made public in Washington or at General Pershing's headquarters.

General Pershing has not entered upon the practice of issuing communiqués up to this time, it has been explained, because his has not been a wholly independent army so far as operations are concerned. Even the permanent American sector of the front, while commanded directly by an American General, is a part of a larger frontage under the command of a French officer, who is in turn under the French commander in chief. In view of this the American chief has not felt justified in issuing statements, as events on the line should be reported by the French command.

The situation is greatly changed now, however, and American units are scattered throughout the battle line. Some of them face the Germans with the French left wing near Amiens; others are brigaded with French troops at various points to the south, and, if others have not already joined the British armies in Flandors and Picardy, there is little doubt that they soon will do so.

Efforts probably will be made to get reports quickly from all these units, as well as from the American sector itself. Nothing would be made public that would touch upon the strategic situation of any part of the line, but the doings of the Americans in their own localities could be recorded, it is said, without furnishing any information to the enemy.

The Economy of Correctness of Style

GOOD form in clothes, like good breeding, has a permanency which is always recognizable.

The style of a well-cut, well-tailored suit or topcoat doesn't pass hurriedly.

It has a trimness—a clean-cut correctness—that is longer-lived than any material.

You never grow tired of it.

While an over-accentuated style—no matter by whom tailored—becomes blatantly monotonous.

For this reason the blue bloods among tailors are extra regardful of the charm of simplicity.

And Weber and Heilbroner clothes, for the same reason and the same clientele, cling to the same ideal.

There is true economy in them.

NEW YORK'S LOAN TOTAL $951,933,050

Oversubscription of $52,000,000 Will Grow Until All Banks Report.

$100,000,000 ON SATURDAY

Coupon Books Kept on Sale in Some Banks for Those Who Still Want to Buy.

The Bond Issue Division of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which had its clerks work all yesterday, announced last night that the New York District's total for subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan was $951,933,050. This represents an oversubscription of about $52,000,000, which will be greatly augmented when returns from all of the banks in the district are finally tabulated.

Although yesterday's mail was quite heavy, officials said that many of the institutions outside New York City sent in their reports as of the close of business at noon Saturday, and that consequently their reports did not include the big bulk of applications for bonds filed during the afternoon and evening. Many of the banks in this city and outside were so overwhelmed with the mass of subscriptions that came in Saturday that they did not stop to tabulate them, but postponed the work until today. Those closely identified with the Liberty Loan organization are confident that the final figures will shew that this district went beyond the one billion dollar mark.

All the eight sub-districts, with the exception of No. 2, with headquarters in Rochester, and No. 3, with offices in Syracuse and Utica, have exceeded their quotas, and these two are so close to 100 per cent. that it is believed that by the time the final reports are compiled their record will also shew an oversubscription. The banks have until Thursday to make their final returns. The following table gives the quotas and total subscriptions for each subdivision of the New York district:

New York City—	Quota.	Subscription.	P.C.
Manhattan	$618,794,000	$619,897,000	100
Brooklyn	39,916,900	43,195,900	109
Bronx	3,317,100	3,318,100	100
Queens	4,364,400	7,506,650	172
Richmond	1,032,900	2,185,600	211
	$667,125,300	$676,102,650	101
Sub-Districts—
1. Buffalo	$43,628,500	$46,300,400	106
2. Rochester	20,969,400	20,148,350	96
3. Syracuse and Utica	29,071,800	26,774,600	92
4. Binghamton	9,449,800	10,482,800	112
5. Albany	34,691,600	42,497,600	122
6. Long Isl., outside N. Y. C.	5,474,800	10,359,100	187
7. Northern N. J.	71,925,000	95,504,950	133
8. Fairfield Co., Conn., W'b'tr & Rockland Co., N. Y.	17,993,900	24,602,600	139
Total outside N. Y. City	$232,874,700	$275,330,400	118
Total for Dist.	$900,000,000	$951,933,050	105

The gain reported yesterday was $24,962,050 which, added to the $153,420,350 increase recorded Saturday, makes a total of $178,382,400 for subscriptions filed Friday and Saturday. Inasmuch as the over-night gain on Saturday morning was approximately $78,000,000—the same representing Friday's applications—it would appear that the applications filed on Saturday were in excess of $100,000,000, not counting the subscriptions received by the banks late in the afternoon and evening of the closing day of the four weeks' campaign. The practice of the Federal Reserve Bank has been to make public each day the subscription figures for the previous day following the receipt of daily postcard returns from the banks. This system of tabulation shewed $78,000,000 for Friday but many of the banks in Manhattan and the Bronx did not mail their returns on Saturday, but sent them by special messengers or communicated them by the telephone, and these reports of Saturday brought the gain for the two days up to $153,420,350.

"Coupon Books" on Sale.

Although formally the campaign for the Third Liberty Loan closed on Saturday night, persons desiring to purchase "coupon books" permitting of weekly or monthly installment payments on $50 and $100 bonds may still do so at the various banks, whose supply of books has not been exhausted. An association of banks and trust companies of New York City has subscribed to a round amount of bonds, and they in turn have issued these coupon books for the convenience of parsons who want to buy bonds on the partial payment plan. It was said yesterday that the total of coupon books issued would exceed 1,000,000.

The Subscription Department of the Federal Reserve Bank, which is in charge of Malcolm D. Simpson of J. P. Morgan & Co., has been working continuously since Friday. With the assistance of volunteer workers mobilized from the ranks of the downtown banks and city departments, this department has been working with day and night shifts in an effort to clean up the big job by this morning. Mr. Simpson said last night that his men handled about 150,000 subscription blanks since Saturday afternoon. The Subscription Department receives all the applications gathered by the Liberty Loan Committee's canvassers, by the school children, by the theatres, by policemen and firemen, and by the various women's and other organizations.

When the subscription cards are received they are sorted out according to the bank where the payments are to be made. Clerks then enumerate the subscription on long sheets, which are forwarded to the banks. At the same time a card is filled out for mailing to the subscriber, advising him of the receipt of his subscription and calling upon him to make his initial payment of 5 per cent. Under the system worked out by Mr. Simpson the notice to the bank is mailed at the same time as the notice goes out to the subscriber.

Statistics of the Campaign.

The Publicity Department of the Liberty Loan Committee gave out a statement last night reviewing its work for the Third Liberty Loan campaign. Guy Emerson was Director; the Press Bureau was in charge of John Price Jones; the Advertising Bureau was headed by James I. Clarke, while Grosvenor Farwell had charge of the Service Bureau and Joseph Hartigan of the Speakers' Bureau. C. F. Pritchard was the office manager.

The Press Bureau reports that newspapers and periodicals in this district published between 35,000 and 40,000 columns of news, editorials and feature articles pertaining to the Liberty Loan. The Advertising Bureau announces that during the campaign there were published 35,000 advertisements, of from 12,000,000 to 13,000,000 lines. In addition the Advertising Bureau distributed 184 sets of posters, leaflets, inserts, franked post cards, novelties, hand bills, car cards, and circulars. The supply division estimates that in all it distributed throughout the district nearly 100,000,000 pieces of literature weighing approximately 125 tons. These consisted of 1,000,000 posters, 6,240,000 inserts, 1,000,000 book marks, 1,225,000 copies of anthems, 500,000 volunteer buttons, 300,000 candy box inserts, 4,000,000 franked post cards, 13,000 hotel room cards, 3,000 restaurant cards, 250,000 slips for packages, 150,000 honor roll streamers, 3,000,000 subscription window cards, 1,000,000 Treasury circulars, 50,000 "Save and Lend" poems, printed in Greek, Yiddish, Italian, German, and Hungarian, as well as in English.

17,000,000 BUYERS OF THE THIRD LOAN

Second Liberty Loan, the general results of the Third are far more pleasing to Treasury Department officials, and considering the fact that the loan came at a time when the country was being called upon to raise billions in income taxes and excess profit taxes, the results were considered quite remarkable.

It is not denied that the income tax requirements greatly curtailed subscriptions in the large financial centres. Another important fact to be taken into consideration is that the Treasury Department had indicated that it would accept only half of the oversubscriptions to the Second Loan, whereas it had reserved the right to accept all of the oversubscriptions to the Third.

One of the most pleasing results of the Third Loan is the wide distribution among farmers. The agricultural States generally were the first States to attain their quotas. The entire section of the United States west of the Mississippi River had become "honor" territory before the closing dey of the loan. This achievement is considered all the more remarkable in view of the fact that this loan came at the time of the year when farmers borrow money rather than lend. The results of the Third Loan presage magnificent participation by farmers in the Fourth Loan if it should come during the harvest seeson.

New York will lead all States in the number of individual subscribers, with a total of nearly 4,000,000. Pennsylvania probably will be second, but the figures are not in. Illinois will probably rank third, with nearly a million and a quarter. Ohio is expected to be one of the banner States with a total of nearly one million individual subscribers, and Iowa will have a total of 520,000 subscribers out of a population slightly over 2,000,000. Indiana's individual subscribers will approximate 400,000; Michigan's, 375,000, and Wisconsin's, 280,000.

A report of the distribution by States in the populous New England District has not yet been compiled. Far Western States report numbers of subscribers as follows: California, 524,402; Washington, 150,312; Oregon, 65,895; Idaho, 36,500; Utah, 55,800; Arizona, 10,008; Nevada, 12,377. Managers of the campaign in the San Francisco District wired the Treasury that subscriptions there would exceed $250,000,000 and that every State district and virtually every county had reached its quota.

The Atlanta District, which had been at the bottom of the percentage table during most of the campaign, made the most sensational finish of any district in the United States. Every one of the 427 counties in the district oversubscribed. The town of Thompson, Ga., the centre of anti-draft activity early in the war, not only oversubscribed its quota, but on the closing day of the campaign organized a "President's Club" with a membership of 100 men who matched the President for an extra $50 bond.

In the Cleveland Federal Reserve District unofficial figures compiled at 7:30 Saturday night totaled $377,338,670. Every section of the district showed oversubscriptions.

The St. Louis District reported that all of the 362 counties exceeded their quotas. The grand total for the district at 3 P. M. Saturday was $176,617,600. At that time the district had raised 135 per cent. of its quota, and had sold bonds to 866,242 persons.

Minneapolis estimated that it would show a 20 per cent. distribution. The City of Minneapolis returned 92,597 subscribers, St. Paul 66,589, and Duluth 28,897, with respective money totals of $20,922,614, $14,371,900, and $6,828,650.

From Kansas City came the report that the Tenth District showed an official total of subscriptions on Saturday afternoon of $170,221,250, which amounted to 131 per cent. of the quota. Out of 380 counties in the district 324 were oversubscribed.

The following table shows a partial list of the cities that have oversubscribed their quotas in the Third Liberty Loan, with their percentage standings, including only a part of Saturday's returns:

Topeka	191	Tulsa	130
Hartford	189	Atlanta	125
Cincinnati	171	Chattanooga	125
Youngstown	167	Pueblo	125

Tacoma wired tonight that it had attained 141 per cent. on its population quota, and suggested that was a good mark at which to shoot.

Secretary McAdoo tonight issued this statement in connection with the closing at midnight last night of the loan campaign:

"The people of the United States may well felicitate themselves upon the triumphant success of the Third Liberty Loan. It is a most heartening manifestation of their patriotism and of their inflexible determination to support our gallant army and navy until a victorious decision for America is achieved.

"I should like to thank the thousands of men and women throughout the country, the Liberty Loan committees, bankers and business men, patriotic organizations, press associations, newspapers and magazines—in fact, every class of our citizenship, whits and colored alike—for their effective assistance and co-operation in this great victory behind the lines, without which a victory on the front cannot be achieved. The enormous number of individual subscribers, indicating a widespread distribution of the loan among the people, is particularly gratifying.

"This is the soundest form of national war finance—the distribution of the loan among the people themselves. The results show that every section of the nation has joined in sending a heartening message to our gallant sons across the sea that we are trying to do our part at home, even though we cannot do it as gloriously as they are doing theirs upon the front.

"I earnestly hope that every one who has bought Liberty bonds will try to keep them for the period of the war at least. The slogan now should be, 'Keep Your Liberty Bond.' No one does his share fully if he merely buys a bond and then sells it immediately below par on the market. Of course, if imperative necessity compels the sale of the Liberty bonds no just complaint can be made; if each and every purchaser keeps his Liberty bond he helps to protect the credit of the Government by maintaining the market for the bonds at par, which is a very helpful thing in wartime, and he also renders a more essential service to our soldiers and sailors in the field by practicing those economies and savings which release materials and labor necessary to the support, if not to the very life, of our army and navy. Every subscriber, therefore, who keeps his Liberty bond is rendering a double service to his country during the period of the war.

"The purchase of a Government bond to save the life of the nation and the liberties of the world is not a commercial transaction. The patriotism of the American people is not determined by the rate of interest on a Government bond or by its quoted value upon any stock exchange. In lending money to the Government, let the chief consideration always be a determination to save the life of the nation and the liberties of the world from the peril of the German military despotism no matter what sacrifice is involved in the way of self-denial and regardless of the monetary consideration."

LAUNCH STEEL SHIP, BEAT ALL RECORDS

slid easily and gracefully down the long slope, taking the water as lightly as a swan.

Admiral Bowles, who had been leaning over the platform railing, his eyes taking in every detail of the scene, turned around with tears in them.

"No matter how many ships I see launched," he said, "there is something in the sight that never fails to touch me, and this one, I think, most of all."

The Admiral was not alone in feeling it, however. For a minute there was a complete hush among the group on the launching platform, and Mr. Hurley's own eyes were wet as he put his arm around his daughter and drew her to the other side.

Mr. Neeland, who had stubbornly refused to make any sort of speech himself, then, with three tremendous cheers and a tiger, introduced the Chairman of the Shipping Board to the crowd.

"The United States Shipping Board is proud of you and of your achievement," said Mr. Hurley. "We are particularly pleased to know that this vessel will be ready for sea service in forty-two days after the laying of her keel. We have cabled the good news to General Pershing so that our boys in France will know how you are backing them up. I know it will hearten them in their battles, just as it will dishearten the Kaiser.

Sends Message to Pershing.

"The New York Shipbuilding Corporation, with its group of loyal American workmen, has today broken all records in the launching of a ship. You have demonstrated what can be accomplished by American workmen, and you have set a pace that will inspire the 350,000 workers now in shipbuilding plants and factories manufacturing accessories for ships. The other shipyards will try to beat your record, and this a spirit of sportsmanship will be injected into this work, which will be doing the world a great service—for all of which you are to be congratulated. This is the cablegram I sent to General Pershing:

Management and workmen of New York Shipbuilding Corporation have just established a world record in launching a steel ship of 5,500 deadweight tons in twenty-seven days. The army of 350,000 men in the American shipyards thus show that they are working shoulder to shoulder with their comrades in the trenches. The patriotic spirit shown by the workmen of this company exists in every shipyard in America. This feat is an indication of the fighting spirit among the 350,000 workmen in shipyards and plants supplying materials for shipbuilding. Every shipworker in the United States appreciates the necessity of building ships quickly if you and our boys are to win this war. Will you give this cheering news to the boys in the trenches, as these records mean reinforcements of men and supplies?

"Now, my friends, as we are all soldiers under one Commander in Chief, whom the world recognizes as one of the greatest leaders of thought and men of all times, I have the honor of delivering a message from the President of the United States to the workmen and executive staff of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation. He is keenly interested in your work and the conditions under which you are working, and if there is any doubt in the minds of any one as to his personal interest in your success, that doubt will be immediately eliminated when his letter to each and every one of you is read.

Congratulations from the President.

"I have had a facsimile copy of the President's letter made, and each man who has worked on the Tuckahoe will receive one of these copies as a souvenir. This is what the President has written you:

White House, Washington, 3 May, 1918.
To the Workmen and Executive Staff of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, Camden, N. J.:

My Dear Friends—I want to congratulate you on the extraordinary record you have made in your work on the steamship Tuckahoe. I wish I could be present in person to express to you the feeling that I have, that we are all comrades in a great enterprise, and that you have played your part with extraordinary devotion and skill, eliciting not only my admiration, but I am sure the admiration of all who will learn of what you have accomplished. I congratulate you and bid you Godspeed. Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Roar of Cheers for Schwab.

There was no need for any one to introduce Mr. Schwab as he stepped forward. When the spontaneous roar of welcome from the men had died away Mr. Schwab in his turn drew little Miss Hurley up beside him.

"I want my sponsor with me," he said. "This is a big job, and so I took for my chief support to the ladies. I know how well I am ruled and governed at home, and how well nearly every other good man I know is ruled and governed, and I believe, as a working man, that the surest way to insure the success of anything in this country is to secure the support of the ladies.

"Feeling myself, as I do, a new man at this shipbuilding game, I have little to say just yet. But I want to say there is one thought dominant in my mind as I see that beautiful ship glide into the water. That is that this day has seen the most decisive blow we have struck in this war in many months.

"I cannot but feel that such a shot, my boys, will resound through the world. And you fired it. We in Washington don't deserve the credit; all we could do was to help you find the opportunity. The managers and the workmen of this yard deserve the public credit, and I shall be the first to see that they get it.

"For myself, I can only say that I am in this thing with a heart so full of patriotism and enthusiasm that I feel if I can only convey a little piece of it, a small part of what I feel, to you boys here and elsewhere, in going around the yards, nothing under God's heaven can stop us. But one thing is necessary now to satisfy the President and the people of the United States; that is your enthusiasm and your loyalty.

"Go to It, Boys," Schwab Says.

"Boys, give it to them! Put your shoulders into it! Make such a stroke that all Germany will feel it! There never were better men anywhere than are in these shipyards of ours, and once aroused, nothing short of the fullest success will satisfy them. Go to it, boys! I will be with you once a week, anyhow, and in spirit every day, for Mr. Neeland here is one of my old boys up at Homestead. Keep up the good work, and—down with the Kaiser!"

As Mr. Schwab fairly shouted the final words the men burst into a cheer compared with which all their previous efforts were faint and pale. But Mr. Schwab only waved his hand to them and stepped back to give room to Charles L. Piez, Vice President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

"The thing I feel in face of a thing like this," said Mr. Piez, "is a deep sense of reverence, before a wonderful achievement. And I want you men to feel that you are real factors in the war, as much as though you were actually fighting the Germans. If all the shipyard workers come up to the mark you have made we'll build 3,600 ships this year, and that is more than the submarines have ever sunk. Between over here and over there your job is, if anything, more important, even if not so dangerous.

"Now, I have here the first of some silver medals which we want to present on behalf of the Emergency Fleet Corporation to every man who actually worked on the Tuckahoe. And I hope you soon have us up here to celebrate another new record. If we can repeat this accomplishment the war will be over in a very short time, sooner than any of us realize."

Before the crowd had dispersed the men were already at work clearing away the timber and swinging over the keel-plates of another big freighter, while around the corner, in the wet fitting-out basin, the Tuckahoe was already lying alongside the pier with a big revolving crane swinging parts of her permanent interior fittings on board.

Out for Another Record.

The guests of the occasion adjourned to the offices of the yard for luncheon, where Mr. Schwab called in Superintendent Mason and personally presented him a gold watch as a souvenir of his achievement. The superintendent stood silent a moment, and then blurted out:

"Mr. Schwab, the one thing the men here want to do is to serve, and there isn't anything you tell us to do that we won't do. We're only waiting for orders, and we'll break this record before anybody else can come near it."

Conversation with the higher officers of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation showed that they all believe that they can break the record made on the Tuckahoe before the Summer is over. Incidentally, they have hope of lowering the record for her delivery complete to ten days after launching, or thirty-seven days after laying the keel—eighteen days sooner than any other ship of her type or size was ever launched. Within fifty days after her keel-laying she may be on her way with her first cargo to France.

All the leaders of the shipbuilding army, from Mr. Hurley down, are jubilant over the Tuckahoe, not as an isolated record, but, as they believe, only a fair test of what the fabricated ship program can accomplish. The material for the Tuckahoe was fabricated in the yard, instead of in plants miles away, but as far as the actual flow of material to the ways is concerned this makes no difference in the case. Three shifts, working eight hours each, were at work on her, but three shifts can equally well be put on in every other shipway in the country, it was pointed out, if the men can be had—and they can be had, Mr. Hurley is certain.

Lesson Drawn by Bowles.

"The one great lesson of this achievement," said Admiral Bowles, who is the trained and expert naval constructor of the Shipping Board organization, and knows more about the actual technical working out of the fabricated-ship idea than any one else in the United States, "is the lesson that intelligent forethought and preparedness are all that is needed to accomplish results in the fabrication of ships that were undreamed of a little while ago.

"Nothing was done in building the Tuckahoe that cannot be done over and over again in any shipyard in the country. It is only a question of careful organization and planning, thoroughly good teamwork, and ample supplies of material. Just now the last requirement looms biggest for us. The one crying need of our shipyards is to get far enough ahead with our shipments of material, so that the men will have plenty ahead of them to work on, and it can be fed to them as fast as they will take it."

Mr. Neeland also pointed out, with reference to the possibility of building ships faster even than the Tuckahoe was built, that the men on her were actually handicapped. She was built on one side of a double way, on the other side of which, throughout the job, lay a huge 8,800-ton freighter, complete all but the eternpoet, which has had to lie idle for weeks because of the failure of the forging for that essential part to arrive from the steel mill. This ship undoubtedly hampered the work on the Tuckahoe considerably. For another thing, the Tuckahee was built with only one overhead crane, which swung every single bit of steel into position single-handed. Next time they will have two cranes working at once.

Finally Mr. Neeland said Superintendent Mason and his men themselves now knew far more about building ships rapidly than they ever did before. They had learned many lessons on the Tuckahoe, he said, which would serve them and the country well in the future, and also they themselves knew now what they could do when they tried.

At Hog Island Mr. Hurley, Mr. Schwab, Admiral Bowles, and Senator Fletcher were received by a guard of honor of the mounted police force of the yard, and then the entire yard force of policemen and firemen passed in review. A crowd of fully 3,000 of the 23,000 workmen employed at the yard, with many guests from Philadelphia, gathered in front of the reviewing stand, and Admiral Bowles opened the rally with a message from Camden.

"Our friends across the river," he said, "in launching today a vessel completed in twenty-seven days have done us here in this shipyard a great favor, as well as doing this country a great honor. They have shown what it is possible to accomplish in a yard designed for the assembling of ships, when there is plenty of steel ready, when everything is prepared, when there is a good organization, and when we have the men.

"I understand that the Shipping Board in commemoration of the event has struck a silver medal, to be given to every man who took part in the building of that ship. Now, the making of that medal of silver is a plain intimation that later there may be one of gold, and I want everybody to understand that we in this shipyard are out for the gold medal.

"I feel that we can do it, and I want you to understand that I have not only staked my whole reputation on it, but I have put my money on it, besides. It is no joke; all the dream that I hope to skim off in my later years depends upon the cow I have had promised me if we turn out fifty ships this year. Mr. Schwab today promised me that, if we can turn out those fifty ships, I can lead that cow, myself, in triumph through this yard from one end to the other."

Schwab Exhorts Ship Workers.

Then Mr. Schwab impulsively ran down from the rather lofty reviewing platform to the lower stand, where he could reach down and touch the upturned hands of the men crowded around him.

"I want to get down here closer to you," he said. "I feel that I am just in the same position as we are all in in this great age of democracy. I feel that I am one of you, and if I cannot be one of you, then we are not going to have the co-operation and success that I am hoping for. No man ever worked for me in my life, but many thousand men have worked with me, and that is what I want the men of Hog Island to do.

"God has endowed this nation with more natural resources, and its people with greater enthusiasm and energy, than any other nation on God's green earth, and we are going to make our mark in history. Now is the time. The United States has never been defeated in a war, and we are not going to be defeated now!

"And in years to come, I hope and believe, this Island will be known not as Hog Island but as Victory Island. We are all with you—we cut but little figure, and we can only help, we can encourage, and we can approve. You have the support of a whole country back of you. Go to it, and God bless you!"

Then Mr. Hurley made the shortest speech of the day, but it had the most feeling in it of any, and was one of the most enthusiastically cheered.

"I think you will all agree with me," he said, "that when President Wilson asked Mr. Schwab to take the Director Generalship of the Emergency Fleet Corporation he made no mistake. I want to say only one word more.

"President Lincoln at one time, referring to one of his Generals, said: 'If he can help to win this war I am willing to hold his horse.' If Charles M. Schwab can build these ships—and I know he can—and I can help him by it, I am willing to hold his horse."

Senator Fletcher, in his speech, said:

"I am gratified to pay testimony to what has been accomplished here. I think it is one of the marvelous achievements of our times. I believe it is going to be the greatest shipconstruction yard in the world. It is being built by the Government through its agents, the ships that are constructed here are Government ships, and I think that man has another guess coming to him who thinks that at any time in the future this great plant will be surrendered to any merely private concern.

"The work you are doing here is for the Government, and the Government is the organized expression of the will of the whole people. Every ship you build here is your ship, in which each of you, as a citizen of this country, has a definite interest.

"There will be no such yard in all the world as this yard is destined to be. The shipbuilding industry will soon be the greatest single industry in the United States. Shipbuilding, shipowning, and ship operating have come to stay in this country.

Tells of Need for Ships.

"There is no need of the nation like the need for ships. The generous breezes of the Atlantic are bringing to us, this very instant, the message from our gallant men across the water, the message to mother, wife, sister, and sweetheart, the message to you men in the shipyards, to us all. What is that message? 'We are here—grim peril end death are about us, but we are standing between you and the enemy, and we will stand to the end.' What is your reply to that message? 'We are building the ships for you that you may still stand firm.'"

After the ceremonies Mr. Hurley, Mr. Schwab, and the others went on a tour of inspection about the yard, climbing upon the ways where fourteen keels are already laid, and see many more could be laid tomorrow if the steel were only to be had.

President Holbrook of the American International Shipbuilding Corporation, in charge of the yard, pointed out that the steel shipments had been up to schedule, but the yard work had been far ahead of schedule, and could have been even further if the steel—not only the steel for the ships, but steel for the derrick towers and yard buildings—had been available.

The point that attracted Mr. Schwab's attention most of all about the ships which are under way was the perfection with which the steel fitted. This was the critical point of the whole fabricated ship idea—to make sure that pieces of steel made by people scattered all over the country, in mills hundreds of miles apart, could be made to fit accurately together into a ship.

"That's the way! That's the whole story!" cried Mr. Schwab on the floor of Ship No. 1, seeing a reporter stooping down and feeling with his finger in the rivet holes, and he himself knelt down and felt in one rivet-hole after another, finding that the two plates came together so perfectly, nine times out of ten, that the holes were absolutely smooth and continuous, and in the tenth the displacement was no greater than a reamer could correct in a few seconds.

"This thing is going to be a go," said Mr. Schwab.

SCHWAB GIVES RECIPE FOR BUILDING SHIPS

"Enthusiasm and Rivalry," He Says, Will Put the Eastern Yards to the Front.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 5.—Charles M. Schwab today revealed how he purposes to put through the greatest shipping program the world has ever known in two words: "Rivalry; Enthusiasm." He had just returned from a trip through the plant of the Sun Shipbuilding Company at Chester.

"I am getting all my information as to existing conditions in the shipyards at first hand," he said, as he came from a conference in Rear Admiral Bowles's office. "I am seeing this job with my own eyes and drawing my own conclusions.

"The preliminary work in the shipyards of the Philadelphia district has been very well done. The launching of the 6,000-ton Tuckahoe at the yard of the New York Shipbuilding Company, in Camden, within twenty-seven days from the time work was started showed what we can accomplish in the construction of steel ships along the Delaware. It is a forecast of bigger things to come."

"But can you keep up that gait? Won't your executives and your workers tire?" he was asked.

"Not when they get two essentials to sustained quantity production," he replied. "These essentials are enthusiasm and rivalry. Virtually the whole secret of my success in handling big things may be summed up in these two words.

"You can't get men to endure extraordinary labor unless you arouse enthusiasm. You can't get them to go a stiff pace unless the man who tries to arouse them to such effort is himself a setter of the pace. The stern necessities of the times are such that production must pour out ships, munitions, and other warlike implements at a rate never before known. To achieve in such measure every American concerned in production must have a vision of free America outstripping autocracy in war as well as in peace. It is part of my job to extend that vision.

"Rivalry in the various shipyards goes hand in hand with enthusiasm. We have prizes and the less tangible, but quite as potential, incentives of proclaimed championships for riveting gangs, pile driving squads and other groups. Graphic charts are made which show at a glance how each yard is producing. The effect of this is to produce team work first in the groups comprising the working force in each yard and finally in the yard itself. The Pacific Coast just now is making the best record, but I am looking forward to a spurt along the Delaware River that will carry this district to the front."

When Jim Went Crabbing

he came back with some beauties, and, of course, he thought they were going to be boiled in the old-fashioned way. But I surprised him. After boiling I took out all the fine white meat, made a cream sauce, put it in the little ramekins, grated Parmesan cheese on the top with a few dabs of butter, and ran them into a slow even for fifteen or twenty minutes. And then, just as they came to the table, nicely browned and piping hot, I added a few drops of A1 Sauce.

Jim says he is going to give up his business and take to crabbing instead. Next time we will have them even another way, but there will be a dash of A1 Sauce in the dish, whatever it is.

SINN FEIN SPEECHES UNDER INSPECTION

Department of Justice to Examine Words of Mrs. Skeffington and Mellows.

PROTEST MADE TO MAYOR

Dr. Eleanor Keller Tells Him How, When She Asked for Speakers' Arrest, She Was Removed.

Officials of the Department of Justice will today receive the stenographic records of several speeches which have been made in New York in the last forty-eight hours. The records were made by Government stenographers who attended the meetings at which the speeches were delivered. The remarks which, it is understood, will be the subject of careful inspection, in order to ascertain whether they were made in violation of the war laws of the United States, were made by Mrs. F. Sheehy Skeffington and "General" Liam Mellows, both British subjects, and by Isaac McBride, who was private secretary of the late Senator Lane of Oregon, and is now the representative in Washington of the so-called People's Council, which has agitated for a peace such as the Berlin Government would like to negotiate.

The remarks of Mellows and Mrs. Skeffington were made at the Sinn Fein mass-meeting in Madison Square Garden on Saturday night, while McBride spoke at a meeting of the Social Conference, held in the Central Opera House, Sixty-seventh Street, near Third Avenue, yesterday afternoon. That meeting was held under the auspices of the People's Council, and was addressed by a large number of persons identified with the organization, among them Dr. Scott Nearing, who is now awaiting trial in the criminal branch of the Federal Court for circulating unmailable and alleged seditious writings through the United States mails.

It was at the Sinn Fein mass meeting that Mrs. Skeffington, who has been conducting an anti-British campaign in all parts of the country, made an attack on England, which, for bitterness, has never, in the opinion of Government agents, been surpassed in this city since Congress declared war on Germany. It was at this same meeting that Dr. Eleanor Keller of 55 East Seventy-sixth Street and Mrs. John Oakman were escorted from the hall after they had objected to the remarks which Mrs. Skeffington directed against England. The incident of the ejection of these women occurred near the close of the meeting, about midnight. Dr. Keller addressed a letter to Mayor Hylan yesterday, protesting against the action of the police in ejecting her from the Garden. The letter, made public by Dr. Keller, says:

> Last night I was forcibly expelled from Madison Square Garden by the police for objecting to the treasonable utterances of the Irish League. My friend, Mrs. John Oakman, and I refused to second the resolutions they proposed sending to the President, and we called shame time and again, against treasonable sentiments expressed toward the British Empire, our Government, Mr. Burleson, and President Wilson. I demanded the speakers be arrested, and the meeting called off, but instead I and my friend were taken out to avoid a riot. At this time, when the country, nay the whole world, is looking to the metropolis to set an example of patriotism and unity, when our dear ones, here and abroad, are laying down their lives that we may be safe, how could such a meeting be allowed in our midst?
> As an American citizen, born on Manhattan Island, with a Boston mother, and an Irish father, I too feel deeply for Ireland, but the time for her to strike for freedom is not now. If she expects our help toward winning her freedom, let her now show loyalty to the Allies under whose flags her brave boys are fighting and dying, and not give occasion to the enemy to weaken our ranks.
> The British flag flies over our city along with the Stars and Stripes, and you are bound to see it respected. It may not have been within your power to have foreseen the nature of that meeting, and prevented it, but it is surely within your province to protect American citizens by instructing the police to answer correctly an appeal for protection, as I made it last night. I was glad to get out of such a treasonable meeting, but those that instigated it, not I, should have been expelled. Furthermore, to prevent such meetings occurring again here or elsewhere, you surely will, as Mayor of New York, raise your voice in protest against such disloyalty. The leaders and instigators of the movement should be branded as traitors, and treated as such, for we are in the war with the Allies, Italy, France, and Great Britain, a war in not license for a few, but liberty and justice for all. Let us do our part bravely behind the lines.

In the course of her speech in the Garden Mrs. Skeffington, in denouncing conscription in Ireland, said that "if it were a question of the life of one Irish conscript and the existence of the British Empire I would say let the British Empire be wiped out." In another part of her speech in a reference to Sinn Fein agitations in the United States she said that if the Government tries to stop these agitations "there will not be enough jails in America to hold us."

After the meeting ended the Sinn Feiners who had cheered the denunciation of some of the highest officials in the Government, the United States Secret Service, Lloyd George, and others, marched up Madison Avenue behind a band of Irish pipers. At Thirty-third Street a man in the marching column shouted "To hell with the British murderers," while at Forty-third Street an American Army officer who happened to be on the sidewalk was insulted by another of the marchers. The officer was with a woman at the time.

"General" Liam Mellows, who is under indictment in the Federal Court, it was said yesterday, will probably have a chance today to explain some of the remarks he made at the Garden. As for McBride, he, if anything, outdid both Mrs. Skeffington and Mellows yesterday afternoon. He said that conditions in the United States are approaching a point where "they will put Prussia and Russia in the shade." The people, he said, have been deprived of all their liberties.

"Down in Washington," he said, "they are trying to take away every semblance of your liberty, and they have now about completed the job. While they are democratizing Germany they are Prussianizing America."

At the meeting yesterday afternoon pamphlets were circulated calling upon those present to join the Liberty Defense Union, the purpose of which it was stated is "to organize popular support in behalf of persons prosecuted for the exercise of their constitutional rights of free speech and free press." The organization, judged from the membership of the committees, is a combination People's Council, Radical Socialist, and I. W. W. affair. Among those whose names appeared on the circular are those of Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, who is one of the I. W. W.'s best-known agitators; Dr. Nearing, ex-Senator John D. Works of California, Max Eastman, the indicted editor of The Masses; H. W. L. Dana of the Intercollegiate Anti-Conscription League, Dr. David Starr Jordan, L. P. Lochner, the peace ship man; Eugene V. Debs, and Amos Pinchot.

That certain enemy aliens now in the custody of the Federal authorities are to be tried in the criminal branches of the Federal Courts on charges which may involve long terms of years in the Federal Penitentiary was indicated last night when it became known that Mme. Marie K. Victorica, the alleged confederate of Lieut. Commander Karl Rodiger of the German navy, had been turned over to United States District Attorney Caffey. She is now held a prisoner in Waverley House, subject to the orders of the Federal prosecutor.

Another enemy alien, who, it was learned yesterday, may be turned over to the United States Attorney or the military authorities is Otto von Dinklage, a former officer in the German Army, who is being detained at Trenton as a dangerous enemy alien. He came to this country just after the United States entered the war.

Degree for General March.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 5.—Patriotism will be the keynote of the 122d Commencement at Union College, from June 6 to 10. Secretary of State Lansing will be the Honorary Chancellor. Major Gen. Payton C. March, Chief of Staff, will be a guest of the college and will receive an honorary degree.

MASONS TO MEET HERE.

900 Lodges in State of New York Hold 137th Communication This Week.

Representatives of nearly nine hundred Masonic lodges in the State of New York are gathering in this city to attend the 137th annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in the State of New York. The communication will be held as usual in the Grand Lodge room in the Masonic Hall, at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Thomas Penney of Buffalo, the Grand Master, will preside during the proceedings, and will be assisted by Robert Robertson, Acting Deputy Grand Master, who was appointed on the death of George J. Jackson a short time ago; William S. Farmer, Senior Grand Warden; Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, Junior Grand Warden; William H. Miller, Grand Treasurer, and Robert Judson Kenworthy, who has been acting as Grand Secretary since the death of Colonel E. M. L. Ehlers soon after the last annual meeting.

The following Past Grand Masters are expected to be present and take part in the proceedings: Colonel John W. Vrooman, William Sherer, Justice Townsend Scudder, Charles Smith, and Justice S. Nelson Sawyer.

The Grand Master in his address will give a review of the history of the craft in this State for the last year. The Secretary's report will be read by Robert Judson Kenworthy, and will show nearly 900 lodges in good standing in the State, with a membership of close to 215,000.

The communication will continue until Thursday afternoon.

MAKING CITIZENS OF ALIENS.

Samuel Rea Tells of Success of Penn. R. R.'s Campaign.

A statement which Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, recently made to Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, telling how the railroad goes about the work of "Americanizing" aliens in its employ, has been published by the company. In the statement Mr. Rea takes up the main principles of the work the company has done among about 33,000 aliens, chiefly Mexicans and Italians, by lectures, instructors, motion pictures, and pamphlets, to make them "real American citizens." According to the statement, America "must be made to seem to these people a good place, not merely to make money in but to live in," and the aliens "must be induced to give up the languages, customs, and methods of life which they have brought with them, and adopt instead the language, habits, and customs of this country and the general standard and ways of American living."

An investigation made by the company last June to ascertain the results of the work showed that out of the 27,721 aliens employed on the lines east of Pittsburgh 8,003 have been fully naturalized, 3,980 have taken out first papers, and 5,004 have definitely declared their intention of applying for citizenship papers. West of Pittsburgh, among the 7,500 aliens employed, 1,900 are naturalized, 1,700 have taken out their first papers, and 1,300 have definitely announced their intention to become citizens.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK HERE.

"Win the War" Meeting for Anniversary of Sinking of Lusitania.

The American Defense Society yesterday announced that plans for the "Win the War" meeting to be held in Carnegie Hall tomorrow night, on the anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania, under the auspices of the society, had been completed.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma will be the principal speakers, and Charles S. Fairchild, formerly Secretary of the Treasury, will preside. Colonel Roosevelt will take as his topic, "Do Your Fighting, and Do It Now." Senator Owen is to discuss the possibilities of a trade boycott with Germany.

Lawrence F. Abbott, Irving Bachelier, Robert Fulton Cutting, Walter Damrosch, Charles Stewart Davison, Charles Evans Hughes, Governor R. Livingston Beeckman of Rhode Island, Jacob H. Schiff, Dr. Thomas A. Storey, and Dr. Henry van Dyke are among the Honorary Vice Presidents of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the meeting.

TRADE BOARD SEES EFFICIENCY IN PERIL

Urges Defeat of Clause in Naval Bill Barring Premiums for High-Speed Work.

SAYS LOYALTY IS ON TRIAL

Proposal 'Approaches Treason Now,' It Asserts, 'and Will Give Aid and Comfort to the Enemy.'

The Executive Committee of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation in a unanimous report made public yesterday characterized as a direct blow at American soldiers in France and as an approach to treason the efforts of those seeking the adoption of an anti-efficiency clause in the pending Naval Appropriation bill.

The clause under consideration is aimed to prevent the use of efficiency systems which measure the output of individuals in factories engaged on naval work. Under this clause no incentive could be offered by builders of warships and other manufacturers for high-speed work by employes, such as has produced at the plant of the Submarine Boat Corporation, for instance, new world's records in riveting, and has resulted in some instances in the accomplishment of more than ten times the work by a single team which had been reported earlier in yards where flat rates prevailed.

The efficiency system has been opposed generally by labor unions because it has caused men who have been able to earn large pay by high-speed work to care little about labor organizations, whose tendency is to put all on a level, with the result that it has been difficult to organize employes in efficiency shops. The report in part is as follows:

> That no part of the appropriations made in this act shall be available for the salary or pay of any officer, manager, Superintendent, foreman, or other person having charge of the work of any employe of the United States Government while making or causing to be made with a stop-watch or other time-measuring device a time study of any job of any such employe between the starting and completion thereof, or of the movements of any such employe while engaged upon such work; nor shall any part of the appropriations made in this act be available to pay any premiums or bonuses or cash reward to any employe in addition to his regular wages, except for suggestions resulting in improvements or economy in the operation of any Government plant.
> In February, 1917, the House of Representatives, by a vote of 114 to 106, attached a similar provision to the Army Appropriation bill in defiance of the adverse report of the Committee on Military Affairs and the protest of the Secretary of War and the Chief of Ordnance.
> That was before the United States had entered the war. It was reprehensible then, but approaches treason now, and is treasonable to the extent that it will give aid and comfort to the enemy by hampering efficiency and diminishing the output of the material imperatively needed to supply our army and navy with the means with which to fight.
> It is quite as manifest that if all efficiency methods shall be forbidden by Congress, as proposed in the provision of the Naval Appropriation bill that we have quoted, and if the pace of our war work is to be gauged by the pace and capacity of the indolent worker, and no advantage can be taken of the possibilities of the capable and the efficient, it will constitute a direct blow at the soldiers quite as disastrous in its effect as a strike.
> Although the walking delegates are responsible for the introduction of the pending anti-efficiency provision of the Naval Appropriation bill, it, nevertheless, will not be enacted unless cowardly fear and selfish political considerations prevail with Senators and Representatives in Congress over patriotism and the performance of a clear duty to our fighting men at the front and to the nation.
> In this attitude toward the pending provision the loyalty of every Senator and member of Congress is on trial. The issue is clear. Its support will be from selfish motives and a disregard of the vital war situation.
> We therefore very earnestly appeal to Senators Wadsworth and Calder and to every Representative in Congress from this State to oppose by their influence and vote the passage of the the above quoted prosion of the Naval Appropriation bill and every other proposed measure which would operate to limit the efficiency of any employe of the Government and hamper the prosecution of the war.

GERMAN FOR WAR TANK?

"Sturmpanzerkraftwagen" Is the Official Name for Them.

PARIS, May 5.—The war correspondent at the front for the Temps writes:

"Some one asked me recently what the Germans called their 'tanks.' I was compelled to confess ignorance. A document found since, however, shows that the German for tank is 'Sturmpanzerkraftwagen.'"

A Compliment

¶ A man recently complimented his friend for having patronized his tailor—one well known for a very high standard of tailoring, but equally as well known for the high prices that go with his product.

¶ The compliment was well received, for when a man is so able in making his clothing selections that he has all the individuality of the man patronizing America's most expensive tailor, but pays only about half the price to get it—he should be complimented!

PAY A HIGH TRIBUTE TO OUR YEAR IN WAR

League for National Unity Issues a Statement to Reassure the Parents of Soldiers.

BIG MEN HEAD WAR WORK

Nation Bends Every Effort to Equipping Army, Producing Food, and Building Ships.

The achievements of the United Stetes in the first thirteen months of the war are reviewed in a statement by the League for National Unity, which finds much in what is accomplished to "hearten the relatives of the boys who are pouring over to France weekly by the theusand, and to assure them that despite delays and mistakes unavoidable in all vast enterprises, our Government is today bending every energy toward the successful production of all necessary equipment, that every possible need of the army and navy be anticipated."

The Executive Committee of the league, which has issued the statement, includes among its members persons who have been occasional critics of the war policies of the Administration, and of some features of the war program. Some of the signers of the review are James M. Beck, Cardinal Gibbons, Otto H. Kahn, John Hays Hammond, William R. Willcox, ex-Chairman of the Republican National Committee; Theodore N. Vail, Mrs. James Wadsworth, Jr., Samuel Gompers, William English Walling, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Dr. Robert E. Speer, and H. C. Hotaling. The statement says:

"All agree that recent changes have put at the head in the United States the ablest industrial leaders in the land—men like Schwab, Ryan, Stettinius, McRoberts, Tripp, and others of like ability and record in achieving success. Only the end counts in big jobs, and this is the biggest an American Government has ever faced. The force of several hundred thousand on the fighting front is but the beginning of what has been accomplished. Besides the fighting men, more than this number of Americans had in France prepared the way for the greater force yet to be sent—a force of 1,500,000 this year, with other years and other millions to follow until the German line is broken and this war decisively ended with the complete defeat of Germany."

The report describes the facilities that have been built in France to equip, transport, and feed our troops in the firing line, including docks, storage, railways, telephone, and telegraph systems, workshops, factories, and hospitals. The report continues:

Assistance to Our Allies.

"We are not only fighting, ourselves; we are making it possible for our allies to continue to fight effectively by our food, our munitions, our ships, and our new provision of railroad, telegraph and telephone roads, hospitals, and all the equipment needed not only that men may fight well, but keep well, healthy, and be cared for, come what may.

"In this great task, we can all aid. Labor has done its work loyally and with enthusiasm in this great conflict for liberty and self-government. Amid threats of strikes, lockouts and industrial revolution, tying up our railroads, our shipyards and our munition factories, there suddenly emerged the Magna Charta of our national industry in the form of a unanimous agreement by a joint body representing 90 per cent. of the employers and the union and non-union wage earners of the country. By the terms of this agreement, both sides patriotically covenant that during the war they will use every effort to prevent any break in their relations. The railway brotherhoods and the railroad corporations have also just perfected a like agreement covering that great arm of industrial service.

"The farm enters this battle-Spring with more acres under all food crops than ever before in our history. Of Winter wheat we have 2,000,000 acres more than last year. Our meat animals are more numerous and the handling of meats for consumption is organized as never before and with better provision for the pay and wellbeing of labor. Our great crops have answered the battle call with preparation greater than in any pest year. In this big task every woman and every child can aid. One great decisive battle of this war, the battle for adequate food, will be fought in the small gardens and kitchens in the land.

"Our shipyards have begun launching new vessels. This year we shall launch as much as probably several million deadweight tons. We have now more shipysrds than Great Britain, the greatest of shipbuilding nations. Our navy is building more submarine destroyers than there were in any two of the world's navies when the war broke out. Our regular navy has more men in it than the British Navy had in July, 1914, when it was the world's largest naval force. Next year, we shall fully make up the loss caused by submarines. The year after, it is planned that 10,000,000 more tons will be produced and the tonnage afloat will be greater than when the war began. The submarine, already checked, a year hence will be visibly seen to have failed. Only one troop ship has been lost in hundreds of voyages across the Atlantic."

SECURITY LEAGUE CRUSADE.

Will Work to Elect Congress to Support Administration.

The National Security League, through its 281 branches and a "win the war" membership of well over 100,000, will take an active part in the Congressional campaigns this Fall, an official of the league announced yesterday at national headquarters, 19 West Forty-fourth Street. The league's drive, purely nonpartisan, will be to insure the election of a Congress that will be pledged to peace with victory and a full support of the Administration.

In addition to working for candidates who measure up to the league's standard of patriotism, a widespread effort will be made to stamp out insidious pro-Germanism.

WORK OF ROOSEVELT UNIT.

3,200 Patients Treated in France by Hospital Force.

The Roosevelt Hospital Unit in France recently had under treatment 3,200 patients, according to the forty-sixth annual report of the hospital, made public yesterday. In this city the hospital, in all departments, treated last yeer a total of 30,225 patients. The report asserts that the Roosevelt Hospital Unit is "the best equipped and best manned hospital unit that America has yet sent out." The report says:

"To finance this project meant an expenditure of more money than could be withdrawn from the funds of the hospital, but through the medium of Dr. Russell, Clarence H. Mackay very generously offered to pay for the regular army standard equipment, and the Mackay Unit of the Roosevelt Hospital came into being. This contribution was followed by many others from friends of members of the unit, and the work of organizing and equipping progressed very rapidly.

"The professional staff was organized with Dr. Charles H. Peck, Major M. R. C., as Director; Dr. James I. Russell, Major M. R. C., as his chief of surgical division, and Dr. Rolfe Floyd, Major M. R. C., as his chief of medical division, with Mary L. Francis as chief nurse. These officers were backed up by twenty picked physicians from our visiting and house staff, who were commissioned with rank of Captain and Lieutenant; sixty-five nurses of our own training, including a specially efficient and complete operating room force, and an enlisted personnel of 150 high-class men picked from various professions and trades."

FREIE PRESSE QUITS PUBLICATION SATURDAY

Brooklyn German Paper Goes Out of Business for "Patriotic Reasons."

The Brooklyner Freie Presse, the only daily paper published in the German language in Brooklyn, will discontinue publication at the end of this week. This was the announcement made by the President of the company, E. H. Henrici, yesterday afternoon. According to Mr. Henrici, there will be no effort to resume publication of the Freie Presse after the war, and the plant will be sold, and the paper's affairs wound up as soon as possible.

A statement approved by the Board of Directors was given out yesterday by Mr. Henrici as follows:

"The Brooklyner Freie Presse, after more than half a century of existence, has decided to close its doors with the issue of Saturday, May 11, for purely patriotic reasons.

"The founder of the peper, the late Colonel Henry Edward Roehr, was among the first to volunteer from Brooklyn at the call of President Lincoln in the fight to free the black man. It is certain that were he alive today he would again be in the fight for the freedom and the peace of the world. His children, the owners of the paper, have given their sons to the cause. Four grandsons of Colonel Roehr and one nephew of the President of The Freie Presse are all in active service of the United States.

"The owners of The Brooklyner Freie Presse have done their patriotic best."

The announcement of the suspension of the Freie Presse comes exactly two weeks after the closing up of William Randolph Hearst's New Yorker Deutsches Journal, on April 20 last. Explaining its action, the Directors of the journal said:

"The time has new come when this newspaper believes that it should make its supreme sacrifice in behalf of American unity."

Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field, President of the American Patriotic Legion, and Chairman of the American Defense Society's Committee for the Suppression of German Propaganda, said yesterday that she expected to win her fight against German papers in a very short time.

"I am more than pleased with the progress we are making," said Mrs. Field. "Women's clubs and officials from one end of the country to the other are lining up with us. I am certain no German publication in the United States can long withstand the growing demands for their complete Americanization or suppression."

The Trenton (N. J.) branch of the German-American Alliance was disbanded yesterday. Of the $247 which was in the Treasury $200 was invested in Liberty Bonds and $47 given to the Red Cross.

Tarrytown Bars German Papers.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, May 5.—To make Tarrytown 100 per cent. American, German newspapers have been banned by the women of the village at a meeting of the Civic League. A committee consisting of Mrs. Roscoe Conkling Hatch, Mrs. Harold Avery, and Mrs. Kingsland Spencer was appointed to interview the newsdealers, and asked them to discontinue handling the newspapers. The committee reported today that all the dealers had agreed. A drive is now to be made to discontinue the teaching of German in the schools.

FOURTEEN HELD ON SHIP.

Inspectors Break Canes and Seize Records of Man of German Birth.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 5.—Army and Navy Intelligence officers took charge of a British ship that arrived today from Brazil, and each one of the 295 passengers was questioned, his baggage carefully searched, and every bit of writing seized. Fourteen persons were held on board for further interrogation, and it is probable that some of these may be taken to a Government station tomorrow.

There were on board four men of German birth but claiming Brazilian citizenship. One of these is said to have had a ticket from Rio Janeiro to an American port, but when the vessel touched at Barbados he sought to leave the ship. This attracted attention to him and he is said to have been practically under surveillance during the rest of the voyage. Upon the arrival of the vessel here he was questioned at great length and afterward held on board. The officials in their search for concealed documents are said to have broken two walking sticks be carried and also confiscated some phonograph records found in his baggage.

Officers of the steamship say that shipping men in Brazil are mystified over the lack of any trace of wreckage from the missing United States collier Cyclops. Lieut. Commander W. H. Booth, U. S. N., said it did not seem possible that, in the event of an explosion, the Cyclops could sink so fast that she could not send out wireless calls for help.

During the voyage $30,000 wes raised at a Liberty Loan rally on board. The 295 passengers also raised $3,000 for the American and British Red Cross. The Liberty Loan subscriptions were forwarded by wireless to a New York banking house. Among the passengers were Mrs. William H. Robertson, wife of the American Consul at Buenos Aires, and Frederick Morton, an American engineer, who is said to have resigned a $12,000 a year position in South America to enlist in the United States Army.

SEIZE LIVE STOCK FOR LOAN

South Dakota Committeemen Force Mennonites to Contribute.

YANKTON, S. D., May 5.—When an unconfirmed rumor was received that members of a Mennonite colony at Jamesville, near here, had refused to buy Liberty bonds, officers in charge of the Ioaa campaign visited the colony and drove away 100 head of steers and 1,000 sheep.

In a statement issued subsequently it was said the animals would be sold and the money invested in Liberty bonds and applied to the Jamesville quota. The Mennonites offered no opposition to the bond "salesmen."

City Prisoners to Raise Vegetables.

The first of a series of fortnightly meetings to interest the inmates of the city institutions on Riker's Island in gardening as their contribution to the war was held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Tinker, Superintendent of the City Mission Society. Commissioner of Corrections James T. Hamilton presided, and delivered a patriotic address. The prisoners, who are largely drug addicts, now have sixty-five acres planted in vegetables, and it is planned to have 100 acres under cultivation by July 1. Warden Honock, explaining the garden scheme, said that he hoped eventually to have the area under cultivation produce enough vegetables to supply the needs of the institutions.

Brazilian Airmen Train Near London

LONDON, May 5.—London newspapers have published photographs of a group of Brazilian airmen who are completing their training for the front at an airdrome near London. It is believed that theirs is the first military party from the South American Allies to arrive in Great Britain.

PLAN TO ADJOURN CONGRESS IN JULY

Passage of War and Supply Bills to be Expedited in the House.

NO OBSTRUCTION IN SIGHT

Republicans Say Last-Ditch Fight on Measures They Oppose Would Be Useless.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—House leaders are making preparations to adjourn by the middle of July. War legislation which has been considered for months in the Senate, where it met strenuous but unsuccessful opposition, will be rushed through the final stages in the House within the next six weeks, so as to have the calendars cleared for mid-Summer adjournment.

Democratic leaders have determined that there is no necessity to delay action on three important war measures that have been thoroughly discussed in the Senate. These are the Overman Co-ordination bill, the Sedition bill, and the bill empowering the President to commandeer private property for shipbuilding and munition workers. Republican members, as anxious to leave Washington as Democrats, to enter the Fall campaigns for re-election, are in agreement with the program and will raise no barrier to early adjournment.

In consequence of this policy, Representative Claude Kitchin, Democratic leader, has urged prompt action by the Judiciary Committee on the Overman, Sedition, and Commandeering bills. While an effort will be made in the Judiciary Committee by Representative Volstead of Minnesota to have the Overman bill amended to permit the President to add to the powers of the Federal Reserve Board and the Interstate Commerce Commission, no attempt will be made to consume time in long consideration either in committee or the House. Republican members, having seen the useless fight waged by their colleagues in the Senate to eliminate so-called objectionable features in the Overman and Sedition bills, are in full accord with the desires of the majority to get away early.

Legislation Well Advanced.

In recent years legislation has not been so far advanced as at present, especially as regards the annual supply measures. Only four important appropriation bills remain unacted upon by the House. These are the Military, Fortifications, Sundry Civil, and General Deficiency bills. It is necessary to have these enacted by July 1, when the new fiscal year begins, as all of them carry appropriations which cannot be carried into effect by re-enacting the bill for the previous year, pending final disposition of the measure carrying appropriations for the next fiscal year.

As Congress is confronted with the legal necessity of getting through the supply bills by the last day of June, there now seems to be no apparent reason why this session should not come to an end by the middle of July. Developments abroad and other emergencies may arise in the meantime which would induce Congress to remain in continuous session.

While the supply bills are being drafted by committees, it is planned by the majority leaders to bring before the House the three bills which have just passed the Senate. The Judiciary Committee will take up the Overman bill this week and report it at once. The other two measures will also be reported promptly.

While opposition to the Overman bill is just as pronounced among Republicans of the House as it was in the Senate, the fight against it will not be so long nor as determined. The minority realizes that the Administration has the power to force through the legislation, and that no good purpose can be served by delay. It is argued that if the Administration complains that one difficulty in the Government is the lack of authority to co-ordinate work in executive departments, the sooner this great authority is given to the President the better. While the Republicans of the House argue that the enactment of the Overman bill would mean a virtual abdication by Congress of its rights, and also that it would turn over to the Executive Department certain rights and prerogatives that would give the President more authority than any other ruler in the world, yet they say that nothing can be done to amend the bill after its recent passage by the Senate by a decisive majority.

Deny Republican Contention.

Democrats contend that the bill grants no such powers, but merely confers on the President, for the duration of the war, authority to make more efficient the various governmental agencies. The bill provides that "the President is hereby authorized to make such redistribution of functions in executive agencies as he may deem necessary, including any functions, duties, and powers hitherto by law conferred upon any executive department, commission, bureau, agency, office, or officer, in such manner as in his judgment shall seem best fitted to carry out the purposes of this act."

It is further provided that in carrying out the purposes of this act the President is authorized to utilize, coordinate, or consolidate any executive or administrative commissions, bureaus, agencies, offices or officers now existing by law, to transfer any duties or powers from one existing department, commission, bureau, agency, office or officer to another, to transfer the personnel thereof or any part of it, either by detail or assignment, together with the whole or any part of the records and public property belonging thereto."

In the opinion of House leaders the Overman bill will be passed by the House without substantial change.

BINGHAM ESTATE GROWS.

Now Valued at $130,000,000 to $150,000,000—Necklace Worth $900,000.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 5.—Evidence tending to show that the estate of Mrs. Mary Lily Flagler Bingham, widow of Henry M. Flagler of New York and second wife of Judge Robert W. Bingham of Louisville, may reach $130,000,000 and possibly $150,000,000, was introduced here yesterday at a hearing before G. W. Hardin, State Inheritance Tax Appraiser. Prior valuations placed the estate at from $65,000,000 to $85,000,000. John Stiles, President of a Louisville trust company, one of the administrators of the estate, a witness at the hearing, made the disclosures, but because he had received information upon which they were based in a "quasi-confidential way," refused to divulge its source.

Mr. Stiles also said he had learned that Mrs. Bingham owned a necklace, presumably of pearls, valued at $900,000, which, it was indicated, had not been listed among the assets of the estate.

COFFEE

While you are reading this, 125 pounds of coffee are being purchased by the million householders who read THE DELINEATOR. They use 45 million pounds a year—a billion and a half cups.

SHOES

This very hour THE DELINEATOR families are spending $5,000 for shoes. They spend $15,000,000 yearly for footwear.

SOAP

How long does a cake of soap last in your family? Can you figure how much soap is used in a year to wash the nine million hands belonging to DELINEATOR families?

FOOD

Even at the average rate, THE DELINEATOR families consume in a year $304,347,826 worth of food.

BABIES

308 babies are arriving every day in the million families that read THE DELINEATOR. In a year their 112,500 mothers buy a vast amount of baby carriages, rattles, clothing and cribs.

The Delineator families buy enough millions of pounds, yards, pairs, dozens to take the entire output of hundreds of factories.

The consuming power or the one million families that read THE DELINEATOR is so enormous that the yearly figures should stimulate the imagination of any manufacturer of a product used in substantial households.

All THE DELINEATOR readers belong to the top third of the American population—these seven million families whose incomes exceed $900 a year. They are progressive, prosperous, and have the habit of buying branded, advertised articles.

Nearly all the vast amount of supplies bought by these million DELINEATOR homes—food, clothing, decorations and the thousand and one things that constitute an American family's repeated purchases—are bought by the women. Woman is the "purchasing agent" for the American home.

One million "purchasing agents" rely on THE DELINEATOR each month for suggestions as to what is best to buy.

Do you make anything used by American families?

The Magazine in One Million Homes

Butterick—Publisher

SUGAR

Every minute that the stores are open THE DELINEATOR'S million families buy 750 pounds of sugar. That is 225 tons a day and 135 million pounds a year.

HOT WATER BOTTLES

Every third family of the million who read THE DELINEATOR buys a hot water bottle each year. 3,000,000 cold feet for manufacturers of hot water bottles to cater to.

COCOA

Americans, the lightest cocoa drinkers of any civilized people, take only one cup apiece every fortnight. Only 15% of us ever drink it. More advertising would increase the consumption.

ELECTRIC IRONS

Women subscribers to THE DELINEATOR have bought 642-857 electric irons, and as many more other electrical household appliances.

TALCUM POWDER

DELINEATOR families buy far more than the average, so to say that they bought last year four and a half million cans of talcum powder is to be conservative.

? WHAT DO YOU MAKE !

FOUNTAIN PENS

Placed end to end, the half million fountain pens bought yearly by THE DELINEATOR families would reach from New York to Bridgeport, Conn.

AUTOMOBILES

Women had a voice in determining the choice of probably 200,000 of the cars bought last year by DELINEATOR families. One manufacturer says women influence the sale of nine out of ten automobiles.

TOOTH BRUSHES

It takes the bristles from 118,055 hogs to supply the eight and a half million tooth brushes bought yearly by THE DELINEATOR families.

TALKING MACHINES

THE DELINEATOR readers spend probably twice the average amount for Talking Machines and Records, but figured at the average, they spend six and a half million dollars a year.

DRY GOODS

At the average rate, THE DELINEATOR families spent $130,434,782 for dry goods in 1917. They really spent much more than this.

NATION TO OBSERVE THRIFT STAMP DAY

Merchants Throughout the Land Enlist in the Campaign to Push Sales.

DEPARTMENT STORES AID

Thermometers Will Register Progress—Intensive Campaign to Continue Throughout the Summer.

This is National "Thrift Stamp Day," by decree of the National War Savings Committee. It will be celebrated by special drives throughout the country for the promotion of thrift stamp sales. Among the retail merchants of the land the activity will be especially great, as upon their shoulders has been placed the task of making this the biggest war stamp day in the history of the campaign. To aid in the sale of stamps the merchants have adopted for the day the slogan "Take Your Change in Thrift Stamps," and this slogan will be followed out in practice, with the result that many hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of thrift stamps probably will be sold over the counters.

For weeks merchants have been preparing for this day in co-operation with the various War Savings Committees throughout the country. Originally set for May 1, Thrift Stamp Day was postponed until today in order that it might not conflict with the Liberty Loan campaign. Tons of literature on the subject have been distributed to the retailers, business associations, Chambers of Commerce, and trade committees working with the war-saving bodies. To every one of the 31,000 agents in this city has gone a special war-savings display to be placed on windows. These posters were distributed last week by policemen under Inspector Underhill.

In addition to the posters, every agent has received a thermometer registering to $1,000 which is hung alongside the counter where stamps are on sale. The lettering on the thermometer reads:

Help us make it hot for the Kaiser. Buy your stamps now, and see the thermometer go up. An idle quarter is a slacker quarter. Invest in thrift stamps now, and save some lad's life in No Man's Land.

When the sales in any agency have exceeded $1,000, another thermometer will be placed alongside of the one whose mercury has gone over the top.

The department stores of the city will conduct a special campaign of their own throughout the week, opening today with the establishment of 350 thrift banks at accessible points in the twenty-three leading stores. Each bank will have an honor guard of sailors from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The sailors, with the girl workers, will conduct the sale of stamps.

The department store drive will be conducted under the direction of the Department Store and Retail Dry Goods Committee of the New York War Savings Committees. Of this committee, Jesse I. Straus, President of R. H. Macy & Co., is Chairman, and S. W. Reyburn of Lord & Taylor is Directing Manager, while the other members are T. A. Ball of Best & Co., S. J. Bloomingdale of Bloomingdale Brothers, E. C. Blum of Abraham & Straus, Clarkson Cowl of James A. Hearn & Son, Isaac D. Levy of Oppenheim, Collins & Co., H. A. Saks of Saks & Co., Louis Stewart of McCreery & Co., and L. M. Blumstein of L. M. Blumstein & Co.

Every department store this week, in its advertising, will feature War Savings and will offer prizes to its employes for suggestions as to the best methods of selling War Savings Stamps.

The committee has offered $1,000 in prizes for the best-dressed windows, and the judging of the best dressed windows will take place on Wednesday.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has offered the use of the 600 theatres in the city for the purpose of arousing interest in the war savings campaign this week. Four-minute men will speak in each of the houses at every performance, and stamps will be sold by Boy Scouts and men in the service. Similar demonstrations will be made in all of the legitimate theatres of the city.

Although no organized attempts were made to push the Thrift Stamp campaign during the Liberty Loan drive, the sales for the month of April in New York City exceeded those for March by nearly $160,000. The War Savings Committee has marshaled its forces for the renewal of an intensive campaign to last throughout the Spring and Summer. New York's quota for the year is $100,000,000. Up to May 1 the sales in this city were $11,156,380.

PICKETS IN WAR WORK.

How Mrs. Hilles's Associates Also Are Helping Their Country.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles of Delaware, who now has been working a week in the munition plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company at New Castle, R. I., was one of the first women sentenced to Occoquan Workhouse for holding suffrage banners at the White House gate and was in the group pardoned by the President. Other White House pickets now in war work are:

Miss Julia Hurlburt of Montclair, N. J., is in France with the Y. M. C. A.

Miss Lucy Fotheringham of Buffalo is a Red Cross dietician and is now taking three months' training in Bellevue Hospital, preparatory to going abroad.

Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia, who hunger-struck for political rights, is presiding over the Hostess House of Camp Merritt.

Miss Mary Ingham of Philadelphia has been devoting the greater part of her time to the Philadelphia Woman's Committee of the Liberty Loan campaign.

Dr. Florence Manion of Oregon, Chairman of the National Woman's Party, is on her way abroad as a doctor.

Mrs. Otero Warren, Chairman of New Mexico, is leading the war work of the women of that State.

Mrs. Graham Bankston of Louisiana, State Chairman, is active in all types of work for the war.

Miss Fannie Wolfson of New Orleans, now in Washington to urge the immediate passage of the suffrage amendment, is under appointment by the Governor of her State as a special Commissioner.

Mrs. S. B. M. Young, wife of General Young, and Mrs. Richard Wainwright, wife of Rear Admiral Wainwright, are both working alike for war and for suffrage.

Mrs. Helena Hill Weed of Connecticut, whose son is now at Annapolis, takes particular interest in doing things for men of the navy. On every sock she knits for them she puts a purple, white and gold border, to remind them of the demand for suffrage of the women of their country.

WANT GERARD TO TRY FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Democratic Leader from Up-State Urges His Availability Upon Murphy.

WOULD BE A WAR CANDIDATE

The availability of James W. Gerard, former United States Ambassador to Germany, as the Democratic nominee for Governor next Fall has been for many days the topic of quiet talks among Democratic leaders both in this city and up-State. The name of Gerard did not come in for even incidental mention at the recent conference in Syracuse, when Democrats from up-State districts foregathered to discuss candidates and lay plans for the Fall campaign. This silence with regard to Mr. Gerard at a time when "Summer" booms were in order is regarded by Democratic politicians as not entirely void of significance and as due to well laid design rather than because of absence of thoughts of Mr. Gerard in the minds of some of the Democratic leaders who took part in the conference.

It was learned yesterday on unquestionable authority that Mr. Gerard was suggested as the logical candidate by one of the Democratic leaders who took the initiative in getting the Democrats together at Syracuse. This up-State leader has conferred with Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy and urged upon him the strength of Mr. Gerard as a candidate at this particular time. Mr. Murphy was noncommittal, but in dismissing his visitor took occasion to remind him that candidacies seriously proposed were not yet in season. This was prior to the Syracuse conference and prior to Mr. Murphy's recent visit to French Lick Springs.

Of late prominent Tammany politicians have been quietly feeling out sentiment for Mr. Gerard in this city. Many Tammany men believe that Mr. Gerard would be the logical candidate for more than one reason. In the first place, with Governor Whitman preparing to make a campaign on his record as New York's "War Governor," the Democratic leaders believe that with former Ambassador Gerard for the Democratic nominee they would have a candidate in a position to more than match the Republican standard bearer in war achievements. Mr. Gerard's activities in Berlin during the days of storm and stress preceding America's entry into the war have become minutely known in wide circles through his books and through film productions dealing with these events, in which Mr. Gerard, of course, is the central figure.

A further consideration which is carrying considerable weight with the Democratic leaders are the friendly relations that have existed for years between Mr. Gerard and William Randolph Hearst. The Democratic leaders believe that with Gerard they would disarm the opposition from Hearst, which, they fear, would otherwise inevitably follow his own rejection by the Democrats. If his heart is so firmly set on obtaining that honor for himself as some leaders profess to believe. It was said yesterday that Edwin S. Harris, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, would probably announce next week the date for a Statewide conference of Democrats, at which suggestions regarding candidates would be received from the Committee of Forty-two appointed at the Syracuse conference to feel out sentiment in up-State counties.

In connection with this it was learned last night that both the Democrats and Republicans may abandon the plan to hold an unofficial State convention this year. The Democrats had made tentative plans for such a convention in Saratoga early in August. Some of the Democratic leaders, however, believe that owing to the advanced date for the primaries this year, any general Democratic gathering that is to be held should be held earlier than August.

The question of masking provision for the representation of the newly enfranchised women on an equitable basis in an unofficial convention has also come up, and some of the leaders have reached the conclusion that to provide the machinery for the selection of both men and women delegates would be costly and result in a convention too cumbersome through numbers. For that reason some leaders hold that the easier course of calling a general conference of Democrats, at which as much could be accomplished as at a convention equipped with no binding power, was much to be preferred. It has been suggested, too, that the conference be held in Syracuse, rather than in Saratoga.

George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, said last night that he had found no general demand among members of the committee for a convention this year.

"My mind is still open with regard to this matter," said Mr. Glynn, "but unless I hear more than I have heard so far in favor of an unofficial convention, I shall take no initiative to bring one about. The sole function of these unofficial conventions has been to adopt a so-called party platform. I think most Republicans will agree with me when I say that Governor Whitman's record is all the platform we want in the coming campaign—this and the platform enunciated by Chairman Hays of the Republican National Committee: 'Win the war now; peace by victory only, and prepare now for the problems of reconstruction which will confront the country after the war.'"

FOR PUBLIC HEALTH NURSES

American Red Cross Allots $25,000 to Speed Up Training.

The American Red Cross has allotted $25,000 to the Henry Street Settlement, according to announcement made there yesterday, in an effort to speed up the training of public health nurses needed here, and for reconstruction work in France. The course will be eligible to three-year undergraduate nurses, and the term will be from June 1 to Sept. 30.

The need for more nurses arose from the overcrowded conditions resulting in cities where the manufacture of munitions and other war industries has enormously taxed the facilities for housing and cleanliness. In England the public health nurse is regarded as a vital cog in the war machinery, and the military authorities are now refusing to accept for military service any nurse engaged in safeguarding the health of munitions workers.

AN AMERICAN PAPER FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

Captains of American Industry!

You Can Lead the Sales Force of your Companies "Over The Top" for Uncle Sam in the W.S.S. Campaign!

"Working With Uncle Sam"

THIS IS a serious appeal to the live, patriotic Presidents, Heads and Managers of business concerns in this community—men who have large vision, expert knowledge and prompt action in the field of selling.

Uncle Sam has a great patriotic product to put on the market—a product that every man, woman and child in the land must want—must buy and continue to buy—a product that will inspire thrift, create the habit of saving small coins and eventually raise a vast sum of money for war purposes.

This product is War Savings Stamps and Thrift Stamps.

But with all the patriotism in the world in the hearts of Americans, with all their expressed willingness to help, these War Savings Stamps will not sell themselves in the quantities desired.

They must be sold.

Trained salesmen are needed. Men who know how to make people want a thing, who can get attention, create the desire, make the sales. Selling is the throbbing pulse of great business. It must be set beating for Uncle Sam.

A single example of this magic force, intelligently applied and rightly carried out, tells the story:—

Mr. Bevan Lawson of the National War Savings Committee called up Mr. Percival S. Hill, President of the American Tobacco Company, recently and asked him to loan two or three of his best salesmen to help in the campaign to sell War Savings Stamps. Mr. Hill instantly saw an opportunity to give the idea a real lift.

"Certainly," he said, "if you will accept it I will give your committee six hundred of our salesmen for a whole week, and instruct them to work entirely on selling Savings Stamps. We will bear all expense." The offer was gladly accepted. Mr. Hill named the week of January 21st to 28th. "We are all going to work for the United States this week, wholly and only" he wrote his men and outlined their selling plan. Briefly it read:—

> "You are to handle all transactions in connection with the purchase and sale of these stamps exactly the same as when you buy our products from jobbers for the purpose of selling them to retailers—the only difference being that in this case your jobber is the Post Office or Bank. All you have to do to start is to go to your Post Office or Bank and buy from Ten to Fifteen Dollars worth of Twenty-five Cent Thrift Stamps. Be sure to get one Thrift Card for each Twenty-five Cent Stamp purchased. Paste one Thrift Stamp on each Thrift Card, and on Monday morning, January 21st, start out and see how many of these Thrift Cards with a Twenty-five Cent Thrift Stamp attached, you can sell for a 25c piece. Be sure to explain the purpose of the card and how the Thrift Stamps are to be exchanged for War Savings Stamps. When your first lot of Cards and Stamps are sold, take the money from the sales and buy a second lot. Continue to turn over your money in this way through the entire week."

Explicit and detailed information on the value of the Stamps, and on the Country's need for the funds to be derived from them was given each salesman. They were instructed to make daily reports on sales, and in every way to carry through the work of selling the War Savings Stamps exactly as they would were they selling their own product.

These instructions wound up with a ringing word of enthusiasm for the work in hand, and an expression of confident belief in the ability of his trained men to put this sale of Stamps over Big. "Remember," Mr. Hill said, "you are working only for Uncle Sam this week."

And on Monday, January 21st, the men went at it. Never were six hundred salesmen more enthusiastic to do a full day's work. Many of the men used the demonstration method of selling. Taking positions in railroad stations and other public places, some of them set up a small collapsible table on the back of which was a big card with the words "WORKING FOR UNCLE SAM. BUY YOUR WAR SAVINGS STAMPS HERE." Before him was a stack of Thrift Cards, Savings Stamp Certificates, and sheets of Twenty-five Cent and Five Dollar Stamps. Crowds gathered quickly and then using the same talk used in selling his own product, he proceeded:

> "Pardon me, sir, but I have something here that I know will interest you.
> "Myself and six hundred other salesmen of the American Tobacco Company are giving all of our time this week to selling War Savings Stamps and Thrift Stamps for the United States Government. And I am sure I am going to sell you.
> "Because I know that no good American Citizen, who has twenty-five cents about him, can listen to this proposition from the United States Government without accepting it.
> "Our Government needs two billion dollars for war purposes, and here is their proposition:—
> "Buy one of these Thrift Stamps which I have attached to this Thrift Card for Twenty-five Cents. A Thrift Card itself costs you nothing. Then continue from time to time as the opportunity is offered to buy one or more of these Twenty-five Cent Thrift Stamps from your Post Office or Bank until you have have bought sixteen stamps.
> "Sixteen Stamps will cover up all of the blocks on this card.
> "Then turn in your Thrift Card with the Stamps attached to your Post Office or Bank and they, in exchange for same and the additional payment by you of from twelve cents to twenty-three cents, according to the month in which you make the exchange, will give you one of these War Savings Certificates, with one of these War Savings Stamps attached. For this War Savings Stamp, which has cost you from $4.12 to $4.23, according to the date purchased, the United States Government agrees to pay you on January 1st, 1923, $5.00. The same condition will apply thereafter on every other War Savings Stamp that you may buy during 1918 and paste on your War Savings Certificate.
> "The plan is a simple one. The investment, which has the United States Government behind it, pays you about 4% interest compounded quarterly. The Certificate is actually a small bond of the United States Government.
> "Come on, be one of the first to go 'Over the Top' with this proposition, and help feed and clothe the boys who are fighting for us at the front. Twenty-five cents is all that it costs you. Buy one for yourself and one for each of the children at home. THANK YOU."

Not satisfied with retailing the Stamps themselves, a large number of the salesmen "carried on" still further. They sold the stamps in large quantities to the jobbers of their own goods, and got them in turn through their salesmen to resell the Stamps to their customers. It was not uncommon for the salesmen to sell from One to Two Thousand Dollars worth of the Stamps in this way, thus establishing a chain of distribution.

And what were the results?

Just follow these figures of actual returns:—

Number of Thrift Cards placed, 226,997, each card containing one 25c Stamp, value....$56,749.25

Number of War Savings Stamps sold attached to certificate, 13,799, value..... 56,851.88

Number of separate Thrift Stamps sold at 25c each, 279,968, value..... 69,992.00

Number of separate $5.00 War Stamps sold, 37,064, at $4.12, value.....152,703.68

Total amount of actual cash received for the Government on the sale of Stamps.....336,296.81

—this for six working days.

And these figures represent only the start of the idea—the beginning of the habit among those to whom cards were sold to save and to loan to Uncle Sam.

The salesmen are confident that practically every purchaser whom they induced to start a Thrift Card will fill that card up with Stamps. They put over a personal touch that enthused the buyer and made him eager to do his full share of the saving.

If this is so, if only the first Thrift Cards started are filled the amount loaned to the Government will be $907,988.00. If the first War Savings Certificates started are filled it will add $1,145,317.00, or a total of $2,530,305.00 from this first step.

And it is reasonable to suppose that the habit of saving Thrift Stamps once started will continue.

If the 25-cent Thrift Cards started by these salesmen develop into $5.00 War Certificate Cards, and each card is filled up, the money loaned to the Government (figuring each Stamp on the Certificate at an average of $4.15) will amount to $18,840,751.00.

Add to this the value of the completed first War-Savings Certificates sold and the Government will receive, as a loan from the people, the result of a single week's work of experienced salesmen—$19,986,068.00.

This is indeed working for Uncle Sam.

The encouraging part of it is that it can be so easily repeated.

Every man who controls a selling organization can do likewise.

Whether you have two salesmen or two hundred, set them a week or even a day or two to work for Uncle Sam as Mr. Hill did. Let them go out and sell War Savings Stamps as they would sell your own product and the two billion dollars expected, needed, from this War Savings Stamp idea, will be assured.

Just one word more from Mr. Hill as to the benefit derived by his men from their interesting experiment:—"Every salesman, every supervisor of a territory, who participated in this work is a better man, a more able salesman. He has more enthusiasm than ever before. He feels that he has done a good work."

Don't Neglect This Opportunity!

Decide today to lead the sales force of your company "over the top" for Uncle Sam in this Campaign of selling War Savings Stamps

"Old men can stay young by wearing frisky clothing."
—Personality.

Why not? Ever notice how well a brilliant red tie goes with a suit of roughish gray tweed on a distinguished old gentleman?

Just the dash of color that stays the dash of youth.

The tweeds, the red tie, the gray Alpine, the patent leathers, gray spats and gray gloves—all here along with everything else men and boys wear.

Quality that stays young and spells endurance for any man who's hard on his clothes.

Prices reasonable.

Dr. A. Reed CUSHION SHOES

for the All-Day Man

Here's a shoe you will just begin to appreciate at bedtime of the first day you wear it.

You have gone about all day in a new pair of DR. A. REED CUSHION SHOES. But they didn't act new. They did not slow you down around noontime, nor get irksome in the afternoon, nor become painful at dinner nor put you completely out of action in the evening. That's because they are expressly made not to do these things.

The felt and cork cushion in the sole makes you an "all-day" man. We'll prove it. Most styles $7 to $9.

UNLESS 7 OTHER CLUBS GET BUSY, THE NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE WILL SOON BE OVER

GIANTS CLIMB FAST IN PENNANT CHASE

Chicago Appears to be Only Club Which Can Halt McGraw's Speedy Team.

SCHUPP'S ARM IMPROVING

With Star Twirler in Form, New York May Be Able to Win Flag by July 1.

The runaway race which the Giants are making in the National League has the other clubs worried, and as each day passes it looks more and more as if there was no club East or West which would be able to stop McGraw's juggernaut. The Giants have lost only one game out of fifteen played, and their attack grows stronger as the season goes along. The Phillies were unable to score a single run in the series against New York last week. Moran's club is a great disappointment.

While the other clubs on the Toner circuit are being constantly upset by the draft and enlistments, the Giants remain intact, and the only players on the New York club who are likely to be called during the Summer are Benny Kauff and Jess Barnes, both in Class 1A.

The sudden revivification of Larry Doyle at second base and Jeff Tesreau as a pitcher make the Giants a more powerful combination than they were last Fall. The addition of Barnes has greatly strengthened the pitching staff, and with two reliable right-handers in good working order, McGraw's trio of left-handers will not have to carry the strain of the work as they did last Summer.

The Giants have won fourteen out of fifteen games already, and their best pitcher, Ferdie Schupp, has not yet pitched a game. His arm was bad on the Southern training trip, and McGraw is going to be sure that it is in good shape before Schupp starts. When the Louisville southpaw gets going under full steam the Giants' menace in the National League is going to be even greater than it is now.

It happens that the National League schedule has worked out as if it was made to order for McGraw's club. The Chicago Cubs, who just now seem to be the strongest club in the league outside of New York, will not stack up against the Giants until the very end of the latter's western trip. The Giants will not play Chicago until May 24 and in the meantime they can feast on weaker opposition.

The Giants have one more game in Boston today and tomorrow will return to the Polo Grounds for a three-game series with the Phillies. On Friday the Giants will start west, opening the road trip in Pittsburgh on that day. The opposition the Giants are likely to meet against the Buccaneers is not alarming, but after a four-game series in the Smoky City, McGraw's men will journey to Cincinnati for a five-game series beginning on May 15. Matty's club is likely to give the Giants some trouble. By that time, however, the Giants are likely to be settled down into such a fast, winning gait that it may be impossible for Matty's men to halt them. After Cincinnati comes a four-game series with St. Louis and then the Giants invade Chicago.

If some formidable opposition does not arise on the coming tour of the West, the Giants may possibly have the pennant won and tucked away before the Fourth of July, and if this state of affairs happens it will have rather a disastrous effect on the other clubs in the league.

The events of the last week have made no change in the American League race. The Boston Red Sox still hold a commanding lead, but they have met more stubborn opposition than they expected in the Yankees, who have furnished the surprise of the week by twice downing Barrow's men at the Polo Grounds. In beating Bush and Babe Ruth the Yanks have disposed of the two strongest of the Boston pitchers. Huggins's pitchers seem to have weathered the hardest part of their slump, and from now on the Yankee manager looks for better work from his twirlers.

POOR THROW DOWNS SOX.

Detroit Wins Game in Eighth When Liebold Errs.

DETROIT, May 5.—A poor return by Liebold of Heilman's long sacrifice fly with the bases filled in the eighth inning enabled Detroit to win from Chicago, 3 to 2, here this afternoon.

Bush drove one through the Pitcher's box, Cobb was hit by a pitched ball, and Vesch duplicated Bush's drive, filling the bases. Bush scored on Heilman's fly and Cobb also scored when Liebold's throw went between third and the plate.

WITH TONEY IN BOX REDS BEAT PIRATES

Star of Cincinnati Outfit Returns to Team and Brings Victory with Him.

CINCINNATI, May 5.—Cincinnati and Pittsburgh broke even in the first major league double-header of the season here today. Toney, making his first appearance of the year, pitched fine ball in the first game, and would not have been scored on but for a fielding error. The Reds knocked Jacobs out of the box in less than three innings. Cincinnati won by a score of 3 to 1.

In the second game, which the Pirates won 4 to 3, Schneider was wild. Cincinnati hit Harmon hard, but failed to get full value from the safe drives.

FOOTBALL PLANS IN DOUBT.

Representatives of Big Three Will Discuss Situation This Week.

The Harvard-Yale-Princeton football meeting, which was to have been held here last week, did not materialize, but the officials of these three institutions will make another attempt to get together this week to formulate some kind of a schedule for football games next Fall.

Harvard and Princeton seem anxious to develop football elevens next Fall, but Yale is the doubtful member of the trio, and at New Haven they question whether they will be able to get together any sort of a gridiron team. As a Princeton official pointed out yesterday, the three colleges are in the same boat when it comes to a question of lack of good football material, and they all enter the field on the same basis. The resumption of baseball and rowing at the colleges this Spring has, however, shown the officials that athletics can be carried on successfully on a wartime basis.

Harvard and Princeton officials hope to convince the Yale representatives of this at the coming meeting, and graduate sentiment is also in favor of carrying out the football schedule on the same plan as in rowing and baseball and on the track.

FIRST OUTDOOR MEET HELD.

Freirich Victor in 1,000-Yard Run from Scratch.

Macomb's Dam Park held its first outdoor athletic meet of the 1918 season yesterday, when the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A. promoted a set of members' games. A program of six track events was contested, two being for schoolboys, while a third was for midgets, and a number of interesting performances were furnished. The principal event was the 1,000-yard handicap, in which Sam Freirich, the Y. M. H. A. road runner, carried off first prize. He started from scratch, and, cutting down his field gradually, won by twenty yards from D. Zickerman, who had a 50-yard allowance. Freirich's time was 2:31 3-5.

The summaries:

100-Yard Dash, (handicap.)—Won by Harry Wilshin, (scratch;) 1. Falkenstein, (scratch,) second; A. Gordon, (2 feet,) third. Time—0:10 4-5.

50-Yard Dash, Senior.—Won by Plumer; Sorkin, second; Bramnwitz, third. Time—0:07 3-5.

50-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by Azrolan; Cohen, second; Glassman, third. Time—0:07 4-5.

1,000-Yard Run, (handicap.)—Won by S. Freirich, (scratch;) D. Zickerman, (50 yards,) second; B. Gilbert, (60 yards,) third. Time—2:31 3-5.

50-Yard Dash, Midgets.—Won by Isaacs; Beyman, second; Rose, third. Time—0:08 4-5.

440-Yard Relay Race.—Won by Imperial team, (Goldman, Cahn, Boxman, and Dolinsky;) Warwick team, (Silverstone, Wechsler, Fleischman, and Chamowitz,) second. Time not given.

C. C. N. Y. STUDENTS IN HIKE

Annual Walk Won by Rosenberg from Large Field.

About 200 pedestrians answered the call for starters yesterday in the second annual Finley Hike, a walking event from City College Stadium to Getty's Square, Yonkers, and return. The field was led home by William Rosenberg, runner-up for premier laurels last year. He finished first in 1 hour 31 minutes 7 4-5 seconds. Almost six minutes behind him came Harry Davidow in second place, and the third walker to cross the finish line was H. Kwelt, whose time was 1:42:10. S. Schnenberg occupied fourth position at the end in 1:43:30.

To Decide Angle Title.

The play off in the tie between Henry Frantzen and Harry Frisch for the metropolitan title of amateur three-cushion champion will be decided tonight and Tuesday night in a match of 100 points. The first block will be played at Thum's, white the deciding points will be played Tuesday night at Doyle's. These players each won five and lost one game in the tournament held by the American Amateur Billiard Association.

MRS. GAVIN BEATEN IN HANDICAP GOLF

Long Carries at Baltusrol Break Up Her Game and Low Wins by 5 and 4.

While the Red Cross exhibition golf match played at Baltusrol yesterday between Mrs. William A. Gavin, the women's metropolitan champion, and George Low, professional at Baltusrol, was an unqualified success as far as its primary motive was concerned, it hardly was pleasing to the participants, since neither approached the sort of game they or the large gallery hoped for. Mrs. Gavin, especially, was off her usual steady game, and could never at any time get into the running. She was defeated, 5 up and 4 to play, and defeat came not through any brilliancy on the part of Low, but rather because of Mrs. Gavin's inability to get any distance on her drives.

Due to her brilliant previous matches, and her convincing golf at Baltusrol, Mrs. Gavin entered the contest a prime favorite and attracted the greater part of the gallery, which contributed $460 yesterday, with more to come, as Mr. Low expressed it last night after checking up. However, almost from the first tee it was apparent that the feminine leader of the Metropolitan District was bound for defeat. The match was played over the championship course, with the back tees used, and this feature militated greatly against Mrs. Gavin, as it was doubly hard for her to carry the long grass and get on the well-groomed fairway.

Baltusrol was in splendid condition for so early in the season, but the players were not so ready for good golf. Low went out in 44, and approximated 40 back, which is far above his usual game. He has prided himself on being able to break 76 at Baltusrol consistently. Low's troubles, however, were not so numerous as those which beset Mrs. Gavin, as her actual score for the eighteen holes was 97, with 49 out and 48 back.

Low had two sevens on his outward journey, and probably would have needed even more strokes at the eighteenth had he elected to play out that hole, as he was in a bunker off the tee and almost hit himself on the nose trying to get out. He hit viciously at the buried ball, and it flew back at him. He managed to get his band up just in time to protect his rather prominent Scottish holes. After that shot Low decided he would end his part of the fun right there.

Not only did Mrs. Gavin find her drives entirely too short for the Baltusrol course, but the knowledge of this detracted from her short game. She had a miserable putter, but Low finished the first nine 1 down with her handicap, thanks to the mistakes of Low, but the professional began to play better coming in, and won four of the first five holes of the inward journey, deciding the match at the fifteenth. Low equaled par at the tenth, had a birdie at the eleventh, wasted a putt at the twelfth, and another putt at the short thirteenth, and was down in par at the fifteenth. Only at two holes did Mrs. Gavin equal par, these being the fifth and eleventh holes, where she had fours.

Mrs. Gavin received a stroke at the first, second, fourth, sixth, seventh, tenth, twelfth, fifteenth, and sixteenth holes. The actual cards of the match follow:

Mrs. Gavin, out..	6	7	4	6	4	6	6	6	4—49	5 44
Low, out.....	5	4	4	7	4	5	7	5	3—	44

AMATEUR GOLFERS BEATEN.

Brady and Hutchinson Down Evans and Standish, 2 and 1.

DETROIT, May 5.—Mike Brady of Boston, Massachusetts open champion, paired with Jock Hutchinson of Chicago, Scotch professional, defeated Chick Evans of Chicago and James D. Standish, a local amateur, 2 up and 1 to play, in the Red Cross benefit golf match held at the Detroit Country Club this afternoon. About 300 witnessed the match. Caddy rights were auctioned off for $195, and between $1,000 and $1,200 was realized from ticket sales.

KRAMER HAS BAD FALL.

Veteran Cyclist Severely Bruised in Accident at Velodrome.

NEWARK, N. J., May 5.—Frank L. Kramer had one of the worst spills of his long career as a cyclist at the Velodrome this afternoon. It occurred in a match race, and was caused by the chain jumping from the sprocket due to the wheel being out of line. Kramer landed on his shoulder, and it was feared at first that he had broken his collarbone. Later the track physician reported that while the injury was very painful the cyclist had not broken any bones.

Kramer also received an ugly gash over his right eye, and his leg and arm were badly scraped. He was taken home in an auto, not being able to operate his own car.

Five attempts were made to decide the first heat of the match, but not one was successful, Kramer fell in the first one, and in the third his chain came off.

Willie Spencer defeated Francesco Verri, Reggie McNamara, Bob Spears, Alf Grenda, and Jackie Clark in the mile open event, winning in a decisive manner. Spears won the three-mile handicap from scratch after a hard ride, defeating Willie Hanley, Jake Magin, Alf Grenda, John Bedell, and Eddie Madden, who finished in that order. The two-mile invitation went to Hanley. In the amateur ranks Gus Lang won the Australian pursuit race, and William Beck took the two-thirds-mile handicap.

NEWPORT WANTS BIG FIGHT.

Governor Beeckman May Be Asked to Give Sanction for Bout.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 5.—Sportsmen of Newport are interested in reports that efforts are being made to have the Jess Willard-Fred Fulton fight for the heavyweight championship of the world staged in Newport, July 4.

Rumor has it that a local enthusiast will seek to have Governor Beeckman give his permission to have the fight held here, and that if the sanction is secured the ringside, reported to have been built in sections in Chicago, will be shipped to Newport, so that the fight can be staged at Freebody Park.

The manager of the fight, it is said, looks with favor upon Newport, because of the many services men here, and its close proximity to New York, Boston and Providence.

Eddie McGoorty in Army.

CHICAGO, May 5.—Eddie McGoorty, Oshkosh, Wis., middleweight, tonight was called into service by a Chicago draft board and ordered to report tomorrow at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill.

PENN 'VARSITY CREW HAS PREMIER PLACE

Little Chance That Wright's Powerful Eight Will Be Beaten This Season.

Pennsylvania's overwhelming victory over Columbia and Princeton in the Childs Cup race at Lake Carnegie on Saturday marks the Quakers as the most impressive college eight of the season. The five lengths' margin and more over Princeton shows Penn to have a crew superior to that of Harvard, which was able to beat out the Tigers by only a length, two weeks ago. Penn will meet Yale on the Schuylkill on Saturday, but it is not likely that the Elis will be able to match the fine watermanship of the eight which Joe Wright has coached.

Corneli will not row against the Quakers this season, but a comparison of the Ithacans and Penn can be made when Cornell rows Princeton on June 25. From present indications it appears as if Pennsylvania easily had the best crew of the year. The impressive victory some time ago over the Midshipmen at Annapolis and the fast time rows on the Schuylkill made it certain that the Quakers had an eight of unusual power this Spring.

The Pennsylvanians were one of the first crews on the water after the severe Winter, and Wright has slowly and carefully brought along his charges until Captain Jerauld's eight has excellent form and plenty of power. Stroked by Thomas, the crew is a smooth working, powerful machine, and looks like a better combination than any of the Penn crews which rowed at Poughkeepsie during the last few years of the Hudson classic.

Penn will again be matched against Columbia and Annapolis on the Severn on May 18, but as the Quakers have already beaten both of these crews decisively, there is little doubt but that they will take the American Rowing Association regatta on that date. There is some hope for Columbia's improvement before that time however, for the Rice crew on Saturday showed plenty of power and lacked only experience. The generalship shown by Columbia was faulty for the Blue and White eight did not start to row until the race had already been lost.

Coach Jim Rice will not row his freshmen against any of the other college freshman eights this season as the crew of youngsters is unusually light. It had been planned to enter the freshmen in the Childs cup regatta at Princeton Saturday and at Annapolis on May 18, but these races were abandoned. The Columbia freshmen will probably row in the Harlem River regatta on Decoration Day.

OVERHEARD

"Hello, is this Columbus 7288?"

"Yes. What can we do for you?"

"What is the price of your 34 x 4 Non-skid?"

"$40.75."

"That's fair enough if the tire is all right. What's the guarantee on it?"

"We guarantee it for a minimum of 5,000 miles, but if you are a careful driver and don't try to do any Steeplechasing, you probably will get seven or eight thousand miles out of it."

"I never got any such mileage out of any tire I ever used, and I've tried a dozen makes. What do you put into yours to make them any better than the rest?"

"Well, perhaps we have more experience than most. We have been twenty years learning how to make them, and that counts."

"I thought it was a new tire."

"No, indeed. We changed the name, that's all. They used to be sold under the name of Gaulois Tires. The Etablissements Bergougnan began making them in Clermont-Ferrand, France, in 1897. Another thing we put in Bergougnan Tires is care and time. Bergougnan workmen are not paid according to the number of tires they make, but according to the number of mistakes they don't make. They make fewer tires, but each tire is perfect when it leaves the factory."

"Well, that sounds reasonable enough. My friend Jones told me about the tires, and he praised them so extravagantly that I thought I'd look into it. Send me two. I'll put them on opposite two new ..... tires I just bought and see which tires give me the best mileage."

"That's fine. We always welcome a test of this character. That's how we make permanent customers."

"All right. By the way, how do you pronounce that name of yours? It certainly is a jaw-breaker."

"It's not so bad when you know how. Just say:
"BEAR——GOO——NIAN."
"BEAR——GOO——NIAN?"
"That's it."
"Oh. Very well."

ANZACS FIND THIS IS NO 'COLD CITY'

Men from the Antipodes Say New York Is Royal in Her Treatment of Them.

CAN'T SPEND THEIR MONEY

Restaurant Men Make the 500 Soldiers Their Guests and Even Newsboys Won't Take Pay.

Not since General Joffre, Marshal of France, received the plaudits of the entire population of New York, has such a welcome been given to visitors as that which has marked the stay here of the 500 rugged, sunburned Anzacs who marched down Broadway four days ago while the cañons of lower Manhattan echoed to the "Coo-oo-o-ee" of the Australian bush. Dined and entertained from early morning till late at night, the 500 men from the Antipodes, who are returning to France and the battlefields of the western front by way of New York, have been kept busy receiving such hospitality as has seldom fallen to visitors in a strange land.

Tanned by the sun of their motherland, Australia, these 500 soldiers and their officers have been clasped to the heart of New York in a manner that utterly disproves the charge that New York is a "cold town."

"I can't begin to tell you how fine the people here have been," said Private E. P. Dunn of Sydney last night at the Hippodrome, where 100 of the Anzacs were guests of the Canadian Club at a benefit all-star performance in aid of the club's charities.

"The people here have just been royal in their treatment of us. It just took us off our feet. I don't understand why they should be so nice to us except perhaps because they know we are far from home. They won't let us do a thing, and go out of their way wherever we are in order to see that we are well taken care of.

"Down in the tram that runs underground yesterday I stepped aside to allow two ladies to pass into the tram. Would you believe it they refused to go in, but made me enter first."

Private Dunn shook his head. It was an act that passed understanding. Similar acts of courtesy were recited by Dunn's comrades.

"Remember that man on the street who wouldn't permit me to drop a coin into an old beggar's hat?" asked a tall, straight Anzac, wiping the perspiration from his brow. "The chap pulled back my hand and dropped a handful of coins into the old duffer's tin cup. He said something about no Australian being allowed to spend money here."

Guests of Restaurant Men.

From the stories told by the Anzacs the incident of the beggar and the tin cup has been reproduced in many restaurants and hostelries, for wherever an Anzac was seen his felt hat, turned up rakishly at the side, exhibiting the emblem of the rising sun, seemed to be sufficient passport. Restaurant men refused to take pay for meals, and even newsboys, it was said, lost in admiration for the visiting fighting men, "passed up" the coins proffered to them.

"How do I like New York," asked Private Frank F. Smith of Victoria. "Well, it seems hard to say. The way the people here received us took my breath away. It was a royal welcome, and you can't make it too strong when you say that we appreciate it from the bottom of our hearts. Wherever we have gone it has been the same. Anzacs first in everything. The people on the streets, in the shops, on the trams, and in the houses where we have gone welcome us as if we were their very own. It makes a fellow feel happy to come from Australia and to be in New York today."

A comrade told of a visit paid to "a nice old lady." The visitor occupied the seat of honor. It was, he said, "Mr. Williams this and Mr. Williams that," until he was fairly bewildered and overwhelmed by the kindness and hospitality.

"Is the coffee just the way you like it?" the "nice old lady" asked. Private Williams, a mouthful of pie choking his words of appreciation, just nodded his head. "There was a plateful of the finest things in the world to eat," he said. "And me, after four solid meals that day."

He shook his head mournfully, as if in regret for his lack of greater food capacity.

"Down on Broadway the other day when we marched for the Liberty Loan parade," said Private John F. Preston of Fremantle, "the people lined the streets and cheered so much I wondered what they were doing it for. I heard one man say as we passed him, 'There go the fellows that take no prisoners.' That isn't true, but if you knew what I know about the Boche you wouldn't feel any love for him." A faraway look came into the gray eyes of the stalwart bronzed soldier. But it was dispelled in another moment when he began to describe his pleasure over the streets and sights of New York as seen in kaleidoscopic vision in the last four days, from buses, taxicabs, street cars, and elevated trains.

Tells of City's Great Welcome.

"New York has certainly given us a great welcome," chimed in Private Dunn. "It's on the go we are from early morning till the next morning. For the last four days our program began at 6 o'clock in the morning and we never got to bed before 2 the next day. How do we stand it? Oh, we're tough as horses. The people here have almost been too kind, if I can say that. The people here want to do most anything in the world for us, and I guess they are fulfilling their wish."

A moment later Percy Grainger, in the uniform of a private in the United States Army, stepped out on the stage of the Hippodrome, and the Anzacs lustily applauded their fellow-Australian. "I heard him back in Australia," said one. A whirlwind of applause swept the group when Grainger concluded, and he was accompanied on his exit backstage by the familiar "Coo-oo-o-ee" of the Australian bushmen, the cry that New Yorkers have learned to know in the last four days.

An incident of the welcome accorded to the visiting Anzacs occurred last night in the lobby of the Hippodrome. A short, plump woman approached the veterans, her eyes shining. She grasped the hands of all the men in sight, inquiring whether they were "gumsuckers" or "cornstalks." Some were one and some another. "Gumsucker" is an Australian from Victoria, where the gum trees abound, and a "cornstalk" is a man from the plains of New South Wales, where the vegetation is limited to corn and sundry articles.

"I want you to come back stage and meet my son," said the woman. She was Mrs. Grainger, mother of Percy Grainger, the Australian composer and pianist. The officers and men accepted the invitation with alacrity.

In an interval of the Hippodrome show Private W. S. Williams of Sydney had this to say:

"New York? Why, it's the greatest place in the world. Never knew anything like it. Your people just seem to have taken us right to themselves as if we were long-lost brothers. Maybe we are. We're all brothers today in this big show anyway. I never expect to see anything like the cheering crowds that seem to spring from everywhere as soon as we get around. On that Liberty Loan parade the other day they threw all sorts of things out of the windows. Long rolls of paper they were, and we got all tangled up in them. The hospitality of New York took us by storm. We never would have believed it. New York cold? Never. We know. You can lay a wager on that. We know."

Four days ago when the Anzacs marched down Fifth Avenue and Broadway, was the first time that the five starred flag of Australia had waved in the streets of New York alongside of the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes. The sight of the bronzed men, sound again after being invalided home from wounds suffered at Gallipoli and on the western front had stirred the onlookers deeply and one of the Anzacs said last night that he thought New York's susceptibility to this emotion was a happy augury of the spirit America was to show in the war.

Many of the visiting Anzacs are from the sheepruns and the farming country of Australia, and the sights of the metropolis they said seemed like fairy tales come true to them. They rub their eyes wondering whether the lace-like structure they are told represents the Woolworth Building is a real building or just a mirage. Most of them are infantrymen and they look a good deal like our Western troops. Their clean-cut appearance shows their quality, and their eyes, many with "crow's feet" at the corners, look out on the world with a boyish gleam that belies their prematurely lined faces.

The Anzacs are commanded by Colonel W. K. Fethers, a veteran both of Gallipoli and the western front. He won his D. S. O. at the battle of Pozières on the Somme in August, 1916, when his regiment went into battle with 28 officers and 800 men and came out with 5 officers and 120 men. The contingent who saw service with Colonel Fethers at Gallipoli include Lieutenant Clifton Douglas, Captain H. S. Jacobs, Captain F. McCullom, and Captain R. Le Souge.

DAY OFF FOR 'BLUE DEVILS.'

Given Leaves of Absence Yesterday for First Time Since Arrival.

For the first time since arriving here a week ago, the "Blue Devils" of France yesterday had a chance as individuals to enjoy the hospitality of the city which received their detachment as a unit so enthusiastically. The French veterans were given full leave for the day and, as a result, they scattered from the Battery to the Bronx. In twos and threes, alone, and in company with their countrymen here, the stocky, little men in dark blue roamed from one end of the city to the other. They reported back at their headquarters in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory at night.

Today the "Blue Devils" are to make a trip to West Point. They will leave Pier 81, North River, on the steamship Taurus, which has been loaned by the Iron Steamship Company, at 8 o'clock in the morning, arriving at West Point at 11 o'clock. They will be met on landing by officers of the academy, and will march to the parade ground, where they will witness an hour and a half drill by the Cadets.

The "Blue Devils" will return to the boat for lunch, and at 5:30 in the evening will return to New York, dinner being served on the way. The meals have been donated by the Hotel Association of New York City. In the party will be members of the Liberty Loan Committee, including Governor Benjamin Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank. Four interpreters will go along to help the French soldiers make themselves understood.

CHORUS OF 10,000 VOICES.

Opera Stars Will Also Sing at Thrift Festival, June 2.

Executives and committee heads of the Thrift Festival to be given at the Polo Grounds on the afternoon of Sunday, June 2, met yesterday at luncheon at the Yale Club to discuss details with Frederick E. Allen, State director of war thrift. Those present included Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Lieutenant John Philip Sousa, Walter Damrosch, Edward Ziegler, Harry M. Hempstead, Tali Esen Morgan, George H. Gartlan, R. H. Burnside, Louis Koemmenich, Edward G. Marquard and Dr. Frank Rix of the Board of Education, Mortimer C. Wiske, Earl R. Lewis, H. O. Osgood, William G. Stewart, Edwin G. Clark, Joseph I. Bernat, Daniel Frohman, and Arthur S. Somers.

The oratorio and concert to be given will include a presentation of "Elijah" with a chorus of 10,000 voices, recruited from schools and choral societies. There will be a band of 300 musicians under the leadership of Lieutenant Sousa, and the soloists will include Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mme. Frances Alda, Mme. Marie Sundelius, Charles Harrison, Oscar Seagle, and Leon Rothier. The entire proceeds will go to the Educational Fund of the National War Savings Committee of New York City.

Arrangements were made at yesterday's meeting to begin an active ticket-selling campaign on May 15. Cities as far distant as New Haven, Albany, and Trenton will be visited by women in automobiles.

GIVES BLOOD TO ANNA HELD.

Actress Improves After Second Operation for Myeloma.

The condition of Anna Held, the actress, who has been seriously ill for several days at the Hotel Savoy, suffering from myeloma, was reported yesterday to have been improved greatly by a second transfusion of blood. Dr. Donald McCaskey, her physician, reported last night that the transfusion had an immediate effect upon the patient's strength and vitality. She weighs only about eighty pounds now, or almost forty pounds less than normal, and her anemic condition had been affected by overwork and exhaustion.

A motor truck chauffeur who has volunteered to several other physicians in operations for the transfusion of blood was accepted by Dr. McCaskey yesterday. He was able to leave the hotel a few minutes after the operation had been completed. The operation was performed by Dr. James F. Grattan, chief surgeon at the United States Military Academy at West Point.

POLICE TO SEE "SINBAD."

Special Midnight Performance for Traffic and Mounted Men.

A special performance of "Sinbad," it was announced, will be given at the Winter Garden at 11:30 o'clock next Saturday night for the men of the traffic and mounted divisions of the New York Police Department. Mayor Hylan, Commissioner John A. Harriss, Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright, and the heads of the various departments of police are also expected to be present. The theatre party is intended as a climax to the annual police parade, which will also take place on Saturday.

The performance has been arranged by the Shuberts and Al Jolson, and the remainder of the company will give their services free of charge. Each member of the force will be invited to draw a ticket from a bag as he enters the theatre, and the seating arrangement will be thus determined.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Sick-a-Bed" ended its engagement at the Gaiety Theatre on Saturday night. The house's next attraction is as yet unannounced.

The French "Blue Devils" will give an exhibition bayonet drill on the Century Roof each night this week, during the course of the midnight revue now playing there.

A musical version of the Hopwood-Rinehart farce, "Seven Days," is being prepared by Otto Harbach and Rudolph Friml, and will be produced this Summer by Arthur Hammerstein and the Selwyns.

Ada May Weeks will join the cast of "Fancy Free" at the Astor Theatre tonight, succeeding Marilynn Miller.

The Summer season of the Columbia Theatre will begin next week, when a burlesque entitled "Hello, America," will be presented. The piece will be continued indefinitely.

Ann Pennington has been re-engaged for the new "Follies," now in rehearsal.

Seventy-five vaudevillians, including numerous headliners, will appear at the Hippodrome next Sunday at the second annual benefit performance of the National Vaudeville Artists.

The Association of the Eleventh Engineers, an auxiliary of the Eleventh Engineers Regiment, has bought out the Hudson Theatre for the night of Wednesday, May 15. "Nancy Lee" is the attraction.

Billie Burke's forthcoming appearance in "The Little Clown," a comedy by Avery Hopwood, has been postponed until the Fall owing to Miss Burke's engagement in "A Marriage of Convenience."

A complimentary performance of "Toot-Toot!" was given yesterday afternoon at the Liberty Theatre at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass. The piece is at present playing in Boston.

PICKFORDS ALL HERE; MARY, JACK, LOTTIE

Famous Screen Family in New Plays at Broadway Houses.

J. M. FLAGG'S "GOOD SPORT"

"Masks and Faces" Produced by Noted Stars for Academy of Dramatic Art Benefit.

One moved to go to the movies this week may pick a Pickford for his or her delectation, if it so be that any of the Pickfords are delectable to him or her. They are all here, the three of them, Mary, Lottie, and Jack—one at the Strand and two at the Rivoli.

Mary is to be seen at the Strand in "M'liss," which had its first showing yesterday. Someone wanted to give her another chance to run and jump and scramble in the woods, with plenty of opportunity for her pretty smiles and pouts, so he selected Bret Harte's "M'liss" and made it into a movie play. M'liss is a little wild animal of a girl, though never quite so wild as to make one think she is really wild, who does pretty much as she pleases, and as happens to please others, in as typical a mining town as was ever typified on the screen. She is uncontrollable until she meets Charles Gray, the school teacher, who is later suspected of murder, but who, of course, never committed the murder and narrowly escapes hanging in order to take M'liss under his wing for purposes of instruction and, presumably, live-happily-ever-afterward marriage.

A murder and a lynching are introduced into the story, but they are done as pleasantly as possible and do not interfere with one's enjoyment of Theodore Roberts as "Bummer" Smith and his trained hen. Miss Pickford, of course, is pleasing.

J. M. Flagg's "The Good Sport."

James Montgomery Flagg's latest comedy, "The Good Sport," is amusing and makes one wish that Mr. Flagg would write the captions for other comedies as well as his own. The hero, played by Mr. Flagg himself, gets rich by inventing a device that will make an elevator stop even with the floor, and he is hailed, as he should be, as a benefactor of the human race.

The second installment of the Outing-Chester travel pictures, entitled, "An Ex-Cannibal Carnival," takes the spectators to strange people and lands of unusual interest.

The Strand's musical program includes selections from "Gypsy Love," played by the orchestra; "The Winds of the South," sung by Irene Audrey; a duet from "Romeo and Juliet," sung by Rosa Lind and Ralph Errolle, and "Light Cavalry Overture," an organ solo, played alternately by Ralph H. Brigham and Herbert Sisson.

Jack Pickford races through "Mile-a-Minute Kendall" at the Rivoli as the civilized counterpart of the character of "M'liss" across the street. He is a gilded youth whose stern father can not see beneath the gilt to the sterling qualities beneath. It takes the girl to do that. Jean Evans plays Louise Huff, scrapes off the gilt down to the silver and even gets to pure gold underneath. All of which would imply that the hero's character is somewhat metallic, which it is.

Lottie Pickford takes the part of Rosalynde d'Aubre, a timid little villain, who demands only $5,000 from Jack's millionaire father when she had grounds for a breach of promise suit, the threat of which would have netted her several times that amount at least.

Some Educational Films.

One of the best scenic pictures of the many good ones put out by the Educational Films Corporation is "What the Ice Age Left," also at the Rivoli, which offers to spectators views of Glacier National Park that few, if any, of them could get in any other way.

The orchestra plays Edward Grieg's "In Autumn," Jeanne Gordon sings Tschaikowsky's "Pauline's Romance," and Lieutenant B. C. Hilliam of the Royal Canadian Forces sings "Freedom for All Forever," the words and music of which he composed. All are good.

The week's bill at the Rialto includes: "Playing the Game," with Charles Ray; Rossini's "Semiramide" and Chopin's "Polonaise in A Flat," played by the orchestra; "My Dreams," sung by Annie Rosner, and Cadman's "The Moon Drops Low," sung by Riccardo Bonelli. There are also a scenic film, "Spain, the Land of Enchantment," and bird studies in color.

"The Bride's Awakening," with Mae Murray in the leading rôle, opened at the Broadway Theatre yesterday.

Those who went to Loew's New York Theatre and Roof on Saturday, most of whom undoubtedly went because it was Saturday and not because of any special attraction for them in the modestly advertised feature film, saw a photoplay in which probably more men and women of note connected with the English stage appeared than in any previous screen production. Among those whose faces were seen were Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, George Bernard Shaw, Sir James Barrie, Sir Arthur W. Pinero, Irene Vanbrugh, Gladys Cooper, Sir John Hare, Dion Boucicault, Dennis Neilson Terry, and Lillah McCarthy.

For Dramatic Relief Fund.

The play was "Masks and Faces," a screen adaptation of the story of the famous Peg Woffington as narrated in Charles Reade's novel, and it was produced at the instance of a committee of the Academy of Dramatic Art as a means for raising money for the academy's war relief fund. As a sort of prologue to the play the members of the committee, including Shaw, Barrie, Pinero, Hare, and others were shown seated around a table discussing plans for increasing their fund. Each rose to make a short speech, and spectators were able to see the celebrities in action. The actors and actresses mentioned above and a number of others appeared as the characters in the play.

Why a film of such exceptional origin and cast should slip into New York without special arrangements and be shown for one night only as part of a daily changing bill at a house that does not exhibit photoplays in continuous run will be a puzzle to many. The reason, it would seem, cannot be found in the film itself, for, though the photoplay undoubtedly lacks certain elements of appeal for the multitude of "movie fans," it has a quality and a character that should make it highly interesting and entertaining for thousands of persons. Even if the great names associated with it were unknown, "Masks and Faces" would be far above the average of photoplays. Although its development lacks smoothness and the story belongs to that old school of extravagant and impossible romance which has little vogue today, one watching the picture does not have to concede any more than in the case of almost any other photoplay, and the art displayed by the actors is a rare delight to any one able to value and appreciate real acting. Few in the cast have adequate opportunity for their abilities and some of them do not seem to fit their parts, but a sufficient quantity and quality of first-class acting, as distinct from the capering and grimacing before a camera, remains to make the film decidedly worth while. It will be a pity if another and more auspicious exhibition of it is not made here.

Catholic Actors' Guild Benefit.

About $11,000 was realized last night at the Cohan & Harris Theatre at the annual benefit performance given by the Catholic Actors' Guild. An address was made by Father John Talbot Smith, and the program included Eleanora de Cisneros, Joseph Lertora, Miss Sydney Thompson, and Pedro de Cordoba and Rowland Buckstone in a sketch.

O'BRIEN SEEKS HONORS FOR BRAVE MOUNT

Policeman and Champus Charged Intruders in Face of Revolver Volley.

If he survives the wounds received in the performance of his duty as a police horse, Champus, the mount of Policeman John O'Brien of the Westchester Station, will march with the medal winners of the year in the police parade next Saturday, and may take his place as a charter member in the Legion of Honor of the Police Department.

"And if he dies before the parade," said Policeman O'Brien in telling how Champus charged into a volley from the pistols of burglars and saved the life of his master, "his name, Champus, ought to go mighty near that bronze tablet in the rotunda at headquarters where they put all the names of the policemen who have died in the heroic performance of duty."

Champus has a record of years of cool horse sense and courage in the Police Department; but his latest exploit has no parallel in the memories of the mounted police. O'Brien and Champus were patroling in Lebanon Street, in the Bronx, near Devoe Street, on Friday night when they saw two men trying to break into the offices of the Bronx Consumers' Ice Company.

As O'Brien and Champus approached the men began to shoot at them. Champus put his head down and charged, while O'Brien slipped to the side and prepared to shoot at the burglars over the horse's back. As Champus came to close quarters with the burglars he reared to strike with his hoofs and one of the men fired two shots at the horse's head. They struck Champus in the neck and he fell to his knees, but he got up immediately and circled for O'Brien to mount so that the two could pursue the burglars, who had fled in the confusion.

Firing from the charging Champus O'Brien stopped one of the burglars, who said he was Jeremiah Sullivan of 1,104 Clay Avenue, the Bronx. Magistrate Brough, in the West Farms Court, held Sullivan in $5,000 bail on a charge of burglary and felonious assault.

"Champus saved my life by his plunging charge," said O'Brien. "Two bullets in my neck would have been enough for me. I've got them to agree that they won't put him out of misery for two days. If he's better for the parade he'll march with the medal winners, and if he doesn't—well, bronze tablets are not too good for Champus. He's a brave cop."

O'Brien has been given leave to nurse Champus back to health and honor befitting a medal holder in the Police Department.

SOCIALISTS DENOUNCE WAR.

Illinois Convention Demands Recall of Troops—Backs Berger's Stand.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 5.—The Socialist Party of Illinois, which has been holding a convention here, placed itself squarely on record as being against the war. Moreover, it favors and demands the recalling of American troops from France forthwith, and an immediate peace conference. It indorses the St. Louis platform of last year, which expressed these views on behalf of the national party, and places its stamp of approval upon the anti-war fight made by Victor Berger in Wisconsin last month in his campaign for United States Senator.

This, it is said tonight, is likely to engage the immediate attention of the Department of Justice.

Officials of the department said tonight that it was quite possible the new espionage act might be invoked concerning some of the utterances heard on the floor of the convention.

It was brought out during the convention and through Adolph Germer, Secretary of the National Socialist Party, that there had been a great falling off in membership throughout the country. It was disclosed that the party now has only 85,000 members paying dues to the national organization. Since March 1 last the party has lost 15,000 members.

William Brosa Lloyd was the nominee of the State Convention for United States Senator.

FARRAR GIVES A BENEFIT.

Metropolitan Audience Adds $16,000 to Stage War Relief Fund.

One of the largest crowds that ever filled the Metropolitan Opera House paid $16,000 last night at Geraldine Farrar's patriotic music festival for the benefit of the work of the Stage Women's War Relief for the American and allied soldiers. Such a large number of stars volunteered that Lieutenant John Philip Sousa and his combined naval bands opened the curtain at 7:50 o'clock. Miss Farrar, who took the Opera House for the occasion and managed the festival, was one of the greatest attractions. She gave the second act of "Madama Butterfly," with Thomas Chalmers, Rita Fornia, Angelo Bada, Pietro Audisio, and Ella Bakos. Gennaro Papi conducted.

John McCormack was in remarkable voice and after singing three songs responded to the audience's applause by singing three encores. There was much enthusiasm for the "Marseillaise," sung by Leon Rothier. Irene Franklin, Robert Emmett Keane, and Grace LaRue, also received lengthy applause. Rosina Galli and Bonfiglio, in their dances; Efrem Zimbalist, in violin solos, and George M. Cohan, in his song, "Over There," contributed largely to the success of the evening.

STEEL SHIP BUILT IN 67 DAYS

Construction of the West Llanga at Seattle Broke Two Records.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 5.—Lowering the previous record of eighty-five days held by a Portland (Ore.) shipyard, the 8,800-ton steel carrier West Llanga, which holds the world's record of speed in steel ship construction of fifty-five working days from date of keel laying to launching, was delivered to the Government hero yesterday, sixty-seven working days after her keel was put down.

Another Sunday Show for Fighters.

"The Man Who Came Back" was played last night at the Playhouse for soldiers and sailors, the occasion marking the second time in the series of Sunday night entertainments for men in uniform that a full-length play has been given. As on the previous occasion, the street in front of the theatre was thronged at a little after 7 o'clock, and an audience which stood six deep in the rear of the auditorium witnessed the performance. The company presenting the piece, headed by Henry Hull, is at present playing the neighborhood theatres here. The performance was under the auspices of the New York Community Service and the Stage Women's War Relief. Miss Grace George was in general charge.

$7,500 for Box Office Men.

The Treasurers' Club of America, the official organization of theatrical box office men, staged their annual entertainment last night at the Hudson Theatre, and added about $7,500 to their fund. About two-thirds of this sum was obtained from the program, and the remainder from the sale of seats. Those who appeared included Grace La Rue, Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey, Harry Fox, Barney Bernard, Frank Carter, Trixie Friganza, the Brown Brothers, James J. Morton, and the Three Dooleys.

Stricken on Train, Woman Dies.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 5.—Mrs. Frank Swartout of Newark, N. J., was found dying on an Erie train and expired when being removed at Waverly. She had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Emma Washburn, at Hornell, and had started for her home in the best of spirits. Death was said to be due to heart disease.

CANADIAN BENEFIT FOR 'HONOR LEGION'

Hipopdrome Show Adds Thousands to Fund for Dependents of Men Killed in Battle.

CHEERS FOR THE ANZACS

"Blue Devils" of France Also Warmly Greeted—Opera Stars Give Their Services.

It was Canadian night at the Hippodrome last night, the occasion being a benefit the proceeds of which will be applied to the relief of the families of Canadian soldiers, as well as the dependents of Americans who fought or are still fighting in Canada's army, who are resident in the United States. Under the law dependents of Canadian soldiers in the United States cannot be aided from the funds of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and the same applies to those American families whose breadwinners early in the war enlisted under the maple leaf of the Dominion.

To provide for these war sufferers, of whom there are many thousands in the United States, the Canadian Club of New York is now in a campaign for at least $100,000, and the proceeds of last night's benefit, which totaled far into the thousands, will go into this fund. As Thomas D. Kneelands, President of the Canadian Club of New York, expressed it last night, the dependent of the Canadian or American who fought for Canada is a "person in no man's land," so far as present official facilities for relief are concerned.

The Hippodrome was packed, and in the course of the long program everybody had a chance to cheer for all of the Allies. The Anzacs were there, and later they were joined by the Alpine Chasseurs, or, as New Yorkers like to call them, the "Blue Devils" of France. Scattered all through the house were American soldiers and sailors who led the cheering that greeted the appearance on the stage of these veterans of Gallipoli and Verdun.

To every one of the thousands who attended last night's big show was issued an appeal, which briefly expressed the purpose of the fund which the Canadian Club is now raising. It read:

> Thousands of red-blooded Americans—also Canadians and Britishers making their homes in the United States—early in the war, fired by the brutal treatment of Belgium and France, enraged at the sinking of the Lusitania, and seeing the freedom and liberty of the world assailed, rushed across the border to join the Canadian forces, many forfeiting their citizenship, others using subterfuge, hiding age and physical defects in their anxiety to be accepted. Thousands of these men now lie dead in Flanders Field, others with their backs to the wall are at this moment holding back the German hordes in France. The daily casualty list of Americans killed in action while fighting with the Canadian forces published in the New York press tells an appealing story.
> When the history of the part the United States will have played in this war is written, the story of the "30,000 honor legion" will be a tale of heroism, patriotism and devotion to ideals not surpassed in the annals of human events, and will furnish one of the brightest pages in American history which no single subsequent event of the war can dim.
> It is for the relief of dependent women and children of these men that this appeal is made. Why did they leave their families unprovided for? Because some relied upon the Canadian Patriotic Fund of Canada for such relief, which later they found was not available under its charter for dependents of Canadian soldiers living outside of Canada; others enlisted with the definite promise that men of British and Canadian ancestry in New York would not permit their loved ones to suffer.
> Our duty is plain; we must not break faith with men from our own city who have so gallantly fought for us during the last three years. What are you going to do for the loved ones of those who have done and are doing so much for you?

Governor Whitman in a brief speech lauded the purpose of the meeting and said that every real American in New York should accord not only his sympathetic but his financial support to the fund.

"The State of New York," said Governor Whitman, "has been called upon by the Government since Congress declared war on Germany to furnish 122,000 soldiers, and I am proud tonight to tell you that the number we have given to date is more than 176,000. Our population is about 11,000,000, while that of Canada is only 8,000,000, and yet Canada has sent overseas more than 500,000 soldiers, the very flower of her manhood."

Led by Scotch pipers the Anzacs made their appearance shortly before 11 o'clock. The great audience leaped to its feet and the cheering that greeted the warriors from Australia lasted ten minutes. Twice around the stage the Australians marched and then swinging into platoon formation they marched to the front and stood at attention, facing the cheering throng. They manoeuvred without command.

After the Anzacs had gone and following an interval of about twenty minutes the Alpine Chasseurs, in their famous blue uniforms, came swinging onto the great stage. Again the audience jumped to its feet and cheered until the "Blue Devils" did something that was easily the hit of the evening, and that was to sing the "Marseillaise" as only Frenchmen can sing it.

Raymond Hitchcock was master of ceremonies, and the artists who appeared were Mme. Frances Alda, Riccardo Martin, Eva Gauthier, Percy Grainger, the Australian pianist, who is now an American soldier; Edward H. Sothern, Miss Julia Marlowe, Miss Evelyn Starr, the violinist; George MacFarlane, and Miss Julia Arthur, the last named appearing at the close of the first part of the program in the Red Cross dress of the Stage Women's Relief. Miss Arthur, with the entire Hippodrome Chorus, sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

In introducing Mme. Alda Mr. Hitchcock said that she sang in English, French, Finnish, "and all of the dead languages, including German."

Binghamton Strike Feared.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 5.—Binghamton is facing a general strike as the result of strained relations between trades unions and the employers, which have now reached the breaking point. Some time ago employers formed the Master Builders' Association to limit further demands of the unions. The various building trades unions, affiliated in the Central Labor Union, demand increases in wages ranging from 50 cents to $1 a day, and notice was served on the Master Builders' Association that a decision would be required May 1. The Master Builders have replied that they will not consider the demands.

THE AWAKENING.

The most encouraging thing about the tremendous success of the Third Liberty Loan is not the oversubscription, even though that should run to a billion; it is the increase in the number of subscribers. It appears that 17,000,000 Americans bought these bonds; and that is 12,500,000 more than the number of those who took the First Liberty Loan; it is 7,000,000 more than the number of those who took the Second. Not in any oversubscription—though the loan is splendidly oversubscribed, too—but in this proof that America is at last aroused, at last feels that it is her war, lies the cause for that deep thankfulness which men who love their country feel today.

When Russia quixotically disarmed herself and advanced to meet Germany with an outstretched hand, and was savagely beaten down and torn apart; when HINDENBURG began, on March 21, his terrific attempt to crush the British army in France, and reach his claws across the Channel into Britain, they made sure the success of the American Liberty Loan, if you like to put it that way. But to put it that way is to substitute superficial things for deep, fundamental things. What they really did was to arouse America, for the first time, to a full realization of the fact that her own liberty was in danger; that she was not playing big brother to England and France, or returning LAFAYETTE's gift, but that all she holds dear on these American shores was hanging in the balance. No longer is America playing at war, when the man in the American street feels that his interest in the war is no theoretical interest in democracy but the desperate necessity of preserving his own liberties. He saw the menace to them in a dim way before, but Brest-Litovsk and Amiens blew the haze away, and he saw it loom suddenly up above himself, threatening and imminent.

Then, to the number of seventeen millions and more, he testified to his awakening. The first loan was a larger one and was made by what seems to us now, looking back, to have been a few men; a few who were awake. But this time it is John Smith who is making the loan; and he makes it because, all over the land, he is shaking off his light confidence that nothing very bad can happen to him, and is springing up under a startled consciousness that he himself and Jane his wife are interested personally and directly in this war; that it is their war, and that he and she must so demean themselves that New York and Virginia and Massachusetts may never come to be Belgium or Poland. For this great transformation we owe and acknowledge a heavy debt of gratitude to HINDENBURG, to the Kaiser, to Brest-Litovsk, to Armenia, to Amiens and Ypres.

HIS THIRD-TERM BOOM.

Governor WHITMAN's "boom" for a third term at Albany has been "launched" at the Kings County Republican Club, the Chairman whereof jocosely professes to be "sure" that most of the women "want to vote for WHITMAN." The Governor made a shrewd speech. He dilated on the increase of the New York National Guard, the New York contribution to the Mexican expedition and to the war; in short, Republican preparedness in this State, superior Republican military foresight and energy. No doubt this will be the chief point of his canvass.

The business record of his administrations, pointed to with pride by himself, may cause different emotions in Democratic bosoms; but it will be his cue to attribute swellings of appropriation to the war.

Not without appreciation and pleasure can any good men and true read the Governor's Bucolic:

> There never was a time when the farmers of the State had more absolute confidence in the administration of the affairs of the State than they have today. I know more about farmers than the men who write these speeches and resolutions in their editorial sanctums, who do not know the difference between a goat and a cow.

A doubtless deserved tribute to the Governor's popularity in the farming districts, his knowledge of "the farming interest" and the ignorance of his opponents. Speaking of "the "difference between a goat and a "cow," unless this was a symbolic veiled allusion to bock beer and milk punch, did Mr. WHITMAN in his Brooklyn speech let out any of his burning faith in prohibition?

TROUBLED AUSTRIA.

The situation in Austria must be more serious than had been supposed when the Government finds it necessary to prevent Parliament from meeting. To say this, however, is far from saying that the situation is necessarily desperate or that things have come to extremes. Kings have prevented Parliaments from meeting before, sometimes with distressing results. The classic case is that of CHARLES I. of England, and he lost his head by it; but before we proceed to rash assumptions based on that fact, it would be well to remember that he got on without a Parliament for eleven years. The leaders of the discontented parties at Vienna objected, indeed, to VON SEIDLER's demand that they postpone their session and to his threat of force if they did not, but they yielded.

Nevertheless, though the situation may be far from desperate, it is certainly ugly. No Government can afford to present itself to the eyes of the world in such a light; none would do it except when driven by need. The late ally of the two Kaisers, CONSTANTINE of Greece, did as he pleased about Parliaments; he imitated CHARLES of England and anticipated CHARLES of Austria, but his case, too, was one of necessity. He could not permit the people to have their constitutional rights, because if he did his plans would all be overturned. He could override the Constitution as cynically as he liked, for a time; but the Austrian Kaiser is in a far more uneasy position than was CONSTANTINE's.

Revolution may or may not be threatening in Austria. The mere fact of this threat of force to prevent a meeting of Parliament is proof, however, that it is feared; and if it is feared, then we may assume safely that a defeat of the German Army in Picardy, or even a postponement of victory after this year, will transform the fear of revolution into a recognition of its imminence and probability. It is only the prospect of victory and peace that protects the "ramshackle empire" and carries it through these anxious days. Let that prospect vanish, and no one can say what may happen.

BETTER INDUSTRIAL AND WAR NEWS.

Since the war depends so much on transportation, the best news is about railways and steamships. The Shipping Board announces new records in building ships and the Director General has placed record orders for locomotives. Thirty-two ships were built in April, aggregating 240,000 deadweight tonnage, and the speed increased toward the month's end. Soon we shall be building two ships a day, instead of one. The order for 1,025 locomotives was the largest ever placed, and totaled sixty million dollars. It will be interesting to notice whether the railways again can deliver alongside more tonnage than the ships can take across the seas, or more than can be taken away from the shipside "over there." Hitherto this has been the weakest point in our co-operation with our allies, but it seems on the eve of being the strongest. As much art lies in using ships and railways as in providing them, and a long step has been taken in terminal improvement by the appointment of a Port, Terminal, and Harbor Commission, designed to facilitate freight movements by improving the distribution of traffic among the ports and providing facilities where needed. No port will be overlooked, not even New York. The beginning made by New York and New Jersey in the development of the port as a whole will be helped by Federal resources, and there will be great benefits for all foreign trade as well as for those two States.

The labor news rivals the transportation betterment. The War Labor Board has averted a strike of 100,000 in the paper trade, and the two leading telegraph companies have agreed to respond to the complaint of their workers to the same board. There has been such a change in this respect on the part of representatives of both sides that Secretary of Labor WILSON is able to say that the situation has hardly ever been better than since the change. Even the customary May Day demonstrations were omitted, and, in the Secretary's words:

> So far as I am aware, there is not a single strike in the coal industry, the oil industry, the lumber industry, the shipbuilding industry, the packing-house industry, in the production of steel, or in the transportation, telegraph, or telephone systems of the entire United States.

Already it is evident that this is to be an improving crop year. Cotton prices have been so high that it was not possible to sympathize with the planters' demand for all that their business would yield them. They have planted an increase of acreage by 4 per cent. and have increased their use of fertilizers by 5.4 per cent. There is a likelihood of more staple than can be exported or consumed in home mills, and the break in the price benefits more than it injures. The present outlook is for over fifteen million bales of the new crop. The contrast between the price movements in regulated wheat and unregulated cotton is an interesting one already, even before the record is complete. Mr. HOOVER says that there will be more and cheaper food this year, both because the Winter killed less than one-third as much as in the previous year and because the Spring planting has been abundant. He was not able to stop the rise in the price of flour, but he acquits malice in speculation as a cause. The situation was a natural one, the causes being what they were, and the prices reacted with the conditions. If the farmers lost anything by the reduction of a price which might have gone higher, they would have profited only by blood money and would have suffered more than they did in injurious reaction due to approximate famine.

The industrial as well as the agricultural barometer is set fair. That appears from the satisfactory report of the Steel Corporation. Its earnings rose as the months of the quarter passed, and the established generous dividend was retained. This corporation is so representative that its reports serve also as an indication of general prosperity in the basic trade. It would have been difficult for it to be otherwise, with an unlimited war demand and the piling up of belated orders on railway and shipping construction.

This is an accumulation of favorable news which would have offset bad news from the trenches. But the case is that the war news also turned good, and the sentiment is more hopeful than recently.

GERMAN BOYCOTT FOR NEUTRALS

Several powerful manufacturing and shipping corporations in Germany, the North German Lloyd Steamship Company included, recently formed a combination, undoubtedly at the suggestion and with the support of the Government, to punish northern neutrals "who deal with Entente countries" by a trade boycott during the remainder of the war and for at least one year after the coming of peace. These neutrals are to be prevented from getting raw material from the Central Powers or countries which they control. This excites interest at the northern capitals. It indicates Germany's disapproval of the trade agreements which give us the use of 100,000 tons of Swedish and 400,000 tons of Norwegian shipping, with supplies from Spain for our troops in France, and of Holland's consent to the leasing for ninety days of the Dutch ships afterward seized at our ports.

Here again is an expression of German gratitude. Germany has been receiving the greater part of Sweden's exports of high-grade iron ore and iron, which amounted to 6,197,000 tons last year. From Norway she has had nickel for torpedoes and other metals used in munition factories. Her imports of food from Holland have been large, and she is using 200,000 tons of Dutch river and canal shipping. Her receipts of food from the four northern neutrals in 1916 and 1917 were enough for her entire army on the western front. It is well known in Berlin that the trade agreements were sought because these countries, partly on account of their sales to the Central Powers, were in need of foodstuffs. Having taken from them more than they could spare, Germany now plans to stab them in the back with this trade boycott.

But the northern neutrals may find consolation in a safe prediction that during the proposed year of boycott following the end of the war no other countries in the world will be so much in need of raw material as Germany and Austria. This is admitted by the boycotters themselves. In an article published three weeks ago at Munich, Professor TROELSCH asserted that German industry and trade would be seriously restrained in the first year or two of peace by lack of material for manufactures. At about the same time, Prince LOEWENSTEIN, in a review of industrial conditions, said that after the war Germany would be "like "a great store which has sold out its "stock of goods."

> Peace will not bring us supplies. Even should peace open every market in the world, it would not prevent the wildest competition for raw material. English and German, French and Austrian, all will join in the mad struggle. And those who in war were allies will be economic enemies in the markets. Will foreign countries accept our paper money? Tonnage will almost have disappeared, and our exchange will have sunk to the very lowest.

He argued that the Central Powers could save their industries only by demanding, in the peace settlement, a portion of the war indemnity in raw material. "We must do this or perish." But he was assuming that the Central Powers, as victors, could compel acceptance of such terms. If in no other way they can avoid, as he said, "the abyss of want, crushing taxation, and mass emigration," what will be the effect of this inevitable defeat?

This proposed boycott should cause no anxiety in the European neutral countries. Shortage of raw material in Germany and Austria will make the threat an empty one. After the coming of peace the Central Powers will still be asking neutrals for supplies, and will not then show gratitude by sinking their ships.

A PROUD DAY FOR MASSACHUSETTS.

The decoration of 122 Massachusetts soldiers with the coveted War Cross by a French General in the sound of German guns, while Stars and Stripes and Tricolor fluttered in the breeze together and the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the "Marseillaise" stirred the blood—one hero fainted from awe and excitement—was not a ceremony of courtesy, no mere complimentary tribute to flatter comrades in arms. The Americans from the hill towns of old Massachusetts, from the Connecticut Valley, and the neighborhood of Bunker Hill, had fought in the Apremont Forest on April 12 with the gallantry of French and with the resolution of British veterans, winning imperishable glory for the 104th Regiment. They proved themselves better men in hand-to-hand combat than the storming troops of a confident enemy. "We have met them and taken their measure," these New Englanders could say. It must have been a proud moment when they heard a famous French General recite the achievement of their regiment:

> It showed the greatest audacity and a fine spirit of sacrifice. Subjected to very violent bombardments and attacked by large German forces, it succeeded in checking the dangerous advance and took at the point of the bayonet in a most vigorous way prisoners and some demolished trenches from which it had fallen back at the first assault.

These soldiers—five of them belonged to the 101st Massachusetts and distinguished themselves at Soissons—went early overseas, and it was because they were hardened by training and steadied by discipline that they proved a surprise to the scornful Germans, who will now have to bracket them with the "Ladies from Hell" (the Scotch Highlanders) and the "Devil Dogs," (the American marines.)

Nothing seems too good to say about these New England Yankees. Look at the deeds which won the luckiest of them the French War Cross! Private JOSEPH J. GANNON of Cambridge "held the enemy in check "with a machine gun and prevented "the advance until his comrade, Cor-"poral RUSSELL A. HOYT, was killed "and himself seriously wounded." Sergeant JOHN T. COURTNEY of Waltham "volunteered to cross the "shelled areas to carry a wounded "comrade more than fifty meters un-"der a violent bombardment." And with an unyielding valor that makes the eyes dim to read about it, Corporal HENRY F. CARON of Adams, "when "mortally wounded, passed the re-"mainder of his grenades to his com-"rades, saying, 'I can't use these; "you take them.'" Americans "over here" have kindled at stories of daring and sacrifice that have won the Victoria Cross. Their own countrymen are now doing deeds as splendid as any chronicled of those British heroes or of the undaunted Frenchmen who have gained the Croix de Guerre. Such allies cannot be vanquished in the great war: they will always vie with one another in courage, in fortitude, and in the will to bring victory to their flags.

FINES GOING UP.

It is entirely in keeping with the spirit of the times that automobile fines for those who exceed speed regulations should go up. With the cost of living increasing on every side, it is quite proper that the reckless motorist should pay a greater premium for his carelessness and menace to the community. Magistrate HOUSE, in establishing the higher standard of $30 to $100 fines and sending frequent offenders to jail, has shown that the days of cheap police court fines are gone, fortunately for New York City, and the $5 or $10 bill, so flippantly paid by many early offenders, will no longer be accepted as legal satisfaction.

While statistics show that the percentage of fatalities in proportion to the automobiles in use is decreasing, the actual number of individual accidents is far too large, and there is justice in the law which provides a penalty sufficiently severe to be remembered. The great majority of motor-car drivers are careful and observant of the rights of others in the use of the streets. The few reckless ones place an undeserved stigma upon all, and it is quite right that they should pay the maximum rates for their folly.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Curious Mental Camouflage. "Rationalization" is a word much used by modern psychologists of the Freudian and related schools. The meaning ascribed to the word by them is a little different from its ordinarily accepted significance, but that is a common habit of such folk—of all scientific persons, indeed—and they defend it well enough on the plea of necessity. In this instance, probably, no better name for the process they thus describe could be found, and they can be pardoned for limiting the application of the word to one particular sort of rationalization and leaving the other sorts to do the best they can when bereft of a linguistic cover.

Rationalization, as these psychologists understand it, is the finding or the invention of an avowable, because a commendable, reason for the doing of a thing that was really done for a reason unavowable because uncommendable. For instance, Miss RICHRATH, the Vassar teacher who approved of the sinking of the Lusitania, did so because she is a German, and did not want to condemn herself, as such, by condemning an act committed by the Government and people whose responsibility every German, in a measure, shares. But she could not confess that, even to herself, as it would not be in accord with either her reputation or her character as an intelligent and educated woman, too high-minded to be governed by blind racial instincts. So, having heard or read that the Lusitania was armed and carried ammunition to be used for killing Germans, she clings to that justification of the sinking, and the later refutation of those statements she refuses to believe.

In like manner other Germans, and especially other German-Americans, evade the painful necessity of condemning the German Army for committing "atrocities" by the simple expedient of declaring all the stories about cruel and evil deeds in Belgium and France to be "British lies." It is easy to say that they know better, and in a way they do, but in another way they do not, and they sincerely believe that the stories are all false, because the alternative is the admission that they themselves belong to a race capable of doing what the British and half a dozen other peoples say—and prove—the Germans did.

That is "rationalization," and everybody indulges in it to some extent every day.

A Success Without the Trenches. When it was proposed to dig in Central Park a system of trenches that would bring to the minds of New Yorkers and their many visitors a clearer realization of how the war in Europe is conducted and what it means, the estimable gentlemen who advocated the execution of the plan all admitted that they had only one reason for doing so. It was necessary, they said, as a means of insuring success in floating the new Liberty Loan. For no other reason, they declared, would they have considered such a proposal for a moment, for the park was as dear to them as to anybody else, and none could be more ready to defend it to the last against any "invasion" not thus justified.

The argument, unquestionably, was a strong one—it was, indeed, quite unanswerable except by attacking and denying the premise on which it rested. To avert the failure of the loan, the sacrifice of Central Park, or of a dozen Central Parks, would have been a small price to pay, and a price which no good, or even decent, American would have hesitated to offer. So the premise was attacked, its truth was denied, and after a long controversy the trench scheme was abandoned.

Today everybody in the United States, and not far from everybody in most other countries, knows that the sacrifice of the park and the creation of a most dangerous precedent were not essential to the success of the loan, and THE TIMES is sure, or next to sure, that the members of the Loan Committee join all other defenders of the city's garden of innocent delights in rejoicing that a serious, a terrible, mistake was not made. THE TIMES had more confidence than the members of the committee themselves in their ability to make the loan a success without the sacrifice of the park, and its confidence has been justified by the event. The loan has been magnificently carried through—it is described in the Washington dispatches as probably the most successful loan ever floated by any nation—and the park is safer than it ever was before. The second result is incidental, but it is by no means unimportant.

Bombardment as It Is Now Conducted. As showing the violence of the recent German attack on one of the sectors held by French troops, PHILIP GIBBS quotes an officer who lived through it as saying: "There were ten big shells a second, and that lasted, with only two short pauses, for six days, all through the battle, and other shells were uncountable."

For the exact mathematical accuracy of this statement—of "big shells" alone it figures out at over 5,000,000—probably neither Mr. GIBBS nor his informant would vouch, but, on the other hand, this correspondent is not himself given to exaggeration or to transmitting exaggerations by others. His assertion can therefore be accepted as essentially true, and when so accepted it gives a new and clearer conception of the colossal scale on which this war is now conducted.

It means not only that something like 5,000,000 shells deserving to be called "heavy" were expended by the Germans in a small part of the long front, every mile of which was under a bombardment little less than continuous. It also brings to mind the immense labors performed by the thousands and thousands of men whose task it was to keep those gunners supplied with ammunition. They had to transport it for miles, themselves always under fire and moving over a terrain from which the last vestige of roads had disappeared. Also working their hardest to keep up this one rain of steel and explosives were other thousands of men and women in factories, and still further behind the firing line were miners and artisans of a dozen or a score of sorts, all seeking the accomplishment of the one purpose of killing or driving back that French officer and his men.

And this was such a small part of the battle that began on March 21!

Letters That Never Arrive.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of our mail service to France: On Jan. 2 I mailed a sweater, with some other articles, to my son in our army in France. To insure delivery I mailed it as first-class matter, paying $1.49 postage. To insure it further I also registered it for 10 cents additional, $1.59 in all. I have just received word that this package of registered first-class matter was delivered to my son on March 25, a period of nearly three months. He will have the sweater for next Winter. A Christmas package that I mailed him at the end of November had not been delivered on March 30. A Red Cross Christmas package, presumably mailed in November, was delivered on March 12. Most of the letters we write him are never delivered. In his last he writes, "Have not heard from you in a month," yet we write every week. And my son's postal address has never been changed since he enlisted in Paris last Summer. He is in the same place he was then.

Our Full Strength to France.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The men and women of the United States were three years late in coming into the war, leaving France and England to bear the burden of saving civilization and sustain the brunt. This moral stupidity and moral inertia are telling now. Unless American democracy is still too confused and incapable, it must see that France is now part of the sacred soil of the United States. Surely you must now act on the basis that, even if you have to transfer to the coast of France every sound man in the United States, even if untrained and unprepared, to fight for world's liberty, you will still have done less than your duty, because doing it late. There is not an instant to be lost. All those who cannot be transferred should be in your harbors building ships against time.

TURKS WHO FAVOR US.

Many Here Said to Have Turned Against German Rule.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I be permitted to say a few words in connection with the chivalrous expression of Colonel W. K. Fethers in regard to the fighting of the Turks, which appeared in this morning's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES? As a Turk who loves his nation but who deplores the short-sighted and erroneous diplomacy of its rulers, let me take this opportunity to thank the valiant chief of the brave Anzacs. It is not the first time that this idea has been expressed, but it does no harm to reiterate that the only decent fighting of this war has been around Gallipoli or Mesopotamia, where two former friends have come to clash. It was in this area only that the traditions of chivalrous warfare were scrupulously maintained in spite of the bitterness of the fighting, and by both sides.

As I have not as yet seen any comment on the President's decision not to declare war against Turkey, it will be opportune to give a few facts elucidating his wise stand. In the first place, from the point of view of waging war against Germany more efficiently, nothing will be gained—not only nothing will be gained but no little energy of the country will be used up in trying to enforce alien enemy regulation on approximately 800,000 Turkish subjects, perhaps 100 per cent. of whom are absolutely loyal to this country. Of the above number more than 90 per cent. are Armenians, Syrians, who, on account of the extreme short-sightedness of the pro-German rulers of Turkey and their inspirers in Berlin, have no reason to have any sympathy with Germans.

Of the Turks, many of them, who declared themselves "right or wrong, my country," at the beginning of the war, have gradually aligned themselves with the interests of the United States, especially since the entry of this country into the world conflict. All the intelligent ones strongly condemn the attitude of the Turkish Government against Armenians, whom they know as honest and industrious neighbors. Many of them thank God that they are in the United States. Some of them, as myself, have matched the President's $50 baby bond more than once in the last few days as their appreciation of the generosity of the United States and its great President. Making these people enemy aliens is uncalled for, if not fatuous.

In the second place, millions of American capital is invested in all parts of Turkey against no Turkish interests, except that which belongs to friendly or loyal people.

Thirdly, by pursuing the policy advocated by President Wilson a kind of political wedge will be formed between the Turks and their Teutonic allies. A positive result from this cannot be expected immediately because inertia of the state of things will make different parts of the machine run for a while without assistance. But sooner or later it will wax weak, and the Turks who do not know any enemy outside of the nations who have an eye of conquest on Constantinople, like the former Russian Government, will reason out that they have nothing to gain by further fighting the cause of an alien nation.

Lastly, Turkey has not done anything which might be interpreted as an overt act, except in a far fetched way.

Wholesale and Retail Prices.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In these days when the retail prices soar so fast that we cannot accustom ourselves to them at any level before they soar again out of sight, it is a relief to read the figures recently published in the March report of the Bureau of Labor.

We often think the retailers are exploiting their customers. The report shows that they have not done so. It says, page 110:

> The retailers' prices of most of the commodities included in the exhibit have fluctuated at a lower level as compared with their 1913 base than have the wholesale prices. This is particularly noticeable in the case of pork, bacon, lard, dressed lamb, butter, milk, eggs, flour, corn meal, and potatoes. For corn meal especially there has been a much smaller percentage of increase in the retail than in the wholesale price. Comparing January, 1918, prices with the average for 1913, it is seen that only four articles of the twenty-eight included in the table show a larger percentage of increase in the retail than in the wholesale price. These are beef in Chicago (three price series) and granulated sugar in New York. In most of the months of 1917 the retail prices of these articles were relatively lower than were the wholesale prices.

The report thus shows that retail prices have not increased proportionally to wholesale prices.

In a special report on Prices and Cost of Living, the increase in wholesale prices from 1913 to December, 1917, are given: "Since January, 1916, the rise in wholesale prices has been unprecedented. The bureau's weighted index number, based on 292 separate articles, or price series, stood at 181 in December, 1917, as compared with 110 in January, 1916, and 100 as the average for the twelve months of 1913. In the same period, January, 1916, to December, 1917, the index number of farm products increased from 108 to 204; that of food articles from 114 to 185, and that of cloths and clothing from 110 to 206." This shows that the wholesale prices of articles of food have not advanced as much as other commodities.

Future of German Study.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There was a time, and not so very long ago, when German science and German idealism commanded universal respect. That time no longer exists. As a cultural study German is taboo today, and it will remain taboo for generations to come. When a nation prostitutes science and "Kultur" in the service of all that is vile and infamous—so infamous that one cannot summon the courage to reproduce it in print—her language deserves to become extinct. There is only one valid plea that can be advanced at this time for the study of German in public and private schools of this country, and that is the use of it as a means of protection against the common foe. And even then the greatest care will have to be exercised in the selection of suitable teachers.

CONSEQUENCES.

He "wanted to go," but his wife said "No!"
And she wept at the very thought,
So he stayed at home while across the foam
The war of the worlds was fought!
He was held and bound to the daily round
By the toils of a clinging love
That would make the goal of an eagle's soul
The cots of a cooing dove.

He "wanted to go," but his wife cried "No!"
And she held him there with her,
While the news that came from the war's great game
Set his brain and his heart awhirr;
He was "mad" to sail on the soldier's trail,
To venture and risk and dare,
To face the brunt at the very front
Of the fighting over there.

He "wanted to go," but his wife wailed "No!"
Unequal to sacrifice.
Though the chains might chafe she would hold him safe—
And she paid a heavy price!
For his love turned hate for his selfish mate,
As the strongest passion can,
So she lost her "romance"—and he his chance
To live or to die a Man!

BERTON BRALEY.

"DRYS" GATHER AT ALBANY.

There to Urge Extra Session of Legislature to Pass on Prohibition.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 5.—Temperance forces of the State will confer here tomorrow afternoon and will attempt to induce Governor Whitman to call an extraordinary session of the Legislature to ratify the Federal Prohibition Amendment in an eleventh-hour move to kill prohibition as an issue in the coming campaign. Advocates of the move say that many legislators, fearing that they are politically dead because of their stand on the question at the regular session, seek another opportunity to change their votes.

There is a split in the prohibition ranks and the conference tomorrow bids fair to widen it. The Rev. O. R. Miller, head of the State Civic League, tonight denied the statement of William H. Anderson, Anti-Saloon League chief, that the conference backers were attempting to "embarrass the Governor."

"I don't know of any person connected with any of the organizations in this movement that would want to embarrass the Governor," said Mr. Miller. "He is for prohibition, and has proved since he has been in the Executive Chamber that he is our best friend. But I believe we should act upon this matter immediately. We have the enemy on the rack, and should keep after it. The liquor interests have everything to gain by delay, while we have everything to lose."

OPPOSES CONGRESS'S PLAN.

War Department Should Educate Crippled Soldiers, Says Dr. Lough.

Dr. James E. Lough, Professor of Experimental Psychology and Dean of the Extramural Division, New York University, in a statement issued yesterday, declared that the War Department should take full responsibility for the vocational re-education of disabled soldiers. Dr. Lough whose father, disabled in the civil war, was one of the officers of the National Home for Crippled Volunteer Soldiers, said that the plan suggested in Congress of having the Federal Board for Vocational Education supervise the rehabilitation of crippled war veterans should be abandoned in favor of the War Department's doing the work.

"The Federal Board is an executive board, and is not under any department of government," he says. "It was organized to carry out the development of vocational education in secondary schools throughout the United States. The American Association for Labor Legislation has issued a special bulletin urging vocational education for both war and industrial purposes. General vocational re-education of cripples is most desirable. I see no reason why the Federal Board for Vocational Education should not extend its functions to include the vocational training of industrial cripples. This will require merely an enlargement of its present machinery. The care of the disabled soldier is an entirely different matter. Complete responsibility for him must remain where it belongs—in the War Department. The responsibility can cease only when he ceases to be a soldier, that is when he is discharged and resumes his place in civil life."

URGE FEDERAL AMENDMENT.

Women's Clubs Federation Sends Appeal to the Senate.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs, representing 2,500,000 women in the United States, has adopted a resolution at a convention of the organization being held at Hot Springs, Ark., asking the Senate to act favorably on the Federal suffrage amendment, according to a telegram received at the headquarters of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party from Miss Mary Garrett Hay, who is attending the convention. The resolution, which was adopted unanimously and was sent to Washington, follows:

> The fourteenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs assembled at Hot Springs, Ark., representing 2,500,000 women of the United States, earnestly request your honorable body to take immediate favorable action on the pending resolution to submit the Federal suffrage amendment to the several State Legislatures that democracy in the United States may be complete.

Members of the Brooklyn Woman Suffrage Party will hold a luncheon at the Hotel Imperial next Saturday afternoon for women voters who desire to hear both sides of the prohibition question discussed. Professor Irving Fisher of Yale will take the affirmative and Julius Liebman the negative. Mrs. H. Edward Dreier, Chairman of Brooklyn Borough, will preside.

PRAISES WORK OF NAVIES.

Maj. Beith Says Life of U-Boat Now Averages but Four Trips.

Major Ian Hay Beith, the English author, speaking last night at the Washington Heights Baptist Church, Convent Avenue and 145th Street, said that the destroyers of the British and American navies had developed the work of submarine hunting to such a stage of efficiency that the average life of a submarine now was four trips. He said that American troops whom he had seen in France were the best looking men on the western front, and that those whom he had seen in training camps were worried about only one thing—the danger that the war might be over before they could take a hand in it.

"Germany is willing to spend a million men," he said, "to drive the British into the sea. But if this drive fails—and it will fail—the territory which they have gained at such a terrible cost will all be lost to them. This offensive was foreseen by the army leaders on the Western front from the time that Russia collapsed, and there is no danger that the Germans will be able to attain their objectives."

90% LOYAL, SAYS HOLCOMB

Governor Thinks Rest of Connecticut Pacifist or Disloyal.

DANBURY, Conn., May 5.—Ninety per cent. of the citizens of Connecticut were absolutely loyal, said Governor Marcus H. Holcomb in a speech here today at the unfurling of a service flag in honor of the 650 Danbury men now in service. About 5 per cent., he said, "are pacifists, who ought to be in the Lakeville Institution for imbeciles," and the remaining 5 per cent. were disloyal.

Not a single disloyal person should be permitted to show his head during the war, the Governor went on, and those who were disloyal at heart should be made "to photograph loyal." He did not explain his reference to the percentage he charged with disloyalty.

The unfurling of the service flag at the City Hall followed a parade of the Home Guard, which the Governor reviewed. He was accompanied by General Burpee, Commander of the Home Guard.

FORESEES DEEPER RELIGION

War Will Have Beneficial Effect, President of Middlebury Says.

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., May 5.—Addressing a class of young men and women, of whom the majority plan to enter the service of their country, directly or indirectly, immediately after their graduation, President John M. Thomas of Middlebury College, in his baccalaureate sermon today, expressed the belief that the war would have a beneficial effect on religious life.

"The faith that is born on the battlefield," he said, "dispenses with arguments. It is earnest, unequivocal, aggressive, assertive. It pierces quickly to the great truths of religion.

"The war will lead us to revise somewhat our catalogue of virtues, giving stronger emphasis to some of the elemental qualities of manhood and judging less strictly the omission of some of the more cultivated graces."

JOFFRE WELCOMES OUR LABOR MISSION

Military and Civil Officials of Paris Extend Courtesies to the Visitors.

PRESS COMMENT IS CORDIAL

Refusal to Meet German Labor Leaders Till Victory Is Won Evokes Approval.

PARIS, May 5.—General Dubail, Military Governor of Paris, and his staff received the American labor mission today. He congratulated its members on the fact that the fraternization of France and the United States was not only military, but civil, and expressed the hope that the workers of both countries would remain hand in hand during peace as in war.

Marshal Joffre received the mission at the Military School and welcomed the members with his customary brevity. In a speech, which was most cordial, John P. Frey, a member of the mission, replied to the Marshal, reiterating the resolution of American labor leaders not to meet the representatives of German labor until the German armies had been conquered.

"All classes in America are united. No strike will occur. The whole nation is marching hand in hand with the Government," concluded Mr. Frey.

The mission then proceeded to the Labor Exchange, [headquarters of the French unions] where an official reception was given by the representatives of all sections of the labor forces. Albert Thomas, Pierre Renaudel, M. Jeusaux and M. Guibert formed the Reception Committee. After a visit to the various departments of the exchange, refreshments were served in the lecture room. M. Guibert, on behalf of the Administrative Committee, expressed the hope that tomorrow's meeting at the Labor Confederation headquarters would be profitable to the Socialist parties of both republics. This hope was echoed by James Wilson, a member of the American mission.

After the health of President Wilson had been drunk the mission left for the banquet, which was tendered by the Labor Federation.

While the labor members of the American mission were visiting the Labor Exchange the remainder of the party inspected several factories in Paris and in the suburbs, and then lunched with M. Colliard, Minister of Labor.

After the banquet given by the Labor Federation several speeches were made. James Wilson declared that American Socialists refused to consider treating with the Germans while the enemy armies were in French territory. He expressed a desire to see secret diplomacy suppressed and militarism abolished.

M. Longuet, Socialist Deputy and leader of the minority Socialists in the Chamber of Deputies, expressed his satisfaction in meeting American Socialists. Referring to the question of meeting the German Socialists he said: "We agree regarding the objects of the war. Our only misunderstanding is on the question of the tactics necessary to reach those objects."

Pierre Renaudel said that a similar difference of opinion had existed between the French and English Socialists, but that it had disappeared. He remarked that he found the misunderstanding in the ideas of Socialists of the two republics purely superficial, and added that the "efforts of all are being exerted for a lasting peace, a people's peace and the right of liberty."

The Americans spent yesterday visiting various interesting spots about Paris. At the church which was struck by a shell from the German supercannon on Good Friday, Professor Arthur O. Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins University, a member of the mission, made an address expressing the sympathy of the entire American nation with the victims of German brutality.

The newspapers this morning comment favorably upon the decision of members of the mission to refrain from speaking to or meeting German workingmen, whether Socialist or not, until the German armies have been expelled from France. All the newspapers devote much space to the delegation, many of them printing interviews with the various members. Gustave Hervé, editor of La Victoire, in a long editorial advises the Socialists and laboring men of France to be guided by the example of the Americans in their policy toward the Germans. L'Humanité, Socialist, prints the full text of the speeches of James Wilson, Chairman of the mission, and George L. Barry, but makes no comments, while L'Heure, Socialist, of the Sembat group, and La Verité, of the Labor Party, adopt a cooler attitude, granting but scant space to the doings of the delegates.

PRIZE GOES TO WAR SONG.

"Long, Long Trail" Held Best Expression of Yale's Traditions.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 5.—Yale today awarded the Francis Joseph Vernon prize of $100, offered for the best poem expressive of Yale ideals, life, and associations, to the popular war song, "There's a Long, Long Trail." The award never before went to a popular song.

The authors, Alonzo Elliott and Stoddard King, are Yale graduates of the Classes of 1913 and 1914, respectively. Elliott wrote the music in 1913, a year before the outbreak of the European war, in his room in Connecticut Hall, Yale. He is now engaged in agriculture in Manchester, N. H. King is now doing editorial work on The Spokesman-Review, in Spokane, Wash. He wrote the words in collaboration with Elliott without thought on the part of either that the poem would ever be sung in connection with war. The judges who awarded the prize were Professors Wilbur Cross and Harry Jepson, Yale, and Dr. Colman W. Cutler, Yale, 1886, of New York City.

N. Y. U. TO RAISE $600,000.

Amount Needed to Train Students for Technical War Work.

Forced to equip a new engineering and physics building as the result of the rush of students who desire to qualify for technical war work, New York University opens today a general campaign to raise $600,000. Of this sum $180,000 will be required to build the new annex, and this amount will be raised solely among the undergraduates, $30,000 already having been paid in.

Chancellor Elmer E. Brown, in discussing the campaign, said it was an important war emergency measure, since the fund which the students raised would assist the university in meeting the strain of war, which had been seriously felt by all American institutions of higher education.

Mr. Brown said that the university is now training 100 national army soldiers for technical work in the field, and that on May 15 a contingent of 500 drafted men will arrive and take up the same sort of work. These men are being housed, fed, and instructed by the university on the University Heights campus, which has taken on the aspects of a military camp.

First in Shipyard Volunteers.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 5.—New York leads all others States in the recent enrollment for the United States Shipyard Volunteers. The total number enrolled in New York State was 31,830. Illinois was second with 29,000 and Massachusetts third with 27,119.

OPEN THE CAMPAIGN FOR SALVATION ARMY

Pelham Bay Sailors at Hippodrome Rally Start Week's Intensive Efforts.

WANT $250,000 FOR WAR

Whitman and Gerard Speak, and Anzacs and Pershing's Veterans Help the Movement Along.

A new manoeuvre of modern warfare was revealed at the Hippodrome yesterday afternoon at the meeting which started the week's intensive campaign for the Salvation Army War Fund. According to the new tactics, the army is lined up with all the sky tenors on the left wing and the basses holding down the right, with baritones and tenors of the mild variety connecting them up in the center. At least that is what happens to an army when it is managed by First Class Musician Robert Fisher, who put several hundred sailors from Pelham Bay Park through a battle royal of song that divided popular interest with what Governor Whitman and ex-Ambassador Gerard had to say about the war. Lieutenant Cornwell and Ensign Denihan commanded the sailors while they were manoeuvring and drilling on the stage, but when it came to the heavy work of "Sweet Adeline" and the new version of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," which tells why "they won't need a Kaiser any more," Musician Fisher was the ranking officer, and displayed his army's qualities in a highly strategic manner.

The sailors from Pelham Bay were not the only military attraction. There were a group of Anzacs, and some of Pershing's veterans, and a band and a detachment of doughboys from a regular infantry regiment. Not to mention the Salvation Army, whose service at the front and exploits under fire were told in personal testimony by some of the American troops who had seen them.

The Salvation Army hopes to raise $250,000 in New York City this week for its work among enlisted men at home and overseas, but principally overseas. There was no call for money at yesterday's meeting, however; only a recital of the things for which money is needed and the work the Salvation Army is doing with the funds which it has now. At the head of the Salvation Army forces at the Hippodrome yesterday was Colonel W. A. McIntyre, commander in New York and New Jersey, whose two daughters won notable praise by their heroism under fire at Seicheprey, and the work that the army is doing for the comfort of the soldiers was a very large feature of the stories told by the men who are back on leave from Pershing's army.

George Gordon Battle, general Chairman of the War Work Committee of the Salvation Army, presided at yesterday's meeting. He and the speakers, however, had to hitch their chairs off to one corner of the stage for a considerable time while the soldiers and sailors drilled and sang, with the Anzacs and a group of twenty khaki-clad Salvation Army girls who are sailing soon to do war work in France at the back of the stage. In between times there was music by the National Staff Band of the Salvation Army, the infantry band, and a naval bugle corps, and Constance Balfour of the Covent Garden Opera sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"We haven't felt the war as yet on this side," said Mr. Gerard. "Germany has had to find many food substitutes, but all we have had to do is to substitute Graham flour for wheat. But one thing we can find no substitute for, and that is the Salvation Army. There seems to be no other charitable organization in the world that can get so close to the heart of suffering and need."

Mr. Gerard spoke optimistically of the prospects to be expected from putting Charles M. Schwab and John D. Ryan in charge of shipbuilding and aircraft production, and said that nothing could destroy America's determination to carry the war through to a finish.

Commander Evangeline Booth described the work of the Salvation Army in Belgium, and behind the American lines since this country entered the war.

Sergeant Bright and Private Yarborough, two men who had seen fighting under Pershing, told about the Salvation Army and how it was always prepared to provide comforts for the soldiers even under the most difficult circumstances. Private Yarborough was especially appreciative of the fact that the Salvation Army provided pie, which was a luxury unknown to French cuisine. Colonel McIntyre closed the meeting with an appeal for workers to help in the war fund campaign.

CONCRETE SHIP HAS TRIAL.

The Faith Passes Successful Test in Pacific Waters.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—The 7,900-ton steamer Faith, the largest concrete ship in the world, built by the San Francisco Shipbuilding Company, had a successful trial trip here today, averaging more than eleven knots an hour in its four trips over the official trial course.

The Faith's engines were installed in forty-four days, it being a local record. The success of the trip will result in the construction of three more concrete boats, each larger than the Faith, at Redwood City by the same company.

ARRESTED FOR SNAPSHOTS.

Two Young Men Had Photographed Army Trucks in Newark.

Two young men, who said they were on a sightseeing trip, were arrested on the arrival of a trolley car from Newark in Jersey City yesterday and locked up, charged with having made photographs of Government property. They said they were Eric Schuman, a clerk from Roller, Mo., and George Roades, who came from the same town before he went to Washington to be a clerk in the Post Office Department.

The prisoners said they visited New York to see the sights and it had occurred to Schuman to visit Newark, where his grandmother came from. After taking photographs of interesting sights in New York they went to Newark. It was while they were returning that Joseph Burke of 23 Cherry Street, Newark, saw the young men taking snap shots from the trolley car of some 200 army trucks stored near the Federal Ship Yards on the Meadows. At Jersey City he had them arrested.

Women, Hurled from Auto, Drown.

WINCHESTER, N. H., May 5.—Miss May Blanc and Miss Bessie Eddy, waitresses at a hotel in Northfield, Mass., were hurled from an automobile into the Ashuelot River here today and drowned after a collision with another car. Four other occupants of the car, which was driven by Harry Reed of Northfield, escaped without serious injuries. None of the persons riding in the other automobile, driven by Harry Mosher of Keene, was hurt.

CONDEMNS NONWAR FUNDS.

Patriotic Societies Committee Protests at Appeals for Money.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The National Committee of Patriotic Societies, of which William Mather Lewis is secretary, today issued a protest against the action of various organizations throughout the United States which are alleged to be taking advantage of the present situation to raise special funds for purposes in no way connected with the war. The protest, made through the committee's Executive Board, says:

"The matter was brought forcibly to the attention of the board by the remark of a church official, who announced that his denomination was to make a drive for the biggest amount it had ever raised because at a time when the people were getting the habit of giving generously the raising of a great sum of money would be easier than in normal times.

"There is just one matter of importance to the American people today, and that is the winning of the war. Any organization, religious, philanthropic, social, or business, which diverts the interest and financial support of the people from that great cause is aiding Germany. The Government has urged municipalities to cut their budgets to the bone and make only the most necessary repairs during the course of the war. Other organizations should follow the same course.

"Necessary religious, philanthropic, social, and business enterprises should be kept up to their normal efficiency, but expansion should be postponed. The American people will be called on to give repeatedly and generously to necessary war enterprises until the conflict is over. Appeals for other causes will mean a diffusion of effort and weakening of purpose.

"Only those organizations which can show a 100 per cent. record of loyalty at the end of the war will merit or receive the support of that great body of returned soldiers who are to be the most influential factor in American life for many years to come."

PROTECTION FOR SHAD.

New Hudson River Net Rules to Facilitate Spawning.

ALBANY, May 5.—All shad nets in the Hudson River must be taken up hereafter between sundown on Friday and sunrise on Monday, in accordance with an order issued yesterday by Conservation Commissioner George D. Pratt, for the purpose of giving the fast diminishing shad more opportunity to run up the Hudson River for spawning.

The order states that "during the shad season, from March 15 to June 15, both dates inclusive, no nets, excepting fyke nets and minnow nets used for taking bait, shall be set, placed, drawn, or allowed to remain in the waters of the Hudson River from below the dam at Troy, between sunset on Friday and sunrise on the following Monday."

In addition to this order granting the shad a "safe conduct" each week-end, the Conservation Commission is regulating the netting privileges during the rest of the week. Hereafter, all persons who wish to catch shad in any part of the Hudson River must provide themselves with a license, issued by the commission.

Statistics show an alarming decrease in the quantity of shad taken during recent years in the Hudson River north of Verplanck's Point, which is the spawning ground of the fish. In 1913 the catch was 87,115 pounds; in 1914, 60,072 pounds; in 1915, 34,209 pounds, and in 1916, 25,206 pounds. Although the official catch for 1917 has not yet been reported, the Conservation Commission was unable to collect sufficient spawn to supply even one hatchery at Linlithgo.

WILL DESTROY ACID FUMES.

U. S. Army to Install Devices in Newark Meadows.

Devices to do away with the fumes from the picric acid plants on the Newark Meadows are being installed under the direction of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army. Officials of the Butterworth-Judson Corporation, one of the biggest chemical plants in the country, were indicted and convicted in Hudson County recently for maintaining a nuisance. The Foundation Company, whose shipyards are opposite the chemical plant, was the principal complainant.

Colonel Samuel McRoberts of the procuring division of the Ordnance Department will arrive in Newark tomorrow to supervise the work of erecting the third of three huge towers which will contain the mechanical appliances to do away with the fumes and at the same time reclaim valuable material that formerly went to waste. At the suggestion of Colonel McRoberts and officials of the Butterworth-Judson Corporation the work of erecting the towers will be completed by the Foundation Company.

BROKER HANGS HIMSELF.

Insurance Man, Ill and Despondent, a Suicide in His Apartment.

Edward E. Schubert, an insurance broker, with offices at 505 Fifth Avenue and 95 William Street, committed suicide yesterday in his apartment at 2,128 Broadway. He had been ill for several weeks, and the police believe that he was dejected because of his illness and fretting about the war.

He had an appointment with Dr. G. Schlegel of 151 West Ninety-first Street, and when the patient failed to come Dr. Schlegel telephoned to the apartment. A maid found Schubert had committed suicide by hanging himself. Schubert was a member of the New York Athletic Club.

Miss Wyman's Wedding Plans.

Miss Rosamonde Wyman, a daughter of the late Edward Frothingham Wyman, whose marriage to Ensign Royal Winter Wetherald of the U. S. N. R. Flying Corps, will take place on Saturday afternoon in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church, will have Mrs. Edward E. Wyman as her matron of honor, and the other attendants will be the Misses Ruth Atwater, Mildred Sutton, and little Miss Suzann and Master J. Walter Spaulding, 2d, Miss Wyman's niece and nephew. Phillips Wyman and Cadet Edward E. Wyman, brothers of the bride, William P. Dickson and Ensign William Blair Mitchell are to be the ushers, and Lieutenant Cary Waldrat, 105th Infantry, will be the best man. The reception will be held at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Wyman, 152 West Fifty-eighth Street. Miss Sutton, who is to be a bridesmaid, will herself be a bride on June 8, when she will marry Miss Wyman's brother, Phillips Wyman, at Greystone-on-the-Hudson.

ST. VINCENT FERRER CHURCH DEDICATED

Cardinal Farley and Apostolic Delegate Participate in Impressive Service.

DOMINICAN RITE OBSERVED

Beautiful Gothic Edifice Will Cost $1,500,000 When Completed—Bishop Hayes Preaches.

Yesterday was notable for the parishioners of the Dominican Church of St. Vincent Ferrer, for it witnessed the solemn dedication of their beautiful new Gothic church at Lexington Avenue and Sixty-sixth Street, which, when completed, will have cost $1,500,000. The dedicatory ceremonies were so timed as to take place on the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the parish and the 701st anniversary of the Dominican Order.

High church dignitaries, members of other religious orders, and secular clergy paid tribute, by their attendance, to the work being done in New York by the Dominicans. Cardinal Farley, attended by many priests, blessed the new church, and the Most Rev. John Bonzano, the Apostolic Delegate to the United States, sang a solemn pontifical mass. The Apostolic Delegate, who wore cloth-of-gold vestments, was assisted by secular priests and the Provincials of the Franciscan and Jesuit Orders. The mass and other ceremonies were conformed to the ancient rite of the Dominican Order, the mediaeval character of the new edifice lending itself well to the solemn beauties of the old ceremonies.

A trained chorus of seventy choirboys and thirty men soloists from the Metropolitan Opera Company sang the music of the mass, accompanied by forty-five musicians from the New York Symphony Orchestra. The Rev. Joseph H. Dineen was Master of Ceremonies. The Right Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, preached, and made an eloquent plea for the need of stronger faith and piety in the world.

America Needs More Piety.

"Democracy, the great principle for which America is fighting," Bishop Hayes said, "will not be made eternal if based on the word of Princes, Presidents, or Kings, action of Legislatures, or treaties, which are things material. Americans in their mad rush for money today are neglecting things spiritual for things material. At this pace America cannot survive. What is needed in America today is a stronger faith and piety; we need more obedience and loyalty to the law of God.

"Something is wanted in the world today to insure democracy, and that something is spiritual. Democracy is the love of God and our neighbor, and in order to come to a world democracy we must return to the ideals of the mediaeval days, when the Holy See was the supreme judge and the arbiter of nations.

"The successor to the chair of Peter must be heard and will be heard before the world can realize greater spiritual ideals. Democracy can only be based on those two great commandments, 'Love they neighbor and love they God.' Treaties, which are the material bonds between nations, have proved 'scraps of paper.' Spiritual bonds are wanted between the nations of the world today."

In concluding, Bishop Hayes invoked a blessing upon the American soldiers, sailors, and chaplains. The Very Rev. J. R. Heffernan, O. P., Prior of St. Vincent Ferrer's, who preceded the Bishop to the pulpit, congratulated the parishioners and warmly thanked the church dignitaries for their attendance.

In the evening solemn pontifical compline was celebrated by Archbishop Bonzano, and a sermon was preached by the Right Rev. Mgr. John P. Chidwick. Services will be held every day this week and next Sunday in continuation of the dedicatory celebration.

Much of the wealth of 700 years' tradition has been incorporated into the new church, and every provision has been made for carrying out the ceremonial which distinguishes the Dominican rite from that of the Roman. The church is replete with symbolism primarily relating to the Dominican Order. It is probably the first Catholic church in the United States to have the Holy Rood carved in stone on the outside, and it was said yesterday to be the only church in the country fitted throughout with acoustic tiling. As a result the preacher's voice is heard distinctly in every corner of the edifice, while the music is diffused in such a way as to appear to come from no one particular point.

The crowning feature of the exterior of the church, which is now lacking, owing to the absence of the necessary funds, will be the great fleche, or narrow tower, which, when erected, will be ten feet higher than the one on the cathedral at Amiens.

$3,142,263 FOR EDUCATION.

General Education Board Continues Its Work in Fourteen States.

The General Education Board, founded by John D. Rockefeller, "to promote education within the United States," without distinction of race, sex, or creed, will shortly issue its complete annual report for the fiscal year 1916-17.

The appropriations for the year 1916-17 totaled $3,142,263, the largest item of which was $1,350,000 for medical education. Since its founding the board has appropriated to colleges and universities alone the total of $13,620,760, while these institutions themselves have raised simultaneously $50,133,368. The board's gifts have assisted in increasing the resources of 112 colleges and universities, situated in practically every State in the Union. Since its organization in 1902, the General Education Board has appropriated for all purposes $21,357,408.

The most important action of the board in the last year dealt with the establishment of the medical department of the University of Chicago. The General Education Board and the Rockefeller Foundation together contributed $2,000,000 toward a total of $5,300,000 which was needed to bring together in a single university medical school institutions and resources valued at almost $15,000,000.

The board has continued its appropriations to departments of education in fourteen States to enable these departments to maintain State agents to develop sentiment in favor of improved rural schools, and to counsel with school executives and authorities as to the best means of educational betterment.

ADD YEAR TO CURRICULUM.

Columbia's Lengthened Medical Course to Begin in September.

It was announced yesterday at Columbia University that a resolution presented by the Faculty of Medicine had been adopted, and that a fifth clinical year had been added to the curriculum. The plan for the additional year was outlined in a special report of a committee of the Faculty of Medicine, and will be made effective for the class entering September, 1918.

In urging the addition of a fifth year to the medical curriculum Dean Samuel W. Lambert said: "Columbia believes that such a year in a hospital for all candidates for licensure, under proper college discipline is needed to round out the undergraduate training. This can be done by developing the system of clinical clerks of the present four-year curriculum into a full year's course by easing up on the pressure of the present third year. The result will be both needed redistribution of the clinical subjects and a fulfillment of the legal requirement of a hospital interne year for all graduates."

MADDIN SUMMERS DIES SUDDENLY IN MOSCOW

Head of American Consulate in Bolshevist Capital Collapsed from Overwork.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The death of Maddin Summers, United States Consul General at Moscow, was announced today in a cable message to the State Department. Mr. Summers collapsed under the strain of long months of overwork, the message said, and was ill but one day.

As head of the American Consulate General at the Bolshevist capital, Mr. Summers had probably the most extraordinary and most exacting task of any man in the Consular service. He directed the activities of a great organization of Consular officers and agents extending throughout Eastern Russia, all the way to Vladivostok, and even before the Bolshevist Government moved to Moscow the work of the office there was vast.

Officials of the State Department spoke tonight of Mr. Summers in terms of almost unmeasured praise. They said few men had given such important service to the country, and that he should be regarded as a war hero as truly as though he had lost his life in the trenches. Charles R. Crane, who as a member of the American Mission to Russia after the overthrow of the Czar spent several months at Moscow, said Mr. Summers not only worked night and day, but handled in masterful fashion a responsibility as great as that of any Ambassador.

A native of Nashville, Tenn., Mr. Summers was 41 years old. He had been in the service since 1899, when after attending Vanderbilt and Columbian Universities, he was appointed Consular Clerk. Soon afterward he went to Barcelona, Spain, as Vice and Deputy Consul General, and during the years that followed he served at Madrid, at Belgrade, Serbia, and at various Latin-American cities. In August, 1916, he was recalled to Washington from Sao Paulo, Brazil, to act as Secretary of the Pan American Scientific Congress. Then he was detailed to the Latin-American Division of the State Department until April, 1917, when he went to Moscow.

In Spain Mr. Summers married a Russian woman of a prominent Moscow family, and at Belgrade he acquired much knowledge of value to him in his Russian post.

HOME FOR JEWISH ORPHANS.

Delegates at New Building Pledge Support to Government.

The annual convention of the delegates of the Hebrew Free Burial Association and the Israel Orphan Asylum was held in the annex of the joint institutions at 274 Second Street yesterday. The following officers were elected: Gustave Hartman, President; Jonan Schimel, First Vice President; Morris Bruener, Second Vice President; Morris Schoenberg, Third Vice President; Dr. Harry Lederkramer, Fourth Vice President; Mindel Schapiro, Treasurer, and David Baum, Recording Secretary.

Mr. Hartman in his annual message and the speakers who represented 1,000 delegates of the various Hebrew societies in affiliation with the allied charities expressed the satisfaction of the members at the completion of the new building in Second Street which is intended to quarter Jewish orphans. Of the twenty young charges now in the institution one is a war orphan of Russian parentage. The speakers included Sol Schlinsky, Grand Master of the Independent Order of B'rith Abraham; the Rev. Dr. Samuel Buchler, and Louis S. Breumm. The following resolution was adopted:

"In this struggle for democracy and humanity we, members of the Israel Orphan Asylum, Jews of America, grateful for the country and opportunity afforded us under our glorious American flag and its free institutions, stand ready to do all in our power with our fortunes and very lives in behalf of our flag and our country, and to this end we pledge our whole-souled support to the President and the Government of the United States. The doors of the Israel Orphan Asylum shall always be held open for the reception of the little children whose fathers have made the supreme sacrifice on the altar of liberty and democracy."

A copy of the resolutions was sent to President Wilson. The new building is five stories high, and was erected at a cost of $150,000. It contains a roof garden, shower baths, an isolation ward, a hospital ward, and other modern conveniences for the reception of orphan children from 1 to 5 years. Miss Jennie G. Fisher will be Superintendent.

JEWS IN BALTIMORE DRIVE.

Prominent New Yorkers Help to Launch Relief Campaign.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 5.—Representative Jews of New York and other cities assisted Baltimore Jews tonight in launching a drive to raise Baltimore's quota of $350,000 in a general war relief fund of $15,000,000. A dinner at the Belvedere was followed by addresses and subscriptions amounting to many thousands of dollars.

The speakers included Jacob Schiff of New York, Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, Louis Marshall, Chairman of the National Jewish Relief Committee, and Jacob Billikoff, Secretary to the Committee on Investigation on Conditions Abroad. Orthodox and reform Jews are united in the movement which will continue here throughout the week, and wind up by a big mass meeting next Sunday.

102 DEATHS IN AIR CAMPS.

BOWMAN ADDS TWO HOTELS TO HOLDINGS

Control of the Belmont and Murray Hill Obtained from B. L. M. Bates.

GRAND CENTRAL ENCIRCLED

Passengers Leaving in Any Direction Must First See Hotel of Biltmore's Manager.

Six of the largest hotels in this city were united yesterday under the control of John McE. Bowman of the Hotel Biltmore, as the result of a deal giving him the control of the Hotel Belmont and the Murray Hill Hotel. The transaction, which has been under consideration for five years, was completed late Saturday night, between Mr. Bowman and Benjamin L. M. Bates, owner of the Hotel Belmont and the Murray Hill Hotel, it was announced yesterday by Mr. Bowman. The latter is now the head of one of the largest hotel companies in the world, surpassing in his holdings those of T. Coleman du Pont, the recent purchaser of the Waldorf-Astoria.

The hotels under the control of Mr. Bowman are the Biltmore, the Manhattan, the Belmont, the new Hotel Commodore, at Lexington Avenue and Forty-second Street; the Murray Hill, and the Ansonia. A chain of hotels has thus been formed surrounding the Grand Central Terminal, with which three of the hotels are connected by underground passages. In whatever way a traveler turns from the Terminal the first hotel he sees will be under the control of Mr. Bowman.

As a result of the acquisition of the Waldorf-Astoria by T. Coleman du Pont last February, and the transaction of Mr. Bowman, nearly all the large hotels in the city are under control of two rival hotel corporations. A comparison of the hotels in regard to approximate accommodations follows:

MR. BOWMAN.	Rooms.	MR. DU PONT.	Rooms.
Commodore	2,000	McAlpin	2,000
Biltmore	1,000	Waldorf-Astoria	1,300
Belmont	1,000	Claridge	600
Manhattan	1,000	du Pont, Wilmington, Del.	500
Murray Hill	600	Taft, New Haven, Conn.	500
Ansonia	1,500
Total	7,700	Total	4,900

No estimate of the sum involved in the transaction could be obtained from either Mr. Bowman or Mr. Bates, nor could any details of the arrangements of the new company be learned. It was said, however, that Mr. Bates would not retire from active work, but would become a member of the new company. Another person interested in the transaction is James Woods, Commissioner of Police in San Francisco, and managing director of the Hotel St. Francis there. It was said that Mr. Woods, who was assistant manager of the Waldorf-Astoria thirteen years ago, would resign from his position as Commissioner and sever his connections with the St. Francis to take charge of the Belmont and the Murray Hill.

Charles E. Gehring, head of the Hotel Review, who was the negotiator of the deal between Mr. Bowman and Mr. Bates, said yesterday: "The union of the Bates and Bowman hotel interests will mean that any one can walk from the train into his hotel without going on the street and will save the expense of a cab and of checking his baggage. Moreover, persons who have hitherto been turned away from one of the hotels because of lack of accommodations will now be able to obtain rooms in another hotel under the same management."

The Commodore when completed will have cost more than $15,000,000; the Belmont is said to have cost $7,000,000, the Biltmore, $5,500,000, and the Murray Hill was sold in 1910 to Mr. Bates for more than $1,700,000. When the Commodore is completed in January next, the six hotels will be able to accommodate more than 2,000,000 persons a year, and a staff of 7,000 employes will be maintained. At present the Hotel Biltmore alone is said to pay $1,000,000 in salaries.

In addition to hotels in this city, Mr. Bowman is the head of a large hotel corporation which was constructing three hotels on the boardwalk in Atlantic City until work was stopped for the period of the war. Mr. Bowman entered the hotel business as the protégé of the late Gustave Baumann, who was proprietor of the Holland House. When Mr. Baumann took charge of the Biltmore, Mr. Bowman was appointed Vice President of the Biltmore company. Upon the death of Mr. Baumann, Mr. Bowman succeeded him as President of the Biltmore company. Mr. Bowman later acquired the Manhattan and the Ansonia. He was appointed by Herbert Hoover to serve on the Food Administration Board as head of the Hotel, Restaurant, Dining Car, and Steamship Division of the United States Food Administration Board. Mr. Bowman, who is under 40 years old, was born in Toronto, Canada.

MRS. BELMONT TELLS OF WAR

She Gives High Praise to America's Young Fighters.

Mrs. August Belmont was the speaker last evening at the weekly forum of the Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street. The meeting was directed by the rector, Rev. Percy Stickney Grant. Mrs. Belmont's topic was "Impressions of the War Zone," and having recently returned from the western front her pictures of conditions affecting Americans in the service and Americans behind them at home aroused great interest in her auditors.

Among her most vital memories, she said, which indicated the characteristics of the three Western Allies whom she had studied, were the strong hand-clasp of the British, the warm hand-clasp of the French, and the eager hand-clasp of the Americans. The delight evinced by the Yankee boys at a chance to talk with any one from "back home" was inspiring, but pathetic.

The memory of the clear-eyed, soldierly, confident sterling young men whom she saw in the American forces, the flower of modern American chivalry with one desire, convinced her that they will succeed in their purpose, and that they will keep the star-spangled banner waving in a world made safe for liberty and decency and happiness. At the conclusion of her address a questionnaire was held, and she answered several earnest questions from the audience.

RAIDS ARE TO BE KEPT UP.

District Attorney Swann Says Licenses May Be Canceled.

District Attorney Swann continued his raids in co-operation with the police early yesterday morning on a number of resorts in various parts of the city which were open after 1 A. M. About 100 persons were questioned, and nearly all released on their promise to appear at the District Attorney's office today. Judge Swann said last night that action would be taken to cancel the licenses of several resorts alleged to be selling liquor after closing time. A number of women who were in the company of soldiers were arrested.

The raids were made without the co-operation of army officers, which had been expected. It was stated that the investigation which is being made by army men will be carried out secretly and that the co-operation of the District Attorney and police will be asked after evidence has been gathered against resorts where liquor is sold to men in uniform. Judge Swann said last night that the early Sunday morning raids, which have occurred now on five Sundays in succession, will be continued indefinitely and that they may be varied by raids on other days.

Marriage and death notices, intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

BISHOP HAMILTON DIES.

Head of Methodist Diocese in Pittsburgh Victim of Pneumonia.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, May 5.—Bishop Franklin Elmer Ellsworth Hamilton, head of the Methodist Episcopal Diocese of Pittsburgh since 1916, died at the Hotel Rittenhouse here today from pneumonia. He was in his fifty-third year. Before his appointment here as resident bishop, he was Chancellor of the American University at Washington, a position now held by his brother, Bishop John William Hamilton.

Bishop Hamilton was born at Pleasant Valley, Ohio, and was educated at the Boston Latin School and at Harvard, from which he was graduated in 1887. He was ordained upon graduation from Boston University in 1892, and held pastorates in Boston, East Boston, and Newtonville, Mass.

Bishop Hamilton had been President of the Epworth League of New England and later Vice President of the Epworth League of the World. He was a delegate to the General Conference at Baltimore in 1908 and a member of the Ecumenical Conference in 1911, and the General Conference at Minneapolis in 1912. He was President of the Old South Boston Historical Society, and in 1885 received the Old South prize.

Dr. Isaac Adler Dead.

Dr. Isaac Adler, retired physician and brother of Dr. Felix Adler, head of the Ethical Culture Society of New York, died on Saturday at his home, 401 West End Avenue, in his seventieth year. He was born in Alvsy, Germany, and came to this country with other members of the Adler family in 1857. He was graduated from Columbia University with the class of 1868 and, returning to Europe, studied medicine at the universities of Heidelberg, Vienna, Prague and Berlin. Dr. Adler had been Professor of Clinical Pathology at the New York Polyclinic Medical School and later was consulting physician of the Montefiore Home.

Rev. Dr. John Montieth.

The Rev. Dr. John Montieth, educator, naturalist and author, died on Saturday at his home, 117 Scotland Road, South Orange, N. J. in his eighty-sixth year. Dr. Montieth was graduated from Hudson College, Ohio, and Yale University in 1856, having as classmates Chauncey M. Depew and the late United States Supreme Court Justices Henry Billings Brown and David Brewer. Dr. Montieth retired from the ministry in the late sixties to become Superintendent of Schools in Missouri. He was the author of "Living Creatures," "Familiar Animals," and "Useful Animals."

Laurence Dunham, Banker, Dies.

Laurence Dunham, a retired banker of this city, and a grandson of Edward Wood Dunham, first President of the Corn Exchange Bank, died yesterday at his home on the Post Road, Scarsdale, in his sixty-second year. Mr. Dunham was associated with the Corn Exchange Bank for many years. He was a member of the New York Yacht Club and had been Commander of the New Rochelle Yacht Club. He is survived by his wife and two children.

Obituary Notes.

CHARLES W. STEWART, a grocer for many years at 847 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, is dead at his home in that borough.

DAVID L. GOOGE, 85 years old, standard bearer of the David L. Googe Society of Brooklyn, died on Saturday at his home, 70 Maujer Street, Brooklyn.

Mrs. MARY LAUTENBERGER, 63 years old, widow of Frederick Lautenberger, for many years a tailor at College Point, L. I., died yesterday at St. Luke's Hospital, Brooklyn.

Mrs. FRANCES L. VAN ETTEN, wife of Edgar Van Etten, former Vice President of the Boston & Albany Railroad and once Superintendent of the New York Central Lines, died yesterday at the Ossining Hospital, of uraemic poisoning.

Mrs. ANNE LESTER HURLEY, widow of Cornelius Hurley and mother of Lieutenant Robert Hurley, who is stationed at Camp Upton, died on Thursday at her home, 562 West 148th Street. Another son, James F. Hurley, is connected with the Board of Education.

Mrs. ELLEN BIGELOW HOUGHTON, widow of Amory Houghton, who was President of the Corning Glass Works at Corning, N. Y., died at her home in that place yesterday. Mrs. Houghton was a member of an old New England family. She was in her seventy-ninth year.

CHARLES A. JUDGE, 50 years old, an inspector attached to the Bureau of Buildings and long a member of Tammany Hall, died on Friday at his home, 1,528 Walnut Street, Richmond Hill. He was a brother of the Rev. Henry A. Judge, S. J., Chaplain of the City Home on Blackwell's Island.

THOMAS LINCOLN MANSON, head of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Thomas Lincoln Manson & Co., with offices at 100 Broadway, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 32 East Fiftieth Street, in his sixty-ninth year. Mr. Manson was born in Boston and came to this city forty years ago. He is survived by two sons and a daughter. They are Vance S. Manson, Thomas L. Manson, Jr., both of whom are in Europe, and Mrs. Killaan Van Rensselaer.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

War's Tightening Grip on Industry

So far as we can measure a week's changes in the war situation there is ground for added confidence in the ability of the British and French troops, with no small help from the rapidly increasing numbers of Americans now mingling with them, to withstand even greater pressure than the enemy has been able to bring against the heroic line reaching down across Flanders and Picardy. It is easier for us to trust serenely in the strength of the defenders with 3,000 miles of ocean between Germany and America than for the British and French, with the roar of guns in their ears. For that reason it is possible to understand the division of attention in this country between the immediate war crisis itself and the problems raised by the conflict between normal and war business. In Great Britain and France there was little hesitation before the adoption of extreme measures for the subjugation of all non-essential endeavors to the life and death struggle to maintain an unbroken barrier against the advancing hordes. The United States has accepted reluctantly measures for speeding up the war machine much less severe in their scope than those which our Allies adopted almost immediately after the declaration of war. The manufacture of automobiles other than those required for the movement of troops and supplies furnishes an instance. In Italy, in France, and in Great Britain not only the production of new pleasure cars but the general use of those already on the roads was ended when it was discovered that there was an impending shortage of steel, rubber, mechanics, and petrol. For some months after the United States entered the war the manufacture of such cars went on at an increased rate. Then came the demand for the diversion of part of the factory space to the production of airplane parts, munitions, and trucks. That automatically checked the output of passenger cars to such an extent that when the manufacturers came to an agreement to limit production to 70 per cent. the reduction was nothing more than recognition of a condition already achieved. Now comes the suggestion that the new schedules be reduced to 25 per cent. of what would have constituted a year's output. While that has been under debate the Government has quietly compelled the steel mills to stop deliveries elsewhere than through the channels indicated by the War Industries Board, which threatens to nullify the force of another voluntary contribution.

The commandeering of steel, of wool, of many industrial plants and the railroads has shown the trend toward the substitution of rigid Federal control over consumption for efforts to bring about a voluntary and gradual decrease in the use of both essentials and non-essentials. It was an inevitable development from the pressure which has been brought to bear upon the War Department for more speed in getting men and munitions to the relief of the Allies. The process of educating people to step aside for the war machine proved too slow for the crisis. Such violent interference with the normal ways of trade has multiplied the difficulties which will attend the after-war adjustments, but the supreme effort demanded in the name of civilization would not admit of delay. So it is that while domestic business has been hampered, living costs advanced, and freedom of action restricted, the United States has been able to send a fully equipped army abroad and has made wonderful progress in overcoming the faults which marked the early administration of war preparations.

An interesting contribution to the discussion over the extent to which the Government is justified in fixing prices and commandeering output was made by the President of the Guaranty Trust Company before the Association of Cotton Manufacturers. Mr. Sabin argues for as little Governmental interference and regulation as the exigencies of the crisis permit. He holds that for more than a decade the attitude of the Government toward business has been that business is something merely to be regulated and harnessed. There has been little effort on the part of the Government to stimulate and foster business; it has been destructive and not constructive, he thinks, and in the light of the present-day difficulties following the interruption of the natural workings of economic law he wonders if the policy of price regulation does not do more harm than good. Just as soon as the price of one commodity is established it becomes imperative that prices of many other commodities should also be fixed. There is no end to the vicious circle. Mr. Sabin suggests that it might be better to allow prices to take their course and to have the Government apply a tax on excess profits arising during the period of the war as a counter-restraint in the public interest. But the action at Washington looking to the control of prices and the distribution of output resulted from the discovery that advances were not taking place as an orderly increase due to greater demand, but to realize, in many cases, the utmost profit that might be made out of the nation's necessities. Where many commodities might be selling today had not the Government fixed arbitrary prices on a basis of fair profits to the producers, it is easy to guess with the course of cotton quotations as a guide.

The stock market has felt the effect of the demand upon the country's resources made by the Third Liberty Loan, but it has gained ground at the same time. With almost no speculative dealings of consequence prices have withstood successive shocks as news of German gains increased the tension in military circles, and the first intimation of a turn in the tide of battle brought a response in an upward spurt. The significant factor in this market, as professional operators view it, is the extent to which the floating supply of stocks has been reduced. Investment buying seldom shows any influence on a single market session, but when continued steadily month after month, as has been the case for several months past, it eliminates the weak spots and creates a technical position admirably designed to withstand bad news. But most people in the financial district are expecting good news.

HAILS UNITY OF BANKERS.

E. J. Gallien Says the War Has Brought Permanent Harmony.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 5.—One of the biggest results of the war is the solidification of the banking interests of the country through their mutual interest in the financial demands of the Government for the prosecution of the world conflict, according to E. J. Gallien of Albany, Secretary of the New York State Bankers Association, which will hold its annual convention at the Traymore June 20 and 21.

"The war has brought the country's bankers together as nothing else could possibly have done," said Mr. Gallien. "It has eliminated jealousy and fear of competition. The broadening effects of this close association and co-operative spirit will be of lasting benefit and will work harmony and progress in the battle of peace which will follow victory in the war.

"One of the greatest new forces in finance is the rapid growth of the use of trade acceptances by business corporations and firms, making what was formerly a large volume of book accounts available as live paper, discountable at a preferred rate by the holding banks with the Federal Reserve Banks.

"Another matter of considerable moment to New York State bankers particularly is the power granted at the last session of the Legislature to savings banks to purchase acceptances. Formerly the savings banks were dependent on the large banks and trust companies for help to get currency in times of stress, and were compelled to sacrifice bonds which they had bought for permanent investment. By availing themselves of this new power, the savings banks, by purchasing acceptances, will have liquid paper which they can sell to the Federal Reserve Bank for currency, and thus relieve the banks and trust companies, on which they formerly depended, from carrying large currency reserves for such possible demands."

GRANT FARE INCREASE.

Peekskill Road May Charge 6 Cents If It Opens Abandoned Line.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., May 5.—The village Trustees have passed a resolution, it was learned today, authorizing the Peekskill Railway Company to increase its fare from 5 to 6 cents, with the stipulation that it reopen the Putnam Railway between Peekskill and Oregon. This road got a separate franchise when the Rev. Dr. Ladd of Oregon organized and built it. Later it was leased by the Peekskill company which abandoned it a month ago because of too keen jitney bus competition. Residents along the line have banded together and agreed to patronize the Putnam line, and the Peekskill company can collect another cent on all lines if it resumes operations to Oregon. Fares which were raised in Peekskill several weeks ago without the village's consent, had to be reduced again as a result of the Court of Appeals decision against traction companies in the State.

CHANGE IN ITALY'S TRADE.

United States Has Opportunity to Free It from Germany's Grip.

The Guaranty Trust Company points out in a review of foreign economic conditions, to be issued today, that the United States has an important opportunity in Italy to help that country break the trade fetters which bound it to Germany and Austria before the war. While Italy has long been one of the best customers in Europe of American producers of raw materials and foodstuffs, the trust company says, the nation received much of its semi-finished and finished products from the Central Powers. The bulk of Italian exports went to Germany and Austria. Italian exchanges with Germany in 1913 totaled $183,872,058; with Austria, $93,424,457; with England, $161,899,440; with France, $96,740,416, and with the United States, $152,041,111.

"To no country engaged in the present war," the review says, "did belligerency mean a greater disorganization of established enterprises and trade channels than to Italy. Whatever the war has cost, Italy's men of affairs feel today that it has been worth while in awakening the country to a realization of what may be done through new methods and new associations to place Italy in the foremost ranks of international traders.

"Italy looks to America as the chief source of supply for those raw materials and partly finished or finished materials which she formerly obtained from Germany and Austria. Coal, iron, lumber, machinery, and railroad and shipbuilding materials will be needed in large quantities. She also hopes to obtain directly from this country many things that formerly found their way to farm and workshop through England and Germany. Cotton she will need in large quantities because of her aim to rebuild the cotton manufacturing business that prior to the war was competing successfully with the English in the Near East."

TELLS OF DELAYS TO CARS.

Shonts Says There Were 4,519 of More Than Five Minutes in March.

Theodore P. Shonts, President of the New York Railways Company, issued the following statement yesterday:

"A compilation we have just made for the month of March shows there were 4,519 delays of five minutes or more to street cars in that period. Of this number 2,590 were due to causes over which the company had no control. Vehicles blocking the tracks caused 1,023 delays to cars.

"Because the use of car tracks by vehicles causes a large number of accidents and at the same time makes it almost impossible to keep cars on their schedule the New York Railways Company is continuing its efforts to secure the co-operation of employers and their drivers and chauffeurs with a view of keeping all vehicular traffic off the street car lines."

SOFT COAL OUTPUT SETS NEW RECORD

11,668,000 Net Tons Produced Throughout the Country in the Week Ended April 27.

CAR SERVICE NOW BETTER

Mines in the West Held Back by Consumers' Failure to Place Their Orders Early.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—A new record for the production of bituminous coal was announced today by the United States Fuel Administration for the week ended April 27. During that week the total production was 11,668,000 net tons, an increase of 5.7 per cent. over the preceding week. The average production per working day was 1,946,000 net tons, as compared with 1,840,000 net tons for the week ended April 20 and 1,680,000 tons during April, 1917.

Encouraged by this record and by reports received from the big coal fields, the Fuel Administration has sent out another appeal to increase production and keep mines running as near capacity as possible during the Summer months.

Consumers are asked again to get in orders for coal as early as possible so that there will be no falling off in production because of the lack of orders. The public has responded well in the East, it was stated, but production in some of the mines in the West has been set back somewhat by lack of orders.

Upon the return of Director General of Railroads McAdoo from his Liberty Loan tour it is expected that the details of the new plan for an equitable distribution of cars to the mines will be settled quickly and other steps taken to increase the car supply at the principal producing centres. It is believed that further records will be established after the new system is in full operation.

"Production for the month of April, 1918," said a statement issued by the Fuel Administration tonight, "is estimated at 46,478,000 net tons, an increase of 10 per cent. over April, 1917. Production for the four months ended with April, 1918, is estimated at 181,992,000 net tons, an increase of over 5,000,000 net tons, or about 3 per cent. over the same months of 1917.

"The week ended April 27 recorded not only the highest rate of production for the last twelve months, but was the third successive week of rising production. Reports to the United States Geological Survey showed a gradual improvement in car service conditions at the mines during the week ended April 20. Loss of production due to car shortage throughout the country was reported as 16.2 per cent., as against 18.1 per cent. in the preceding week. Loss due to labor shortage was 4.8 per cent., as against 3.6 during the preceding week.

"The reports showed an improvement in the demand for coal, due to the co-operation of coal consumers with the Fuel Administration's campaign for the early ordering of coal. The loss of production due to 'no market' in the week ended April 20, was only 1.8 per cent. for the country as a whole, as against 2.8 per cent. in the preceding week.

"The loss due to 'no market,' however, is still large in the States west of the Mississippi River, where Summer production must be maintained if the consumers are to avoid a serious shortage next Winter. The mines in these States have ample capacity to care for the consuming territory allotted them under the zone system of distribution, but the mines must be kept at work at maximum capacity throughout the year in order to provide a proper supply.

"The mines of Kansas and Missouri showed a loss of production of 7.5 per cent. due to lack of demand. Those of Oklahoma and Arkansas showed a falling off of 9.2 per cent. due to the same cause. Iowa mines lost 30.7 per cent. of their production because buyers were not available, the Pacific Coast States showed a loss of 5.8 per cent. due to this cause, and the Rocky Mountain States a loss of 12.3 per cent.

"While all of these figures showed an improvement as compared with previous weeks, the Fuel Administration will make a determined effort to eliminate all loss of production due to lack of market."

REVENUES INCREASE ON DUAL SUBWAYS

Service Board's February Report Shows a Proportionate Drop in Deficit Under January.

NET RISE IN INCOME $7,694

Small Growth in Business Hailed as Presaging Eventual Era of Transit Prosperity.

The report of the business done by the elevated and subway lines operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company in the joint interest of the company and the city shows a slight increase in the business done in February as compared with the January business, and a proportionate decrease in the company and city deficits for the month. While the increase was only $7,694, it was considered a hopeful sign and indicated that in the course of time all deficits would be wiped out and a monthly profit made.

Since the pooling operation began in August, 1913, the total deficits have grown to about $6,000,000, and the increase in net revenues for February is the first indication that an era of great prosperity will begin when the war is over and normal conditions are resumed.

The total gross revenues of the city and company owned lines operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company for February, according to figures prepared by the company, and filed with the Public Service Commission, amounted to $968,616.57, and the total operating expenses were $689,318.87, which left a net operating revenue of $299,297.70. In January the net operating revenue was $291,603. The combined preferential, interest and sinking fund contribution for the company, plus the city's interest and sinking fund charges for February, amount to $547,602.68, which reduced the company and city deficit for the month to $248,504.98.

For purposes of comparison the commission presents these figures, showing the gross revenues for each February since the pooling arrangement began: 1914, $628,514.05; 1915, $610,370.02; 1916, $754,978.88; 1917, $833,001.70. The total operating expenses during the same periods were $430,884.61, $419,211.74; $513,297.32, $560,669.03.

In each of the years the combined city and company deficits for February were: 1914, $124,029.23; 1915, $136,499.94; 1916, $107,754.25; 1917, $225,881.25.

Yearly Mileage Increase 26.38.

In commenting on the business of the company, and the results obtained, the commission says:

"The tremendous increase in cost of labor and material is reflected in the increase in deficit for February, 1918, as against the deficits of previous years. Increase in the mileage of service, some of it leading to sparsely settled outlying districts, with little financial return from operation, is also in part responsible. In February, 1918, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company operated 206.71 miles of rapid transit tracks as against 180.33 miles in February, 1917. The car miles increased from 2,902,387 to 3,000,891.

"In February, 1917, the lines carried 16,206,078 passengers, and increased in the same month of the present year to about 18,768,527. The revenue per car mile was 28.6 in February, 1917, and in February, 1918, it increased to 31.2. But this increase in receipts was met by a corresponding increase in operating expenses per car mile from 19.2 to 21.5 cents, and the total expenses increased to 17.3 cents."

The commission points out that, while there has been a large increase per car mile and in revenue, the operating expenses have grown so as to make these increases unavailable. The figures presented here were submitted by the company and have not been accepted by the commission as accurate.

WIDER LISTING OF TRADE.

Government Classification Extended for War Purposes.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The business public was asked today by the Department of Commerce to assist in carrying out a radical revision and extension of the Government's foreign trade statistical classification which has been undertaken by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Immediate suggestions are wanted as to new classes of goods that ought to be shown in the statistics or new subdivisions of the present classes.

The main object of the revision is the furnishing of more detailed and accurate information for the war boards engaged in licensing imports and exports, conserving tonnage, foodstuffs, and raw materials. It is Secretary Redfield's idea, however, that the statistics should be of the largest permanent value to the nation's foreign trade after the war, which is why the views of business men generally are being sought to indicate the lines on which the revision should be carried out.

"In making suggestions for the export classification," the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce announces, "the business men should bear in mind that the statistics are based on the description of merchandise as shown in export declarations, filed by the shipper with the Collector of Customs at the port of clearance. A too detailed classification going beyond commonly used commercial terms must therefore be avoided. Likewise, suggestions regarding imports should be made with due regard to the fact that statistics of imports follow the tariff classification and that subdivisions for statistical purposes beyond customs requirements are difficult to obtain and are apt to result in inaccurate and misleading figures."

The Tariff Commission, the Food Administration, the War Trade Board, the Shipping Board and other war bureaus are co-operating in the effort to obtain a more detailed classification and will take measures to insure compliance with the official classification.

LARGER ARMY MAY FORCE BUILDING

Construction and Realty Interests Foresee Way to Help War Program Professionally.

TRADES EXCEED LOAN QUOTA

Brick Manufacturers Tell Washington Way to Release More Shipyard Workers Here.

Realty and construction interests came to a realization over the week-end that the Government's intention to greatly augment the present national war footing at once will practically force a turn in building construction activity and may result in very much closer co-ordination between the Government and manufacturers, distributers, and carriers of building materials, as well as contractors.

Important factors in the building and real estate industries of New York and vicinity seemed to be of the opinion on Saturday that, if the present war footing has absorbed all available space, whether for storage, manufacturing, executive, or administrative purposes, much larger forces to be supplied with food, raiment, shelter, ammunition, and comforts will entail a still greater demand upon the present inadequate building facilities and will practically compel additional construction work to meet the emergency. This does not contemplate the heavier pressure caused by extra man power in munition factories and allied lines to maintain this added force of warriors.

But the building material industries had already anticipated this situation, and in a desire to help release large quantities of labor accustomed to working in wood for use in shipyards, a letter, signed by Colonel John B. Rose, President of the Greater New York Brick Company, and at present in command of the forces guarding New York's water supply, went out to proper authorities at Washington on Friday calling attention to the fact that there are 2,000 idle bricklayers in the New York metropolitan district, and 300,000,000 brick available for immediate delivery along the Hudson River.

These bricklayers are ready and anxious to relieve the carpenters employed in other lines, and this material can be shipped from shed to job by all-water routes, thereby also releasing large quantities of railroad rolling stock. This proffer was made with the purpose of indicating the desire of the Eastern building material manufacturers to co-ordinate their resources and facilities with the Government's wartime requirements.

In further evidence of the attitude of the very seriously depressed building industry since the world war began, the $5,000,000 quota set aside for the building and allied industries of New York was exceeded by $214,650, reported up to midnight Friday, with still more reports to be heard from Saturday afternoon. The subscriptions were taken by the Mason Builders Association, $565,500; the Marble Industry, Tile and Grate and Mosaic Trades, $151,000; Cut Stone and Stone Setters' Association, $72,500; House Movers and Shorers Association, $9,000; Architectural Lime Workers Association, $72,050; Ornamental Bronze and Iron Masters and Wire Work Manufacturers, $101,750; Cement Workers Association, $226,950; Composition Roof and Waterproofers Association, Metal Covered Doors and Windows Association, Roofers and Sheet Metal Workers and Metal Ceiling Associations, $435,300; the Iron League of Erectors, $289,157; Plasterers, $37,200; Master Carpenters Association, Parquet Flooring Association, $343,500; Lighting Fixture Association, $785,700; Steam and Hot Water Fitters, $151,700; Painters and Decorators, $151,700; Metal Furring and Lathers, $15,000; League of Heat and Cold, $21,250; Refrigerating Association, $1,500; H. W. Johns-Manville, $300,000; Plumbers, $348,450; Elevator Manufacturers Association, $288,400; Investing Builders Association, $120,350; Mason Material Dealers Association, $225,000; Manufacturers Woodworkers Association, $70,000. Total $5,214,650.

Price changes for the first of May, according to the Dow Service Daily Building Reports, show a $3 advance in the price of white Idaho pine; a $2 advance in spruce, an advance on May 1 of $1 in certain lines of unfading green, mottled, and purple slate, with sea greens and intermediates becoming very hard to obtain. In the glass situation factories have complied with the Government's curtailment order and many factories will have produced their quota by July 1, whereupon they will close down for the season. The supply in the present market is fair, with demand, outside of Government business, practically at a standstill.

The Government demand for certain sizes is extremely heavy, which will be accentuated when the Eastern cantonment enlargements get under way, which will be immediately. The demand will be fully up to supply, as it is certain that there can be no surplus supply of glass produced under the wartime necessities.

Hudson common brick is without change at $9 to $9.50 with the market exceedingly dull for private operations. New quotations effective in Northern New Jersey went into operation on the first of the month for masons' hydrated lime. The advance represents $1 and shows hydrated $9.75 and $12.75 in the ten-cent returnable bag, and $14.75 in the twenty-cent returnable duck bag. Purchasers of hollow tile fireproofing material will find a slight advance in current prices this week, resulting from freight rate adjustment.

The plaster market is reflecting higher cost of transporting the raw material to manufacturing centres here.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

The New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children appeals for more extended public support, which is necessitated by the increase in the cost of food supplies and help. The great demands made upon the society's resources have raised a burden of debt. Children in Europe have proved to be among the worst of war sufferers and the whole world has been appealed to for their succor. Surely Americans will heed the cry for help raised by our own children. They must be protected from neglect, cruelty, and all other consequences of war. Contributions will be most gratefully received by John D. Lindsay, President, 297 Fourth Av.

Training classes in occupational therapy for military hospitals. Approved by the Surgeon General of the United States Army. Special classes are being organized to train men for this service. Craftworkers with the necessary qualifications for the work are urged to take the course. The Summer session will open June 6. The classes will be limited as to number of students, and applications should therefore be made at once to Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Chairman of the Organization Committee, 535 Park Av., who will give further information.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Warmer weather prevailed during the day over the interior districts from the Mississippi Valley eastward, and in Minnesota and the Dakotas, with a maximum temperature of 84 degrees at Moorhead, Minn. Elsewhere in the West temperatures were lower, considerably so in the plateau region, where they are now nearly normal.

Pressure is generally low except in the Atlantic States, with principal centres of depression over North Dakota and the central Rocky Mountain region, and there were quite general showers in Western Missouri, Southern Kansas, Arkansas, Western Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, and New Mexico. There were also some scattered showers in Southern Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Western New York, and light rains on the North Pacific Coast. Elsewhere the weather was fair.

There will be showers Monday or Monday night in the upper lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the East Gulf States, extending by Tuesday into the lower lake region, and Middle and South Atlantic States, and continuing in the south upper lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the East Gulf States.

It will be cooler Tuesday in the lake region, the Ohio Valley, and Tennessee, and continue warm in the South Atlantic States. It will be warmer Monday in the Middle Atlantic States and interior New England.

Winds for Monday and Tuesday along the North Atlantic Coast, moderate south; fair. Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate south; partly cloudy. South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate south, except off the Florida coast; fair. East Gulf, moderate south; fair over south, showers over north portion. West Gulf, moderate south, with showers.

FORECAST TODAY AND TUESDAY.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and New York—Fair and warmer Monday. Tuesday showers.

Southern New England — Fair Monday; warmer on the mainland. Tuesday unsettled.

Northern New England — Fair Monday; warmer interior Maine. Tuesday partly cloudy.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

CHARGE THAT HYLAN BLOCKS HEALTH JOBS

Physicians See Danger to the City in Mayor's Delay in Naming Needed Workers.

121 PLACES ARE UNFILLED

List of Appointees Submitted by Dr. Amster Was Returned by the Mayor Without Approval.

Much criticism was expressed by physicians in this city yesterday over Mayor Hylan's delay in filling 121 vacancies in the Health Department. These places, some of them vacant since Jan. 14, when the Mayor was requested to fill them, pay a total of $104,190 in salaries annually.

What Mayor Hylan's intention in regard to the vacancies was could not be ascertained last night. Dr. Royal S. Copeland, the newly appointed Health Commissioner, was out of town.

The request for the filling of the vacancies was made on April 19 by Dr. J. Lewis Amster, then Health Commissioner, who sent the list of names and the places to the Mayor. On the following day the Mayor, through an employe of the Board of Estimate, returned the schedule of vacancies to Dr. Amster. The vacancies range from clerkships to medical inspectorships.

The list of proposed appointments was submitted to the Mayor in accordance with a general request he sent out to the heads of all departments asking that they submit to him lists of all vacancies they desired to fill before they took action. It was in pursuance of this request that Health Commissioner Amster submitted to the Mayor the list of appointments and changes he proposed to make.

The entire list of vacant places, with the dates when requests were made to fill them, is as follows:

Date of Request.	Place.
Jan. 14	Health Inspector Foods at $1,200.

Mar. 20	Clerk at $360.
Mar. 21	Hospital Physician at $1,200.
Mar. 26	Clerk at $600.

It was learned yesterday that the Mayor had halted proposed action looking to slight increases to clerks and stenographers because of length of service. Among these was an increase of $180 a year that Commissioner Amster asked in behalf of two stenographers in the department.

On March 8, Dr. Amster proposed to place on the schedule $10,000 for mosquito extermination. This was among the items returned to him by the Mayor, items which have not yet been passed on.

As indicative of the interest taken in the work of the Bureau of Public Health Education by persons and organizations in various parts of the world, the following list of requests for information representing inquiries received in the course of a single week by the bureau was made public yesterday:

Fall River, Mass.—Requests copies of "Food Economics."

Consul General of Peru—Copies of publications dealing with sanitary laws.

Catholic School Commission, Montreal—Pamphlet on Classroom Ventilation.

Ministry of Public Health, Sydney, New South Wales—Writes to the bureau for information concerning use of moving pictures in health education.

Social Service League, Alberta, Canada—Asks for prices, in quantity of twenty different health leaflets, "as they would be of great service in our work along these lines in this province."

Manufacturing Concern in St. Paul, Minn.—Asks for articles dealing with ventilation.

Social Service Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital, desires the Monthly Bulletin.

FIND TWO PERSONS MURDERED AT UPTON

After Shooting Man and Woman, Slayer Escapes in Woods —County Aids in Search.

NAMES NOT GIVEN OUT

Yaphank Officers Decline to Make Known Identity of Victims or Other Details of Crime.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., May 5.—A man and a woman, whose identity is known but not disclosed by the officials at Camp Upton, were murdered there this afternoon. The murderer made his escape through the woods near the camp and search for him is being made by the military police, deputies of Sheriff Biggs, and men from the office of District Attorney Leroy Young.

The double shooting occurred about 5:30 o'clock. The man and the woman were at the northeast part of the camp, between the Middle Island Road and Fifth Avenue. A shot was heard and the man was seen to fall. The woman screamed and started to run. She had gone but a very short distance when another shot was heard and she fell. Both were dead when picked up. The bodies are at the camp morgue.

The man who did the shooting was seen to run into the woods. He was pursued, but escaped. Sheriff Biggs was communicated with and he sent out a corps of deputies to aid in the search for the murderer. He ordered all the railroad stations watched and also instructed his men to stop and search all automobiles, and question pedestrians.

District Attorney Young is still indisposed as the result of an automobile accident some days ago, and Assistant District Attorney Hildreth is operating with the Government officials in the search for the missing man. The Suffolk County officials said that all information in regard to the case must come from the army authorities.

15,000 VISIT CAMP UPTON.

One-Third of These Went in Autos to See the Soldiers.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, N. Y., May 5.—Fifteen thousand visitors camo to camp today, one-third in automobiles and the rest in six twelve-car trains. The heavy Sunday crowds have caused the military police to establish traffic rules, with several important thoroughfares turned into one-way roads.

The Brooklyn National baseball team defeated a selected nine from the newly arrived men at the depot/brigade by a score of 15 to 8. Intermittent sand storms not only greatly hampered the progress of the match, but drove many of the 7,500 onlookers from the grounds. Carlson, who pitched for five innings for the soldier nine, was formerly a Federal Leaguer, and Smedick of the same team made the only home run. The depot brigadiers made four runs in the eighth inning, before which the score was 13 to 4.

Maggie Teyte sang at several Y. M. C. A. huts this afternoon. Grover Whalen, Secretary to Mayor Hylan, came to camp again today to be shown about by John Sinnott, formerly executive Secretary of the Mayor.

REPORTS AGAINST CHARITY.

Kilroe Wants Grand Jury Inquiry Into Acts of Woman Officer.

Assistant District Attorney Edwin P. Kilroe, after an investigation of the affairs of the National Emergency Relief Society, made a report yesterday recommending that witnesses be placed before the Grand Jury on Tuesday to testify regarding financial transactions of an officer of the society.

Mr. Kilroe reports that an agreement had been made that a contract under which William Garland Brown would receive 50 per cent. commission on collections made for the society, would be nullified because of the objections of the District Attorney, but he says that the collection of the funds was carried on nevertheless, on a "fifty-fifty" basis. It is asserted that an officer of the society indirectly shared commissions. The society was organized to "give immediate relief and aid to enlisted men."

Mr. Kilroe asserts that the incorporation of the society was irregular and that it was accomplished by a woman, posing as a lawyer, who had not in fact been admitted to the bar. The report reviews at length the acts of Mrs. William Cumming Story, who has the title of President of the society, and charges irregularities in the records of the society.

FAMILY ILL AFTER EATING.

Queens Health Officials Will Examine Food for Poison.

Five persons, a mother and four children, one an infant 3 months old, are seriously ill at their home, 63 Twenty-sixth Street, Elmhurst, under circumstances that have caused the Health Department of Queens to begin an investigation. The mysterious illness, which nearly caused the death of the family, followed a meal of bread, butter, potatoes, and coffee. The health officials doubt that these articles could have caused ptomaine poisoning.

The mother, Mrs. Bridget Fealey, 39 years old, was the first to be taken ill. A few minutes later the oldest child, Mary, aged 8, complained. Shortly afterward James, aged 5; Catharine, aged 3, and the infant were noticed to be suffering. When a physician arrived he found the family in such a serious condition that he notified Dr. Howard Neil, Assistant Medical Examiner of Queens, who directed that the remaining food be turned over to the Health Department. An examination will be made today to determine if poison had been placed in the food.

JUST HEARD OF THE WAR.

Miner from Powder River with $65,000 Plunges in Bonds and Stamps.

RENO, Nev., May 5.—For four years Charles McNeale, a prospector, has been working a claim in the mountains of the Powder River in Oregon, all unconscious of the fact that nearly the entire world is at war. He arrived in Reno yesterday with $65,000 in gold, which he deposited in a bank, and today he tried to make up for lost time by buying all the Thrift Stamps and War Saving Certificates that he could carry.

Liberty bonds were new to him, and he bought a few thousand dollars' worth to see what they looked like. After hearing many tales about the war, he decided to enlist, but was rejected by the recruiting officers because of his age. He says he has a rich placer mine in the mountains. He said he would return to his mine after investing all his money in Thrift Stamps and Liberty bonds.

MANY HURT IN CAR CRASH.

Four Are Taken to Hospitals After Collision on Brooklyn Bridge.

Four persons were seriously injured and twenty others were cut and bruised when a steel car on the Gates Avenue line, bound for New York, crashed into the rear of a wooden car of the Court Street line near the Brooklyn tower of the Brooklyn Bridge at 1 o'clock this morning. Surgeons said that the four persons, who were taken to the Brooklyn Hospital, would recover from their injuries.

When the wooden car reached the Brooklyn tower it stopped because the danger signals were set against it, showing that another car was directly ahead of it. The motorman of the steel car had already passed the signal that would have warned him that the car in front of him had stopped, and when he saw the lights on the car his brakes failed to work. The steel car crashed almost halfway through the wooden car. Most of the passengers in the steel car escaped injury, although some were cut by flying glass.

Ambulances and police reserves from Brooklyn stations arrived to aid the passengers in getting out of the wrecked car. About twenty passengers went home after minor cuts and bruises had been dressed by surgeons. Those taken to the Brooklyn hospital were: Harry Gleason, 100 Chester Avenue, Brooklyn; fractured leg and possible internal injuries; Antonio Caprello, 236 Hanson Place, Brooklyn, fractured arm and contusions; Mrs. Grace Saya, 222 Sackett Street, Brooklyn, probable internal injuries, and Irwin L. Goldman of 1,719 Bergen Street, Brooklyn, internal injuries. The motormen in the cars were also injured, but the police did not give their names. Traffic on the trolley lines was delayed for about an hour while wrecking crews cleared away the debris.

SCHOOLS IN WALL STREET.

Corporations Maintain Them to Train Business Specialists.

The demand for trained specialists in business has become so great that many big New York corporations are maintaining training schools within their organizations to develop men who can be relied upon to assume great responsibilities. The National City Bank was one of the first to inaugurate schools for selected employes, and graduates of these are today occupying some of the most important places in that institution, particularly in the foreign branches recently established in South America and Europe.

Henry L. Doherty & Co. of 60 Wall Street, who own or direct some 200 public utility companies in the United States, have also organized "cadet schools" in Denver, Col.; Toledo, Ohio, and Bartlettsville, Okla., in which employes of the various properties receive an opportunity to equip themselves for bigger things while earning a living.

"I am satisfied that the young man just graduated by the technical schools and the general colleges," said Mr. Doherty yesterday, "is not a thoroughly trained man. He has learned the theory, it is true, but he has not acquired the experience of shop and field work. He has his tools and he must learn how to use them. Through the schools in my organization I have seen the value of blending theory and practice, not only in the interest of the employe, but very greatly to the benefit of the vast gas and electric companies."

The first Doherty cadet school was opened in 1906. Technical schools were combed for graduates who were offered jobs in the Doherty properties, and they received about $60 a month salary while they were in the school. After that they were advanced rapidly as trained men were always in demand.

"The cadet schools," said Mr. Doherty, "take the college graduate right into the plant and make him put on overalls. He goes into the boiler room, the gashouse, the dynamo room. There is no favoritism in the plant because the student happens to be a college graduate. The idea is to teach him to be sympathetic with the men who put in long days at so much an hour. With them he helps keep the gas free of sulphur and ammonia. Some day the company expects the cadet to be in charge of these very men.

"When the student has learned everything about the practical working of a gas plant he goes into the electric generating station. Often he goes to work taking apart a machine late Saturday night, never stopping except to eat, so that the machine may be repaired and reassembled and ready for Monday night's load. He shovels coal, oils machinery, makes sketches and blueprints for the engineer in charge. In a few months he gets a pretty good idea of the practical working of an electric generating station. Then, to polish off their business education, these cadets are taught salesmanship. America is going to need efficient salesmen more than ever tomorrow, when Europe begins its terrific fight for trade to pay the bills of war."

BROTHERS MEET AT FRONT.

Mother in Hartford Gets Letters Telling How They Separated.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 5.—Mrs. Margaret Brennan of 383 Sigourney Street, Hartford, got two letters by the same mail yesterday, and they were both from her two sons now fighting in the Seicheprey sector. Each letter expressed the hope that the writer's brother was alive.

Charles E. Brennan, one of the sons, is a member of Company F, 101st Infantry, Twenty-sixth Division. He was ill in a hospital in France from January until early April, and on April 5, in a front line trench he chanced to meet his brother, James Brennan, of Company C, Machine Gun Battalion, 102d Regiment, (formerly Hartford's crack cavalry troop B,) also of the Twenty-sixth Division. The brothers were delighted to meet after four months and Charles, whose field kitchen was far in the rear, readily accepted James's invitation to mess with the machine gun battalion.

Scarcely had they disposed themselves to eat, when a general German bombardment sent everybody scattering to dugouts. To this point both letters told practically the same version of the meeting in a French trench, but neither son was able to write positively what had happened to the other, for after the shelling ceased they were unable to find each other, and Charles had to get back to his own regiment. The mother, however, knows, and she believes that by this time each brother has assured himself of the other's safety.

WILSON ORDERS BORGLUM AIRCRAFT CHARGES SIFTED

Acts on Demand of Coffin for Inquiry—Makes Public Letters to Borglum.

SQUIER SEEKS VINDICATION

Chief of Signal Corps, Involved by Sculptor, Asks Military Court of Inquiry.

BORGLUM ANSWERS WILSON

Resents Repudiation and Says Squier and Other Officials Obstructed the Investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The demand for an investigation of allegations of graft in connection with the production of military aircraft was heeded by President Wilson today when he decided to turn the whole matter over to Attorney General Gregory, who was instructed to make a thorough investigation of the "wholesale charges" in regard to the production of aircraft made by Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor.

Another sensational feature was added to the case tonight when it became known that Major Gen. George O. Squier, Chief Signal Officer of the Army, who is accused by Mr. Borglum of hampering the work of investigation undertaken by the latter, had made a request for a military court of inquiry. A court of inquiry is a sort of military Grand Jury, which, after investigation, recommends whether court-martial proceedings are desirable. It also expresses opinions as to whether charges affecting an officer or officers are true or without merit.

The President's decision in favor of an investigation was announced after he had received from Howard Coffin, Chairman of the Aircraft Board, who had been South, a telegram urging that an official inquiry be made "in order that the reputations of innocent men may not be ruined."

The announcement of the President's decision was made when the White House this afternoon gave out copies of messages exchanged between President Wilson and Chairman Coffin and a copy of a letter sent by President Wilson to Senator Thomas of the Military Affairs Committee, in which the President expressed the hope that "the matter will be treated as one for searching official investigation by the constituted authorities of the Government" and said that "every instrumentality at the disposal of the Department of Justice will be used to investigate and pursue charges of dishonesty or malversation of any kind."

Letters to Borglum Also Made Public.

The President also made public seven letters he had sent to Mr. Borglum or Secretary of War Baker in the last five months in connection with the investigation the sculptor was making into the aircraft production situation. These show that the President in January urged Mr. Borglum to come to Washington, lay the whole matter frankly and fully before Secretary Baker, "and by your own investigation discover the facts in this business," but in April wrote him that "I never at any time constituted you an official investigator."

Mr. Borglum today conferred with members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee and furnished a list of men who, he said, could reveal information of irregularities in airplane production.

Senator Chamberlain, Chairman of the committee, said tonight that no decision had been reached as to an inquiry based on the Borglum charges. The sentiment of the committee, he added, was to allow the Department of Justice to make the investigation. Most of the members of the committee feel that the Borglum charges properly come within the scope of the department. A vote on the proposal to open an inquiry by the committee will be taken within the next few days.

Coffin Telegrams and Thomas Letter.

No statement was issued at the White House in connection with the making public of the telegrams. The telegram from Chairman Coffin follows:

Darien, Georgia, May 4, 1918.

To the President:

Charges of dishonesty have been made against the Aircraft Board, which demand the fullest inquiry. I request and urge that an official inquiry be had in order that the reputation of innocent men may not be ruined.

HOWARD COFFIN.

Here is the President's reply:

Telegram.

Washington, D. C., May 6, 1918.

Hon. Howard Coffin, Darien, Ga.

Your telegram received. You may be sure I shall co-operate in every way to prevent what you rightly forsee might happen. The Department of Justice will co-operate to the utmost

Slavs in Anti-German Riots; Mutiny Spreads in Austria

LONDON, May 6.—Unrest in the Slovenian districts of Austria is growing daily and mutiny is spreading with great rapidity, Reuter's announced today it had learned from a Serbian source.

A recent conflict between Germans and Slovenians, which ended in bloodshed, occurred at the railway station at Wi...lschgrätz. Slovenian women became greatly infuriated and took part in the fighting. Several of the wounded combatants were taken to a hospital.

Further information has been received regarding the recent encounter between Germans and Slovenians at St. Jean. The gathering there was convoked by Slovenian Deputies, with the object of spreading among the peasants sentiment in favor of separation from Austria.

The speakers urged the Slovenians to free themselves ...sibly from the German yoke and the Chairman of the Jugoslav Club asked that all fight for an independent Jugoslav State. The Slovenians cheered for this, and the Germans responded with cheers for the Hapsburgs. This led to bloodshed.

WILL INVESTIGATE MACHINE GUN LACK

War Department Promises an Inquiry Into Colt's Contract for Heavy Brownings.

8 BILLION FOR ORDNANCE

Estimates for Contracts and Authorizations for Next Year Approximate That Figure.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Investigation was begun by the War Department today into the reported inability of the Colt's Arms Company to produce heavy Browning machine guns in scheduled time. This information was given the House Military Affairs Committee by Brig. Gen. Tracy C. Dickson of the Army Ordnance Department, who, with Major Gen. Peyton C. March, Acting Chief of the Army General Staff, appeared before the committee to explain the needs of the Ordnance Department for the next fiscal year.

Reports that the manufacturers had failed in the delivery of machine guns led members of the committee to examine the two army officers on this subject. General Dickson replied to questions that not a single heavy Browning machine gun had been delivered by the Colt's Arms Company. Immediately Representative Julius Kahn, ranking Republican member of the committee, demanded a Congressional investigation. He said that the situation was quite as bad as that existing in the aircraft production, and proceeded to examine the witnesses along specific lines.

Mr. Kahn asked why the War Department had not reported the failure before this. General Dickson said that the Ordnance Department was at a loss to understand the inability of the contractors to deliver the goods in scheduled time. He advised that the committee defer the proposed inquiry until an investigation, set in motion today by the War Department, had been concluded. With the understanding that the committee would be advised of the situation as soon as the officers sent to make investigation had reported it was decided by the committee not to make an independent inquiry.

The hearing was held behind closed doors, and the utmost secrecy was maintained as to the developments. It became known, however, that the Colt's Arms Company was under contract to deliver about 3,000 heavy Browning machine guns by June 1, and that not a single gun of the type required has yet been turned over to the War Department. No explanation for the reported failure was offered by General Dickson except disorganization in the works due to the draft and labor troubles. These, members of the committee asserted, were not so widespread as to account for the alleged failures.

Light Browning automatics were being made by five factories, General Dickson testified, and the production of these guns was reported to be proceeding satisfactorily. Rifle production was reported to be up to standard, and sufficient rifles are now being made to supply the soldiers in the field, here and abroad.

Appropriations for heavy ordnance and fortifications will be considered by the House Appropriations Committee when more information has been obtained. The Military Affairs Committee was told today that a year would be required to turn out some of the bigger guns be cause of difficulties in getting under way. Congress will be asked to make an appropriation for two

Fear of America and Troubles at Home Compel the Renewal of Attack.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 6.—Although heavy fighting is to be expected in Flanders, where the enemy is likely to make further efforts to carry the heights west of Kemmel, it remains certain that the great mass of German troops is concentrated further south, and there is a widespread opinion that the near future may witness another colossal drive on the same scale and in the same general direction as that of March 21.

According to the latest calculations, about seventy German divisions, of whom some forty mostly of quality, have not yet been engaged, are awaiting the order to begin a new attempt for the decision which the German leaders seem to regard as necessary.

The violence of the German bombardment also has been steadily increasing from the Arras region southward during the last fortnight, as if the enemy was hoping to counterbalance the absence of the surprise, which served him so well in the previous attack, by the sheer weight of men and metal.

It is idle to deny that an advance upon the Amiens railroad or in the direction of Compiègne might procure for the assailants greater advantages than a corresponding gain in the waterlogged desolation of Flanders, where even the abandonment of what is left of the Ypres salient would cause the Allies little embarrassment.

But the French view the future without anxiety. A staff officer recently said, "We feel that we are masters of the situation."

Details which are now coming out of the past fighting show that, once the battle is stabilized, the poilus have literally "fought better" than their opponents.

This assertion was made to THE TIMES correspondent by an experienced soldier who judged without bias on purely professional grounds. He added that the comparative superiority of the French over the enemy appeared to be progressive—a certain proof that the French morale is strengthening as his weakens.

How vitally the fate even of great modern battles hangs on the morale and fighting quality of the units, or in some cases even of individuals, only experienced soldiers can realize. A feature of this "position warfare" is that if the line breaks at a single point the neighboring forces are outflanked and forced in turn to uncover others, so that the breach widens almost automatically.

Under the shock of a very heavy attack it cannot be expected that the line will not bend here or there to some extent. It then depends upon the courage and initiative of the units on the spot to maintain the connection and continue the resistance, often to the death, so that the barrier may be built up again behind them.

The French leadere know that their men can be relied on to do both, and that is the principal reason for their confidence, no matter what may be the violence of the enemy's attacks.

The very fact that an attacks is almost certain la another source of their optimism. The chain of reasoning is simple. The first assault failed, despite the enormous advantages of surprise and the initial success. That the enemy risked it at all made the French think that fear of America and internal difficulties made the need for a decision outweigh the danger of defeat. Now the fact that he renews it, despite his unprecedented losses and in face of the Allies being tenfold stronger, as a result of complete unity of action and direction, proves that his need was far more urgent than waa imagined.

If one accepts this theory that the enemy is continuing the attack be-

Lieut. Rosenwald, Once Noted as Football Player, Killed

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 6. — (Associated Press).—Lieutenant John Rosenwald of the Medical Corps, who was formerly one of the best known of the Western football players, has been killed by shellfire in the Luneville sector. Lieutenant Rosenwald, whose home was in Minneapolis, was a guard of the University of Minnesota eleven a few years ago and made a brilliant record. On the field of battle his record was still better. He distinguished himself two or three times in bombardments, notably in the engagement in which heroic Sergeant Peterson was killed a short time ago.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 5.—Twelve days have passed since the last considerable action on the Somme front, the abortive German attack on Villers-Bretonneux and Hangard. The interval has been occupied here and further south in strengthening defenses and improving positions by local attacks, and throughout the French front in raiding, after information as to the enemy's plans and effectives. At a time of less grave preoccupation these affairs would deserve more than passing notice, for they often exhibit remarkable daring and skill.

In Hangard Wood, where the Franco-British line has been advanced and improved, tanks have been used with good effect to clear out the remaining enemy machine-gun posts.

The first American division to take a section in the present battle has done well in the Leintrey region of Lorraine. Three hundred American soldiers carried out a very successful raid, reaching the third German trench. This was the first time the American infantry had depended upon the protection of its own artillery.

By a well-conducted operation the French have recaptured the whole of Hill 82 east of Hailles, at the junction of the Luce and the Avre, taking 110 prisoners and a number of mine throwers and machine guns.

These are but scenes—settings of the entr'acte, longer than the previous pause, perhaps, because the third act is intended to be the proper dramatic culmination. Berlin is visibly perturbed. The failure of the submarine campaign has been found out, and the Deputies ask why lying figures have been given them. The Ukraine is a disappointment. Worse still, hundreds of thousands of men have gone down, and victory is as far away as ever. Hindenburg would in any case wish to go on. Now he must do so from fear. The shadows are gathering, but he still has means to strike more than one hard blow. Where and how? In an altogether different sector? That is possible, though I think it unlikely, except as a subsidiary operation, because the best objectives are those already chosen, and the shifting of the stress of battle would raise many difficulties without giving any new prospect of success. Is some new surprise impending? That also is possible, though not very likely, because surprises are not invented in a day, and it can hardly be supposed that the German staff held back anything in designing its great adventure.

Germans Have Done Their Worst.

What we can say with some certainty is that nothing the enemy can do now will be quite as bad as what he began on March 21. Preparations for this effort had been going on for six months, with all the energetic application to detail of which the German is capable. As early as last January the French Staff knew that the Eighteenth German Army, that of von Hutier, by which the counteroffensive in Galicia last July and the subsequent attack on Riga were made, had been brought over to the western front. It was known the enemy would above all aim at a surprise, and that the Riga operation presented a new tactical model of the greatest interest. We knew that at least 200 German divis-

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 6.—The Germans introduced gas warfare, forcing modern soldiers to wear gas masks. Now after the use of masks has proved an effective weapon against gas he is using a new weapon to force the allied soldiers to take off masks that they may be easily killed by his lethal phosgine and diphosgine gases.

The weapon is nothing more or less than sneezing powder fired in high explosive shells. This sneezing powder percolates through mask respirators and brings on sneezing spells which lead the men to take off their masks and to receive the full effect of lethal gases. It has been used against the Americans. The method in use is to fire a number of sneezing powder shells just before a gas attack or to scatter them along among lethal gas shells.

Allied soldiers get the ordinary gas warning, put on masks and go on fighting, disregarding gas shells. Then along come the sneezing shells, and the soldier who cannot resist taking off his mask receives the full effect of deadly gases.

Composition of New Shell.

I can state that effective methods have been devised against this weapon as against other war traps of the heinous Hun. Today I examined one of the sneezing shells which wae captured complete. With a cartridge in, the affair was about three feet in length and in diameter about four and a half inches. The interior of the shell was filled with a substance which when dug away showed a glass container embedded in a high explosive and containing poison in the form of a very fine powder, which, when the shell explodes, scatters like dust. The range of such a shell is up to seven miles.

Experiences of allied soldiers and captured material show that the enemy is unceasingly trying new tricks in gas warfare. It is not permitted to give many details, but it is seldom a month passes without his trying some new gas. Most of his recent efforts have been ineffective and allied experts have been successful in making gas masks effective against all gases tried so far.

The German now uses his gases in four methods: First, clouds, which depend on a favorable wind; second, projectors, also depending on the wind; third, long-range artillery gas shells, and, fourth, hand grenades. Deadly gases, such as phosgine and diphosgine, are used in short-range guns, while neutralization gas, intended only to prevent activities of allied soldiers far back of the lines, is used at long range. Mustard gas is much used in this way. The latest perfection in the use of lethal gases is to fire twelve or more mortars shooting large calibre shells at the same time by an electrical arrangement, thus producing great concentration.

The four methods of use of gas by the Germans mark stages of development in gas warfare which promise to become more important as the war goes on. However, the first means of cloud attack, which had its first demonstration against the Canadians at Ypres, is still used, but not so often. In the employment of short-range weapons is included the use of gas hand grenades, to which Americans are becoming accustomed.

Much interest was aroused here by a reported declaration by Dr. Davis, American dentist to the Kaiser, that Wilhelm had boasted of a deadly gas used from airplanes. Allied experts have been watching for German use of gas from airplanes which is practicable, but which has not yet been done on any front. There was much amuse-

Heavy Gas Attack on Our Lines in Picardy; Pershing's Men Prepare for New German Assault

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES ON THE FRENCH FRONT, May 6, (Associated Press.)—The Germans launched a heavy gas attack against the American troops on the Picardy front in the night. Early in the evening they sent over 15,000 shells, composed chiefly of mustard gas, within a brief period. These shells were followed by an intense artillery fire, and at midnight several hundred gas shells were dropped into the American lines.

Enemy airplanes appeared over the American lines about the same time. Anti-aircraft guns brought down one German machine and damaged another.

The extreme activity of the artillery and aviators, the rifle fire and night flares, and the reported movements behind the enemy lines in this sector may forecast a new attack, but General Pershing's men are ready for any emergency. They are countering the enemy preparations blow for blow, keeping up a harassing artillery, rifle, and machine-gun fire, and are actively patrolling.

The spirit of the Americans is excellent. They are eager to fight, and a typical expression is, "Let Fritz start something. He'll get all that is coming to him."

A young French Captain who trained the men now in the Picardy lines told The Associated Press today he never had seen finer material.

"All are of one mind," he said, "to fight fast and hard and to finish the war quickly."

CRUEL TO OUR MEN, EX-PRISONER SAYS

Frenchman Who Escaped from Germans Tells of Treatment of Americans.

WRECKED BY SEVERE LABOR

New Yorker Lost 33 Pounds in Salt Mines—Men Are Half Starved and Beaten.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 6, (Associated Press.)—American prisoners of war are being shamefully treated in German prison camps if all have had the experience of an American interviewed by a French soldier, also a prisoner in Germany, just before he escaped. The Frenchman's story, as told to American officers, follows:

"A short time before I left Hameln, Hanover, I was able to have a few minutes' interview with an American soldier who was taken prisoner several months ago on the French front. Being unwounded, he was assigned directly to a prison camp. Weakened by excessive work he was forced to do in the salt mines and being unable to stay longer, he was sent to Hamein.

"I do not remember the name of the man or the number of his regiment, but he had been among the first Americans in the trenches, and his home was in New York. He told me that during the three months he was in the Harz minee he had lost thirty-three pounds. He had been solidly built, and it could be easily seen that he had been vigorous and healthy, but when I saw him he was incredibly thin and so weak that he could hardly cross a room without stopping repeatedly, leaning on pieces of furniture or supporting himself on boxes plied there.

"Englishmen are also badly treated in the mines. I found out that three of seven who were sent back to Hameln died.

"Package service does not exist in the mines and the prisoners receive practically nothing. Their only nourishment is from thin soup made of barley or cabbage, sometimes salted codfish eggs and those of other fish which it is impossible to eat. There are few potatoes and very little bread. It is impossible for a man to work without becoming sick or weakened to the point of failing.

"The men are struck with rifle butts and the flat side of bayonets and are placed in dark cells on bread and water. These cells are known to the mine prisoners as 'hot chambers,' as they are heated by steam to a high temperature. After the men are held in these cells they are turned out in the snow, where they are required to stand at 'attention' for a certain length of time. Needless to say, deaths are frequent.

"This American had been punished several times in this way, and told me all that I am relating to you. I am able to confirm his story, because other Englishmen and Frenchmen I saw at Hameln did not have the strength even to hold a cigarette."

GUNFIRE CHECKS FOE'S MOVES.

Correspondents Suggest That Mont Kemmel May Be Recovered.

LONDON, May 6, (via Ottawa.)—Correspondents in France state that the British gunfire in Flanders during the last three days has completely prevented any enemy movement on the British lines, while the French prevented an attack that was undoubtedly being prepared on their front by attacking first.

Experts emphasize the difficulty of the enemy finding the target, which is to take the Allies by surprise.

KAISER COUNTS ON DISUNION

PARIS, May 6.—During the lull in the great battle there has been much discussion in Paris of other factors second only in importance to men and guns. It is agreed that the Germans launched their offensive with a double objective. They hoped to break through. Failing that, they thought that the pressure of their onslaught would be great enough to find a weak spot in the Entente alliance and bring about its disintegration. In connection with the Hindenburg offensive the Germans started undermining movements of all kinds behind the lines, and one never knows when he is spreading German propaganda in repeating what he hears.

The impression prevails here that the Allies have stood the early shocks of battle satisfactorily, and that they should now be on guard against influences calculated to produce division among them. Germany has always reckoned their divisibility as one of her elements of strength, believing that if she could hold out long enough the Entente alliance would be loosened by inherent separatist tendencies.

Paris takes the view that America early set the example of maintaining the principle of union when she stripped her navy of destroyers and dispatched them to Europe to fight the U-boats. It was urged then by some persons that Washington was making a big blunder in leaving New York and other seaboard cities unprotected against a German attack.

Later Germany attempted to divert the movement of American destroyers from Europe by spreading reports that German submarines would be sent to American waters. Such arguments appeal strongly to the parochial national spirit, but America refused to be fooled, and her solid destroyer strength became the backbone of the anti-submarine organization.

America's detachment from European relations and her consequent impartiality are part of the basis of the optimism now prevailing in France. The largest single element of this hopefulness is the unity achieved under Foch. If the Allies had a higgledy-piggledy management under three separate commands, French opinion, which is coldly mathematical and analytical, would take an opposite course.

Expect Us to Hold Allies in Line.

French commentators, however, recognize the inevitable drift toward separatism, and it is only their faith in America's disinterestedness and horse sense that produces such confidence here. They believe that we are out to win, and are not going to sacrifice success to sentimentalism, and that, being of that mind ourselves, we will see to it that our partners do not yield to the temptations which we resist.

To bring the discussion from the abstract to the concrete, it is thought here that the Germans have been surprised at the Allies getting together and staying together on the question of Foch's command. They had hoped to have their battle won for them by British Official Bulletins.

LONDON, May 6.—Today's official bulletin reads as follows:

A successful minor operation was carried out by us last night between the Sommo and Ancre Rivers, west-southwest of Morlancourt. Our line in this locality has been advanced on a considerable front in spite of strong opposition from the enemy, whose losses were heavy. Over 150 prisoners, two machine guns, and a trench mortar were captured by our troops. Our own casualties were slight.

Local fighting took place last night to our advantage in the neighborhood of Locon and the Lawe River. Our positions in this locality have been improved.

On the remainder of the front the situation is unchanged.

Tonight's report from Haig's headquarters reads:

More than 200 prisoners were captured by us in the successful local operation carried out during the night in the neighborhood of Morlancourt.

Raids attempted by the enemy last night and early this morning south of Locre were repulsed by French troops.

The artillery activity on both sides continued during the day on both battlefronts. North of the Lys a number of fires were caused behind the enemy lines by our artillery.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Monday, May 6.—The lull continues, and yesterday was the quietest day on the front perhaps that we have had since March 21.

I described yesterday how the intense harassing fire of the Allies in Flanders and elsewhere caused much damage to the enemy and undoubtedly interfered a good deal with his organization behind the lines, making it difficult for him to relieve and reorganize his divisions, to bring up ammunition and gather all the supplies he needs for the next phase of the offensive. This destructive fire is causing the same effect down across the Somme, where the Australians, especially during recent days, have made life very wretched for the German troops.

An Australian achievement about 2 o'clock this morning was a very daring and successful enterprise, which must have been extraordinarily annoying to the German command in that district. Annoying is too mild a word to use for the German troops themselves, because for an hour or more it must have been a time of terror for them, and many poor wretches were killed before the light of day.

The Australians went over in no great numbers for such a wide front of attack, which was about 2,500 yards, and without preliminary bombardment, though as soon as they were away their guns were active, neutralizing the enemy's batteries and keeping his roads and tracks under fire to prevent supports getting up. The German garrison on this front belonged to the 199th Division and 145th Division, and they were scattered about not in any definite trench system, but in rifle pits and rifle trenches just big enough to give cover to small groups and outposts and machine gun crews.

The Australians went over and round about the German pits and holes with bayonets and bombs. The Germans fought for their lives in some of these places, but at least 150 were killed, according to the estimate of Australian officers, and the prisoners now number 200 of the 114th and 267th Infantry Reserve Regiments. They include two officers, whom I saw this morning and who looked very haggard and worn young men, with gaunt cheeks under their big shrapnel helmets, which reached down to their shoulders. Among the trophies brought back by the Australians, whose own losses were extraordinarily light, were several machine guns and a big trench mortar.

It was more than a raid, for the Australian line is now advanced on this side of Morlancourt to a depth of 84 yards on that wide front of 2,500 yards, and this enterprise will remind the enemy that initiative and offensive spirit are not entirely on his side. It was, however, only a minor action compared with the battles of last month and those which will come this month when the enemy is again ready to try another big push.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 6. (Associated Press.)—Most of the contested positions won by the Australians lay on the crest of a considerable ridge running east and west below Morlancourt. The ridge not only overlooks that place, but gives observation for a long distance in the valley of the Ancre and the Somme. By their two attacks the Australians greatly improved their situation on this high ground.

LACK OF SHELLS CAUSED LULL?

British Mission Suggests Last German Drive Used Stock in Dumps.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The situation for the Allies on the western front has improved considerably since the failure of the German drive last Monday, according to the view of the British Military Mission here. The enemy cannot renew the offensive, it is held, until he replaces with fresh divisions those that suffered so heavily in the last battle, and renews his ammunition supply.

A statement issued by the mission today says in part:

"The enemy has not renewed his attack in France since his fifth costly failure on April 29, when the divisions engaged suffered so severely that they had to be withdrawn and fresh divisions will have to be substituted before the enemy can renew the offensive.

"Since the first few days of the present battle the German casualties have been increasing as quickly in proportion as the allied casualties have decreased, and now with the French and fresh British reserves available, the situation, though bound to be an anxious one for some time yet, has considerably improved.

"During the recent fighting the enemy's expenditure of ammunition has been enormous. The intense bombardment, previous to the attack on April 29, lasted for over fifteen hours, and carried out as it was, with the utmost intensity and concentration ever yet achieved during the war, must have emptied his dumps and caused the present lull in the fighting, while he replenishes his depots."

REPORTS TAKING AMERICANS.

Berlin Also Tells of Success in Flanders Operations.

BERLIN, May 6, (via London.)—The statement issued by the War Office today reads:

In the Flanders fighting area we carried out successful operations.

A local attack by the enemy south of Locre failed. Early this morning there was a temporary violent artillery duel between Ypres and Bailleul. Throughout the day only the village of Kemmel was subjected to the strongest fire.

On the northern bank of the Lys, at La Bassée Canal and in some sectors of the battlefield on both sides of the Somme artillery activity revived in the evening.

Reconnoitring engagements and advances into the enemy's lines near Hangard and to the southwest of Brimont brought in some prisoners.

During forefield engagements with the Americans southwest of Blamont and with the French at Hartmanns-Weilerkopf we took some prisoners.

In the other thatres there is nothing to report.

CANADIANS TAKE OVER 3 MORE MILES OF FRONT

They Have Been Keeping the Foe Busy from New Quarters Southeast of Arras.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, May 6, (by Canadian Press, Limited.)—The Canadian army has taken over trenches in the vicinity of Neuville-Vitasse, Mercatel, and Boisleux-St. Marc, in addition to its front from Hill 70 to Gavrelle.

In their new quarters, as well as north of the Scarpe, they have been keeping the enemy constantly on the alert. Prominent in the operations in this area was the raid Friday morning, when the Saskatchewan troops, under the cover of artillery and machine-gun barrages, penetrated the enemy outpost line on a 600-yard front to a depth of 400 yards. The raid, which was carried out on the Arras road north of the Cojeul, was conducted at only light cost, but both sides of the road were marked with enemy dead. His casualties could not be less than 100 and the Canadians captured seven prisoners and four machine guns. On the extreme right of the Canadian attack the enemy offered little resistance, but heavy fighting took place on the left.

Again on the morning of April 29 a very successful raid was carried out by Ontario troops against positions in the vicinity of Neuville-Vitasse. They captured ten prisoners and four machine guns. The Canadians remained in the enemy lines twenty minutes, inflicting many casualties on the foe, who, in places, offered stubborn resistance. Despite the hand-to-hand fighting, the Canadians returned to their lines with only nine killed or missing.

The new section of battlefront taken over by the Canadian troops lies to the southwest of Arras and is about three miles in length.

VON ARNIM'S ARMY HAS BEEN REINFORCED

More Guns Have Arrived—Paris Observers Believe a New Stroke at Ypres Is Imminent.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 6.—It has been noted here that after each of their recent checks, which have been satisfactorily numerous of late, the Germans have ceased their attacks for at least five days.

French opinion, which has shown such little interest in the great battle during the past week that even the military critics ceased in several cases to write about it for two or three days, has now again begun to manifest curiosity as to where the expected new attack will take place. It is recognized that the Germans are such a methodical people that the resumption of the battle is about due.

Since their bloody defeat last week in Flanders the enemy has shown no intention of wasting more men in another fruitless attacks there. It is unthinkable, however, that von Hindenburg will content himself by resting on such a dangerously exposed position as Mont Kemmel without making a further desperate effort to gain the rest of the line of heights in that region, for without these the Kemmel position must sooner or later become untenable.

It is known beyond a doubt that the much-tried divisions of Von Arnim's Sixth Army have already been greatly reinforced with new effectives and that many fresh batteries have been brought up between the Lys and the Yser. The resumption of the intense bombardment before Ypres yesterday leaves little doubt that it is in that direction that the renewed German efforts will be made.

Major de Divrieux in Le Matin and Marcel Hutin in Le Echo de Paris are agreed on this point, although the former does not allow himself to overlook the possibility that the enemy will simultaneously attempt a second great attack which, under the present circumstances, can only be looked for on another part of the British front. Major de Divrieux predicts that this second offensive may be launched against Hazebrouck and Bethune by von Quast's Army or against Amiens by von Marwitz, or between Lens and Albert by Otto von Below, or perhaps by any two of these armies in combination.

From One point seems to be fairly certain: The coming stages of the battle will be fought out on the British part of the front so far as the Germans are concerned. Whether Foch will take a sudden initiative and transfer the struggle to another part of the front is the secret of Foch alone.

Assuming, as seems to be the general idea, that the Germans will direct the full weight of their coming onslaught against the Ypres salient, it is pointed out here that this salient has now become extremely difficult to defend.

Hutin, in The Echo de Paris, hints very plainly that the possibility of the evacuation of the pitiful heap of ruins which is all that remains of Ypres has already been seriously considered.

At the same time both the British and French artillery on the Flanders front has been reinforced enormously and with such good effect that the enemy's preparations for a renewed attack have been rendered terribly difficult.

The allied counter-battery fire has proved extraordinarily effective and the damage done to convoys of supplies on the way to the German front line is reported to have been unusually serious.

All these must have had a considerable effect in delaying the expected renewal of the German onslaught, for on this occasion Germany has greater need than ever before of a spectacular victory, if on only a small section of the front, and her preparations, therefore, must be complete before she strikes.

It is believed here that the five serious checks that Germany has received on the western front in the last five weeks have had an extremely grave political effect at home and particularly in Austria. The situation is such that she dare not risk her next attack on this front, unless she is almost absolutely sure of scoring at least a map victory, while it is impossible for the same reason for her to refrain from a further great effort in the very near future.

Austria is now regarded as Germany's weakest spot. It is believed here that internal conditions there are such that at the first real check suffered by Germany on the Western front during the next two or three weeks the whole Austrian machine will burst in pieces through sheer rottenness of the material. From that to the end of the war would be only a single step.

AVRE GUNS ARE KEEPING BUSY

PARIS, May 6.—Again today there has been heavy artillery action north and south of the Avre River, but the infantry have not clashed.

A successful raid was made by French troops during the night west of Hangard. Near Anchin Farm, in this same area, southeast of Amiene, a German attempt to approach the French lines was repulsed.

Reconnoitring detachments of Pétain's men penetrated the enemy's front northwest of Rheims and in Lorraine near Abaucourt.

The night report of the War Office reads:

The opposing artilleries were quite heavily engaged north and south of the Avre, but there was no infantry action.

SCANDAL IN BERLIN OVER RUSSIAN FEAST

AMSTERDAM, May 6.—The Embassy of the Bolshevist Russian Government in Berlin will open for business today at the old Russian quarters on Unter den Linden.

Meanwhile the German capital is scandalized over the goings on at a housewarming party held there, and which lasted until 3 o'clock in the morning. An opulent banquet, said to have cost 40 marks a head, exclusive of beverages, was served. On the wine list figured champagne, hock, claret, and vodka, all of which flowed in streams.

Among the guests were numerous independent Socialists, whose leader, Herr Haase, in fervent terms toasted "The Red Internationale," to which Ambassador Joffe replied "suitably."

It is asserted the entire cost of the feast was defrayed by the Imperial German Treasury, which excites angry comment among the populace, which already has been irritated by stories of more than ample fare enjoyed by the Russian Embassy staff while staying at an élite hotel under special arrangements of the War Food Bureau.

Germany to Renounce Western Conquests, Give Alsace Autonomy, but Keep Grip on Russia.

LONDON, May 6.—Arthur J. Balfour, the Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today that no peace offers had been made recently by the enemy. He added:

"There is no representative of a neutral nation in this country who has made tentative or informal suggestions of peace negotiations."

Germany's peace emissary, according to The Daily Mail, has been busily working here, but has made no progress in any direction. There is reason to believe, it says, that the German agent, who has been reported to be a Dutch financier, returns to Germany to report that there is "nothing doing."

Dutch Version of German Terms.

A Central News dispatch from The Hague says the Dutch intermediary is reported to be Jonkheer Colyn, former Minister of War. He propoeale are said there to have been as follows:

1. Germany to renounce all claims in the west.
2. Restoration of Belgium.
3. Alsace-Lorraine to be autonomous, within the German Federation.
4. The status in the east to remain as at present.
5. Austria to make certain concessions to Italy in the Trentino.
6. Balkan questions to be solved by an international conference.
7. All colonial questions affecting Africa and Asia Minor to be settled by a conference of all the belligerents.
8. Germany to abandon all claims to her former Chinese protectorate of Kiao-Chau, but in exchange to receive certain economic concessions in China.

AMSTERDAM, May 6.—The report that a Dutchman had gone to London to make peace proposals on instructions from Foreign Secretary von Kühlmann, an official statement from Berlin says, is a complete invention.

Another dispatch from Berlin says that the complete peace agreement with Rumania will be signed either Monday or Tuesday.

Jonkheer Colyn arrived in England last week at the head of a mission whose purpose was said to be to explain to the British Government the difficulties caused by Germany's demand on Holland concerning the transfer of German materials across Dutch territory to Belgium.

"THE SWORD HAS TO SPEAK."

German Foreign Office Comment on Rumors of a "Peace Offensive."

AMSTERDAM, May 6.—"The assertion of Lord Robert Cecil that Germany will undertake a 'peace offensive' if she does not succeed in overcoming the Allies is the latest means whereby Entente statesmen are seeking to stimulate the war ardor of their people, whose belief in the justice of their own cause is vanishing," says Baron von dem Buesche-Haddenhausen, German Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in an interview published in Berlin newspapers in reply to the statement of the British Minister of Blockade last week.

"Let the British people deal with such manoeuvres as they will," says the German Under Secretary. "The sword first has to speak. Our task is to break with hard steel our enemies' destructive aims against our existence and our integrity. We have attained gigantic successes. We can face the future with firm confidence."

WASHINGTON IS CAUTIOUS.

Officials Regard The Hague Rumor as Part of a "Peace Offensive."

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Officials and diplomats here, on reading Germany's purported peace terms, as outlined today in dispatches from London, recalled that British officials recently predicted a "peace offensive," and said, furthermore, that they expected that terms to be offered in behalf of Germany would be framed so as to appear most attractive to Great Britain.

Today's dispatches, officials said, seemed to fulfill that prediction. Every peace move made by Germany since her first offer has been promptly branded by the allied statesmen as subtle propaganda to sow dissension and discord among the allied peoples, weaken their resistance, and lead to what has been characterized as a German-made peace.

Ambassador Page reported the points of the latest peace feeler to the State Department by cable, but it was said that the communication was regarded by the Department as news, rather than as something requiring official attention. As a matter of course, however, it probably will be the subject of private consultation between the Entente Governments and America.

It is known that from time to time the State Department has been informed through unofficial sources that influential persons in Holland were in a position, whenever the American Government cared to discuss the subject, to submit the outlines of a possible peace plan which would correctly represent the extent of the concessions which Germany was willing to make.

DOWNED 106 TEUTON PLANES

Six Weeks' Record for a British Squadron on Amiens Front.

LONDON, May 6.—Wounded British airmen back from France report that the squadron operating in an important sector on the Amiens front has probably established a record by bringing down 106 enemy machines in six weeks, including twenty-one in one day.

The only member of the squadron known to have been wounded up to the time this man returned to London said it was hard work getting the German airmen to fight. "Practically the only times they would come out," he said, "were about 9 o'clock in the morning, when the glare of the sun would be in our faces, and in the evening. Even then they would slip away if they had half a chance.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

Another day has gone by, and still the Germans have held back from a renewal of their attacks, either in Flanders or in Picardy. Part of this delay has been caused, no doubt, by weather conditions. As has been noted before, the Germans in Flanders must bring their supplies into the salient along the Lys River over absolutely flat ground, which is readily mired and in heavy rains is turned into a quagmire. Add to this condition the fact that the ground has been torn up by shell fire and filled with craters, which in turn rapidly fill up with water, and it can be readily seen that insurmountable obstacles are imposed upon a transportation system. Nor is this condition confined to the interior of the salient itself. On the contrary, it reaches far east of the salient into the whole of the Flandere country held by the Germans before the attack on the Armentières positions. It extends, too, to the Picardy front before Amiens, where much of the ground over which the transports must come—whether they be rail or dirt roads—is that which was torn to pieces by the Germans in their retreat from Noyon. Until they can re-establish their supply system and insure a constant flow of munitions and food to the fighting front they cannot go on.

This condition placed the advantage for the time being with the Allies. In Flanders the Allies' supplies come over high ground, not so easily mired as the low country. Except for such interruption as may be incident to the German artillery fire, the Allies can keep their supplies coming at a more or less constant rate. The French have taken advantage of this situation to push their way southward along the road which separates Mont Scherpenberg from Mont Rouge, and have improved their positions locally. It must be remembered that the French and British plan here is defensive, purely and simply. There is nothing to be gained by an offensive movement of any magnitude in this section. It might enuff out the salient if completely successful, but even this would be but a minor affair as compared to the total problem with which the Allies are confronted. To sacrifice any great number of men for such a local object would be indefensible. The problem here, then, is to force the Germans to wear themselves out in the attack, and then, when the time is ripe, to gather together all available forces for an attempt at victory.

As a local operation for defensive purposes the French attack between Locre and Dranoutre appears to be entirely successful. The most important action of the last few days took place, however, not in Flanders but in Picardy. Both north and south of the Somme the British attacked on a front of about two miles and pushed their way forward nearly a mile. This is also a move for betterment of local positions. The angle between the Somme and the Ancre is centred by a narrow plateau about 825 feet high, the river itself being about 135 feet above the sea. From this plateau, both toward the Ancre and the Somme, the ground slopes sharply to the valley floor, the slope being generally steep.

This plateau is not the key to the possession of the angle, but overlooks considerable ground on the other side of both streams. In the German drive in this angle the battle lines were finally established within five miles of the apex of the angle, which is quite acute, and only a small portion of this plateau was left in British hands. It is along this plateau that the British advance has been made. Apparently Morlancourt has been reached and the lines fixed on the western outskirts of the town.

South of the Somme the general situation is the same. There is the same character of plateau with steep sides, from which the Germans tried to eject the British when they drove at Villers-Bretonneux some days ago. The situation then was redeemed by the Australians, who retook the ground lost during the night. Now the British have attempted to extend their positions on the high ground between Villers-Bretonneux and the Somme. This operation has also had a measure of success. There is a not inconsiderable object to be attained in this attack. It was the British failure at Villers-Bretonneux that opened the way for the German attack against Hangard in the valley of the Luce Brook. As soon as the former town was taken the French position was exposed and had to be vacated. Nor did the subsequent success undo the damage. But by pushing east along the plateau the French positions can be restored, as the Germans will be completely turned from the north side of the Luce. This little stream has played a not unimportant part in this fighting, as it has for nearly a month served as a defense for the northern flank of the French line at its junction with the British.

In addition to this, every yard that the British north of the Luce can advance clears so much of the northern bank and sharpens the Amiens salient between the mouth of the Luce and Montdidier. At the same time it sharpens still more the point which juts out along the Avre directly toward Amiens, a mile above Morisel. The general situation in Picardy must be considered satisfactory when the Allies deem it advisable to seize the initiative.

allied dissensions, and going up against a great General clothed with full powers is not at all to their taste. As measures have been taken from time to time to enable Foch to handle all allied material and plan ahead into the Summer months the Kaiser has shown an increasing reluctance to "hog" all the credit for the western offensive.

A Frenchman said to me today:

"France might have claimed the generalship on other grounds, but the selection of Foch was so clearly marked out by fitness that there was no getting away from it. The Allies were supremely fortunate to have such a man directly in the line of promotion and with the threads of management already in his hands. In France, where we apply military terms to all our thoughts of the war, we regard the allied victory as turning on the quality of support given Foch by the allied powers.

"Among European nations questions are rooted deep in centuries-old relationships which do not arise between them and America. We, therefore, depend on America to hold us all to those principles of military unity which our Generalissimo represents and symbolizes. President Wilson helped put him there.

"The President, Secretary Baker, and Generals Pershing and Bliss have given him the strongest possible indorsement and support, and American man-power has been guaranteed him to administer the finishing stroke to the enemy."

BELGIAN COAST POINTS BOMBED BY SEAPLANES

LONDON, May 6.—Naval aerial contingents, working from Dunkirk, have carried out bombing operations against Ostend, Westende, the mole, lock gates, and seaplane base at Zeebrugge, and enemy shipping in the vicinity, the Admiralty announced tonight.

The raids were carried out from April 29 to May 5 inclusive. Direct hits were obtained on the mole, the seaplane base, and the docks at Zeebrugge.

In the course of the offensive one enemy two-seater airplane was destroyed and another was driven down out of control. One British machine failed to return.

U C-39 ON FIRST TRIP WHEN SUNK BY BRITISH

Commanded by Ehrentraut, Friend of Prince Henry — Overwhelmed by Depth Bombs.

LONDON, May 6.—An account has just reached London from a Dutch correspondent of the destruction of the German submarine U C-39 and the capture of seventeen of her crew by a British destroyer. [The U C-39 was sunk in the North Sea in March, 1917.]

The submarine was commanded by Otto Ehrentraut, who was a close friend of Prince Henry of Prussia, and a frequent visitor to Prince Henry's castle at Kiel. Before Ehrentraut left Kiel in command of this new minelaying submarine, Princess Henry went to the pier to wish the boat bon voyage. The U C-39 left her base at midnight carrying several torpedoes and a large quantity of gun ammunition, but no mines, as this was her first trip and in the nature of a tryout for the officers and men. All of her personnel had seen service in other submarines.

The submarine secured her first victim by sinking the Norwegian steamship Hanshhmsk (formerly the American Sattila,) the crew of which escaped in boats. Next midnight the 39 sighted the British steamer Hanna Larsen, which was sunk by bombs after her Captain and chief engineer had been taken aboard the submarine as prisoners.

The next morning the Norwegian steamship Ida was sighted, and although the Ida stopped immediately, Ehrentraut gave orders to continue firing. When the German gun pointer saw that the ship had stopped and several direct hits had already been made, according to this account, he asked if he should cease firing, and was told by the commander to keep on. Twenty-five rounds in all were fired, the last few at a range of less than 3,000 yards.

When the Germans finally ceased firing one of the Ida's boats came alongside and announced that two wounded men had been left aboard the steamer. The submarine commander sent a boat over and found that both men were already dead, having been killed while lowering the boats. The Germans left the bodies where they lay and proceeded to sink the ship by bombs.

Two hours later the 39 opened fire on a steamer and trawler, but on diving lost them in the mist.

About 1 P. M. the 39 came to the surface again and sighted a steamer, on which she opened fire, but was answered almost immediately by a salvo from a British destroyer. The 39 had evidently met a sterner order of things and she dived, but too late.

ment also over a story from Switzerland that the Kaiser had forbade the use of a new deadly gas to be dropped from the air.

It is believed that the real reason this weapon has not been used is that the Kaiser considers what would happen to the German people should be start such methods of carrying gas warfare to civilian populations. There is every promise that in a few months the Allies will have a greater number of airplanes, which would mean that gas warfare from airplanes could be carried to almost every part of the German Empire. This means that if the Kaiser undertakes to make the people of Paris and London wear gas masks he might as well begin manufacture on a large scale for the people of Berlin.

GERMAN TANKS DISAPPOINT.

Unwieldy and Vulnerable, They Have to be Manned by Volunteers.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 5.—Further details are now available from various sources regarding the German tanks, several of which made such a poor showing at Villers-Bretonneux on April 24.

The machine weighs forty-five tons, and is so unwieldy that it is unable to negotiate broad trenches, and cannot move over ground torn heavily by shells. The tank is pointed at both ends, and is approximately 23 feet long, 9½ feet wide and 11 feet high.

The armor is of a poor quality of steel, and varies in thickness up to 30 millimeters. A direct artillery hit will put one out of action, and they are also vulnerable to machine gun and rifle fire at various points. The armament consists of a 2.2 inch gun forward, which fires high explosives and case shot, and six heavy machine guns, two on each side and two in the rear.

The tank is equipped with two 100-horse power four-cylinder poppet-valve engines, with an electric starter, and one man can control and drive it. Its top speed on good ground is ten miles an hour. A crew of nineteen is carried, consisting of one officer, three gunners for the forward gun, two drivers, two mechanics, ten machine gunners and one signal man.

The drivers and mechanics are volunteers from motor transport units, and the gunners are drawn from the artillery and infantry. These have double pay and rations.

cause he does not dare do otherwise, there follows the corollary that the consequences of failure, when it can be no longer postponed or hidden from the German people, may well be overwhelming.

The French Army chiefs still hardly dare to admit such a possibility, but I venture to suggest that it is already present in their minds.

Huge Forces Before Arras.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, May 6, (Associated Press.)—The opinion is virtually unanimous that the next great blow which the German Staff must deliver, if it intends to try to execute the promises made to the German nation, must come soon.

Many hold the view that the next move must come from the German armies concentrated under General von Below, fronting Arras. Some of its divisions were borrowed by other German armies for attacks to the north and the south, but these have since been replaced by others and the force gathered there is very powerful. From Arras, in the event of a German success, it could turn toward the coast or toward Amiens.

Since the breakdown of the first German rush the Allies have had time to strengthen their position. The unity of command which fused the allied armies into one and the terrific losses suffered by the enemy seem to have caused the Germans to hesitate, but it is impossible for them to content themselves with their present position, which are unfavorable for defensive tactics.

Another factor in compelling them to seek a rapid decision is the transparent fear of the increasing strength of the American forces, displayed in the deluge of German propaganda decrying the American effort. These forces they foresee may become a powerful instrument against them before long, and they are certain to seek success before the transatlantic army becomes formidable.

The Germans are fully aware that it is America's intention to throw her whole energy into the cause of winning the war and, despite their attempts to belittle American help to the Allies, they are wide awake to the danger to themselves.

LUDENDORFF MASSES MANY FRESH TROOPS

Austria Weakens Italian Front to Replace German Garrisons Sent West, Dutch Hear.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, May 6, (Dispatch to London Daily Telegraph.)—Reliable information compels the conclusion that the whole energies of the rulers of Germany are still concentrated on the effort to end the war by the gamble in the west and that that effort is of a magnitude and determination which it is dangerous to underestimate. In all secrecy Ludendorff is proceeding with measures designed to increase the resources at his disposal for a resumption of the series of battles, whose objectives still are the separation of the allied armies, driving the British from the Channel ports, and the destruction of France's fighting power.

Tremendous as were the initial measures, they have been widened and strengthened ever since the beginning of the offensive. I learn, for instance, that the German General Staff has made still greater demands on Germany's allies. Austria has been called upon to place more of its resources at the disposal of its masters. Although so far as is known, no Austrian infantry has actually been on the western front a very large number of Austrian troops have been brought into Germany, where they are doing garrison and other duties in place of Germans.

From the by no means inconsiderable number of Huns thus freed, there have been weeded out all men capable of any sort of military service at the front, and it is in these ways that the constitution of some of the many new divisions now in or behind the front has been completed.

In the other theatres of war there are only left sufficient numbers of Germans to keep up appearances. Especially is this the case with the Italian front, which in the last month has been depleted in order to help swell the great stream flowing toward the west. Bulgaria, also, has been made a minor tributary, though, so far, Bulgarian soldiers, as also a certain number of Turks, are held back in German garrisons. Supplementing all this, there has been a further combing out, which is still in progress, of the civilian population in Germany.

My informant, who has been in touch with all classes of Germans, puts the position thus:

"The German people have already lost so much during the war that they have become hardened also. In the weeks before the offensive they were carefully prepared by a newspaper campaign to pay a heavy price in blood. They are certainly disappointed with the results obtained so far, but here again you ought not to count too much on any immediate psychological effect. They believe that victory was so nearly within their grasp a month ago that the next time their leaders will be able to seize it."

So far as the military chiefs are concerned, my informant, who is in a good position to know, says that while they hoped for a complete break through in March, they had ready alternative plans, which are now being put into operation, in case such a decision should not be achieved. This view is supported by other well-informed opinion here, which holds that Ludendorff is prepared to maintain the struggle into the Autumn if necessary.

FOE CAN'T REPEAT HIS BIG SURPRISE

lone could be thrown into the offensive on the western front.

I reported the remarkable strengthening of the most important part of the French front, which had been completed just before the offensive broke out. Whether the defenses of the St. Quentin sector had been similarly doubled and tripled will doubtless be revealed by a commission of inquiry.

Advised of the gathering of reserves in the region of Hireon and Mezières—a concentration which might threaten either the Champagne or British front—as well as of certain symptoms of activity in Alsace, General Pétain took all the measures possible in such a case. When the enemy has a Winter to prepare in and a whole front liberated, as was the case after Brest-Litovek—an opportunity such as the Allies have never had—it is absurd to suppose that he cannot pull off a serious surprise blow. A certain measure of surprise was, indeed, inevitable.

Difficulty of Repeating the Offensive.

The way to meet it was: First, by the deepening of defenses to break the shock; second, by the thinning of the front to give a larger mass of reserves in hand; third, to organize railway and motor transport so that this mass of reserve, or part of it, could be instantly thrown upon the point in danger. All this was effectually done on the French side. No doubt the lesson is learned. Assuming that, would it be possible for the German command to effect again what von Hutier's army of Riga manoeuvre effected in March? To begin with, though the Germans still have large numbers, they probably have no such body of first-class troops available, nor have they any such secure line behind which to make their preparations and from which to start. Least of all could they recreate the moral atmosphere which led the Prussian infantry to accept the cry attributed to the Crown Prince: "The Easter bells shall ring out the news of our victory!"

Riga and the counterattack at Cambrai were small trial trips. It is possible that the Artois front had already been chosen for the eventual offensive when the experiment was made last August in the Riga sector, for there is a certain resemblance between the two fronts, and the same aim of seizing the main line of communications and pushing its defenders against the sea. The Winter months gave an excellent opportunity for drilling the immense forces concerned in the Riga tactics and for elaborating the vast mechanism necessary. The chief features of the plan were dissimulation of the attack till the last moment, a brief but very powerful bombardment—two hours of gas shells against the allied batteries, three hours of explosive and gas shells on the first lines, an overwhelming infantry assault by deep masses with limited objectives, and, finally, the systematic overpassing of these first waves by fresh divisions in succession and with frantic speed, so as to give the Allies no time to rally.

Nearly a million men must have been trained for this prodigious manoeuvre. A third of these were brought from the rear to their positions and thrown into battle within ten days. For three months the most minute precautions were taken lest anything should leak out. Every man was told that success depended on his prudence. The slightest sign of new military works was camouflaged. Troop movements were microscopically regulated behind the front. Only so many men must pass within sight of the allied observatories on fine days, and rather a larger number on gloomy days. Medical visits must take place indoors. No extra aviation must be shown. The artillery must get its ranges without exciting suspicion. Leave and letters home were completely stopped. Even the officers did not know exactly whither they were going, and, finally, the armies of the offensive reached the ground at the last moment. It was seriously and literally colossal, but, if at all, it could be repeated only with a like preparation, and the men who have broken this flood need fear nothing less.

WON'T OUST CONSUL AT LENINE'S BIDDING

State Department Satisfied Caldwell Has Done Nothing Wrong at Vladivostok.

JAPANESE OFFICIAL SEIZED

Vice Consul and Also President of Japanese Association Arrested at Irkutsk as Spies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—An official report of the demand made by the Bolshevist authorities in Moscow for the removal of John K. Caldwell, the American Consul at Vladivostok, was received by the State Department today from David R. Francis, the American Ambassador to Russia. The ground for the demand was that Mr. Caldwell and the Consular officers of the other allied powers had sought to interfere in Russian internal affairs in connection with the movement for an autonomous Government in Siberia.

It is not the purpose to remove Consul Caldwell, as the Government here is satisfied, as is Ambassador Francis, that Mr. Caldwell has acted with strict propriety and has not interfered in Russian affairs. "Our Consul at Vladivostok," it was explained in a statement made at the State Department, "has done nothing in any way that was not entirely proper. Of course, all the warring factions come to him, and it is his duty to report. He has not given any encouragement to any of them."

The demand made by the Soviet Government is looked upon as a move to force the United States to recognize it. There was no indication at the State Department today of early recognition of the Soviet Government. The traditional policy of the United States has been not to accord recognition of a Government until it had proved its ability to discharge its international obligation.

LONDON, May 6.—A Reuter dispatch from Tokio says that the Russian authorities at Irkutsk have arrested the Japanese Vice Consul and also the President of the Japanese Association on the charge of being military spies.

Official denial has been made by Japanese Consul Uyeda to the Russian Foreign Office to rumors that the Japanese are placing machine guns in Vladivostok and are arranging to increase their forces there.

MOSCOW, April 28. (Associated Press.)—Bolshevist demands that the American and French Consuls at Vladivostok be recalled have brought no official statement from American Ambassador Francis and French Ambassador Noulens. The definite demands made by Foreign Minister Tchitcherin were coincident with the arival of Count von Mirbach, the German Ambassador, in Moscow.

Regardless of the strong pressure put on the Entente embassies in the last few weeks to recognize the Soviet Government, which is making full use of the Siberian incident, the position of the embassies remains unchanged.

The Bolshevist demands on Ambassador Francis were: First, the removal of John K. Caldwell, American Consul at Vladivostok; second, investigation of his part in the alleged negotiations with the American Legation at Peking, and, third, the attitude of the American Government toward the Soviet republic.

Ambassador Francis has sent a communication to the Bolshevist Government regarding the alleged participation of Americans, French, and British in a Siberian counter-revolt plot in connection with which the Bolsheviki put plainly the question of the recognition of their Government. The American Embassy, the note says, carefully scrutinized the documents submitted by the Russian Government. In the American viewpoint, the documents failed to show any connection of American officials in these plots.

The American Embassy, the Ambassador continues, interprets the documents to show only that persons planning a counter-revolt contemplated asking the assistance of Consul Caldwell, Admiral Knight, and the representatives of the Allies in Peking, including the American Minister, but failed to show either the consummation of the hopes of the revolutionaries in this direction, or that the Americans participated or promised aid in any way. It is deemed unfortunate, in the present state of Russian international relations, that such flimsy charges should arise.

JAPAN'S HESITATION.

Doesn't Know What to Do in Siberia While America Opposes Intervention.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 7.—A dispatch to The London Times, dated Tokio, May 1, says:

"The chaotic situation in Siberia is to some extent reflected in Tokio, which is suffering from a sort of political paralysis, for the Government is plainly puzzled how to deal with the problem of rampant Bolshevism, although Japanese refugees from all parts of Russia, at Irkutsk and farther east, have fallen victims to the Bolshevists and have been subjected to indignities and arrest.

"The cause of this stagnation is undoubtedly to be found in the American stand against intervention. While the apparent success of American dealings with the Bolsheviki seems to incline the Tokio Government to go to extremes in the effort to conciliate the Russians, politically Japan at the present moment is in a state of suspended animation. She is prepared to restore order in Siberia, but the Allies' mandate must give her an absolutey free hand. The Japanese strongly resent the tone of recent messages from Europe exhorting Japan to intervene in Siberia and so worded as to suggest that Japan would be acting in obedience to the Allies' bidding."

GERMANS WORRIED OVER THE UKRAINE

Puppet Government They Made Peace With Couldn't Last—Not Confident Of New One

A LESSON FOR THE ALLIES

Russian Patriots Described as Waiting for a Sign Now to Rally to the Entente's Cause.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 6.—The Germans are worried about the Ukraine. They made peace with the Ukraine and the peace is inconclusive. They anticipated large food supplies from this granary of Russia, but the supplies are in the hands of the peasants, who refuse to give them up.

The puppet Government which under German protection made peace at Brest-Litovsk, and then was reinstated in Kiev by the German arms, has been unable to enforce the terms of the treaty. More than that, the German commander, General Eichhorn, has accused its members of conspiring to assassinate German officers and has had three of the Ministers arrested.

This government was overthrown by what is described in German telegrams, which are our only sources of information, as an insurrection of peasants under the leadership of General Skoropauski.

All this news is extremely interesting and not wholly intelligible. The origins of Skoropanski's movement are obscure, and the important question is whether and it is pro-German or anti-German.

The Germans themselves, judging by their press comments, are by no means certain on this point, although the Vice Chancellor stated in the Reichstag that the new Government had promised to observe the Brest-Litovsk treaty and the terms of the food agreemant.

From what I know of the personnel of the new Government, I should say it is distinctly anti-German and trying to make the best of a very bad job. Skoropauski was the commander of the Chevalier Guards Regiment in the Russian Army, was an excellent fighting officer and a patriot, but wholly innocent of politics.

Vasilenko, the new Premier, is a cadet, a Federalist, and a Russian patriot, entirely opposed to the permanent separation of the Ukraine from Russia. I spent an evening with him at his house in Kiev early in December. He is a gentle, amiable man in the late fifties, with a gray beard, a slight stoop, a quavering voice, and the general appearance of a typical Russian "intelligent" of the old school.

Vasilenko did not strike me as possessing the qualities of a leader. I should imagine he was chosen as Premier because of his conciliatory manner and breadth of view, which made him a useful mediator between the various groups; but the fact that the groups with which Vasilenko is most closely connected, the cadets and Ukrainian Federalists, have consented under the circumstances to form a government is very significant.

These groups are moderate in their national aspirations. They are firmly convinced of the necessity of union with Russia, and in internal politics they are radicals and as such should in the long run command the support of the peasant proprietors, who form the bulk of the population of the Ukraine and could hardly in the nature of things sympathize permanently with the extreme socialist schemes of the government that was deposed last week.

If these groups decided under German occupation to form a government, it certainly was not with the object of furthering German schemes, but with the idea of undertaking a patriotic duty to reduce suffering, restore order, and save what can be saved for the future.

The situation is very instructive for the Allies. The cadets have been the most consistently pro-Ally party in Russia. Shortly before I left Petrograd a few weeks ago, when the German troops were expected there, the cadet Central Committee indignantly rejected the suggestion that they should form a government under German protection. The cadets and the groups akin to them hate the Germans with an intense hatred and were hoping against hope that the Allies would give a sign, would declare a policy in regard to Russia that would give all patriotic Russians an opportunity to rally in support of the allied cause.

But if the Allies wait until the Germans gain firm control over European Russia, will the Russian patriots continue to refuse to participate in the internal organization of Russia out of platonic affection for the Allies? Time passes. The changes in the Ukraine are by no means encouraging for the Germans, but at the same time they suggest a warning to the Allies.

RISINGS OF PEASANTS HARASS THE GERMANS

Hostile Sentiment Shown in Exploits of Revolutionaries Who Seize Trains of Food.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, May 4.—The Rada in Ukraine that has been ousted found itself losing the support even of the better bourgeoisie. The anti-German feeling in Ukraine showed itself in the difficulties of collecting grain, (even now Austria is unable to raise the bread allowance,) in a thousand exploits of small bands of revolutionaries who sometimes were able even to seize and make away with whole trains of food already on the way to Germany, in an endless series of sporadic peasant risings which made it unsafe for the Germans to move except in considerable companies, and in arrests by various associations of persons prominent in helping the Germans.

On April 26 General Eichhorn issued an order forbidding meetings, threatening the newspapers and promising offenders the justice of German courts-martial. This was too much even for the subservient Rada, who were not consulted. April 28, during a sitting of the Rada, after a stormy discussion of the incident it was found that the Germans had surrounded the building and that nobody was allowed to leave it. A German Lieutenant walked up to the praesidium. German troops filled into the hall. A German Lieutenant shouted "Hands up!" and "Sit still!" Then he called the names of certain Ministers. One answered and was immediately arrested. Reports agree that he was the War Minister and was accused of being concerned in peasant risings.

A conference of landowners and rich peasants sitting in Kiev was summoned by a conservative peasant, Kovalenko, a member of the first Duma. This conference declared its sittings permanent, and turned out those of its elements with Left sympathies, who were instantly arrested by the Germans. This body is definitely reactionary. It is likely to meet even more hostility than the Rada among the poorer peasantry, and the working classes of the towns are necessarily against it.

The net result of all this is to confirm the anti-Germanism of the bulk of the Ukrainian population and to insure that that population will look not to its own bourgeoisie for salvation, but to Russia. The Germans have camped in a hornets' nest, and the more they seize the bigger will be the area of revolutionary discontent within Germany's military frontiers, the more troops they will have to use, the more unpopular they will become, and the more certain the eventual unity of the Russian and Ukrainian democracies.

COLLECT FOOD BY FORCE FROM UKRAINIANS

Photograph in German Paper Shows Austrians Menacing People with Machine Gun.

AMSTERDAM, May 6.—The Government instituted in the Ukraine under General Skoropauski as Hetman, in succession to the Rada Government, is a virtual dictatorship by this descendant of an old Hetman of the Cossack Republic. It would appear from an account of the events leading up to the assumption of power by the General given in the Berlin Vossiche Zeitung.

"The entire comedy," says the newspaper, "was staged on April 29 at Kiev in the congress of Ukrainian peasants, who expressed their desire for a dictatorship. At this moment Skoropauski, attired in a Circassian uniform, entered a box in the hall, amid great enthusiasm. The General then walked to the stage, where, bowing his acknowledgment of the loud applause, he proclaimed himself Hetman of the Ukraine in these words:

"'Only a strong Government can help us. I shall rely upon your oath.'

"General Skoropauski afterward issued this manifesto:

"'The Ukrainian State arose, thanks to the powerful help of the Central Powers, which, loyal to their promises, will continue to fight for the security of the Ukraine.'

"The manifesto also dismissed all the Ministers and re-established the right to private property."

The friendliness of the new Ukrainian Government to Germany was asserted with emphasis also by Friedrich von Payer, the Imperial German Vice Chancellor, in his speech before the Reichstag Main Committee last Saturday, in which he sought to justify Germany's recent drastic measures in the Ukraine by declaring that prominent Ukrainians had been caught planning the assassination of all German officers.

The German action had nothing to do with the recent change in the Government of the Ukraine, which was chiefly due to the dissatisfaction of the peasant population with the communistic theories that the old Rada had followed, Herr von Payer insisted.

"What effect the change will have cannot be foreseen, and it is purely a Ukrainian affair," continued the Vice Chancellor. "We can only wish that under the protection of our arms and with our diplomatic assistance the Ukraine may speedily succeed in attaining normal political conditions.

The removal of the old Government, the Vice Chancellor stated, had been effected peacefully. Premier Holubowicz and M. Grewshewki, the President of the Rada, had personally renounced the supreme power, and had left to their colleagues free choice as to whether to join the new Government.

Experts agree that there is grain in the Ukraine, the Reichstag was told on Saturday by Under Secretary of State von Braun, who returned recently from Kiev, in reply to questions whether the grain expected from the Ukraine really existed. He added:

"The experts informed us that in a small part of the Ukraine there are at least 100,000,000 poods, (about 2,000,000 tons.")

He said that it had been arranged that in the first two months Austria should receive two-thirds of the entire imports from the Ukraine, and that from June 1 Germany would receive two-thirds.

At present, he added, it was exceedingly difficult to make any forecast regarding the quantity the Ukraine would supply. According to the latest reports, about 4,000,000 poods had been found, but they had not yet been delivered.

A sensation was caused among the Reichstag members by Gustav Noske, an anti-Government Socialist, when he read a circular denouncing the democratic parties in the Reichstag which has been circulated in the army.

HATRED OF GERMANY IS GROWING IN RUSSIA

Soviet Government Not Overthrown, but Reorganizing—Kerensky Followers Back at Work.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHRISTIANIA, May 6, (Dispatch to The eLondon Times.)—On the basis of the fragmentary news lately received from Russia through independent Swedish and Danish channels, the situation as described in the Norwegian press may be summarized as follows:

Rumors of the overthrow of the Bolshevist government are unfounded. They probably are due to the fact that the Soviet administration contemplates consolidating itself in a moderate direction. Trotzky has developed into an advocate of a sort of a general compulsory service, including also the workers and peasants. The Committee of the All-Russian Soviet Congress at Moscow agreed to these proposals, which, however, are still being resisted by the proletariat at large.

Trotzky now is accused of the same treason of which he himself formerly accused Kerensky. The People's Commissioners are now being compelled to fight the anarchists in the street just as Kerensky's Government had to fight the Bolsheviki during the July revolution last year.

Next to the establishment of a new army, the most reassuring feature is that the officials of the Kerensky régime, who at the downfall of his administration refused to serve under the new masters, have resumed work. This has had the effect of restoring order to a remarkable extent, which is especially visible in the distribution of foodstuffs. The feeling that underlies this work of reconstruction seems to be a growing antipathy for Germany.

Many things which no amount of exhortation and speechifying could formerly induce the people to do are now being done under the inspiration of a steadily growing hatred on the part of the Russian nation for the German oppressor.

LENINE DISARMS UKRAINIAN REFUGEES

LONDON, May 6.—A Russian wireless message received here today says:

"The ex-Chief General Commander Ovseinko Antonoff has sent a declaration to the Government of the Russian Republic stating that the Soviet troops have retreated beyond the frontiers of Ukraine and have been disarmed, in accordance with the Brest-Litovsk treaty. General Antonoff announces the cessation of hostilities against the Germano-Haldamack troops, and resigns the rank of Commander in Chief of the southern republic.

"Nikolai Lenine and Leon Trotzky, in a joint declaration, have ordered single detachments in the southern republic to be disarmed immediately they pass the frontier of the Russian Soviet Republic, and that the advancing Germano-Haldamack troops be informed of this disarmament and that there is no justification for the transference of the fighting into the Russian Republic.

CZERNIN BULLIED KING AT JASSY

Made Secret Trip from Bucharest to Deliver Central Powers' Ultimatum to Ferdinand.

THREAT TO DEPOSE HIM

Also to Divide Up Rumania—Queen and Crown Prince Bitterly Opposed to Peace.

LONDON, May 6.—Count Czernin, then Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, paid a secret visit to Jassy in the latter part of February and delivered in person and orally the ultimatum from the Central Powers to King Ferdinand of Rumania, in which they threatened to dethrone him. This became known with the arrival here of the American Red Cross mission to Rumania. Count Czernin's visit to the new Rumanian capital was known only in the highest official circles, and the fact that it was paid is revealed now for the first time through a correspondent of The Associated Press, who accompanied the mission.

The reason for the visit was that the Germans and Austrians had determined to bring to a speedy conclusion the negotiations with Rumania, and had decided that a threat delivered in person by the head of the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Office would be more effective than reams of documents. So Count Czernin was sent on the errand.

He arrived in Jassy about Feb. 25 and went straight to the King. His manner was stern, unbending, ruthless. He told the King bluntly that Rumania must conclude peace on Germany's terms and do it immediately. There must be no further delays, and unless Rumania consented to this program the Central Powers purposed issuing a ukase deposing the Rumanian royal house and dividing the entire country between Austria and Bulgaria. The Rumanian King saw no way out, and a week later the formal peace negotiations were begun.

The last days before the departure of the allied missions from Rumania, on March 9, were a gloomy period in Jassy. The peace pourparlers had been initiated in Bucharest on March 5, and news of the signing of the preliminary articles was expected momentarily. The Court and Cabinet had been in a state of dejection from the date of Count Czernin's mission.

Queen Marie had fought bitterly against any and all peace talk from the beginning, and she had the support of the Crown Prince and a considerable body of the Rumanian public. The King and the Cabinet, however, saw no possibility of escape. Three days before the negotiations were opened there was a Crown Council, at which the subject of peace was fully discussed.

King Ferdinand spoke of the inevitability of peace and the hopelessness of Rumania's position. Most of the Cabinet Ministers agreed with him, some reluctantly, others almost too enthusiastically.

The Crown Prince listened to them impatiently. Finally he arose, and, addressing the King, said:

"I realize, Sir, that you speak for the Government, the army, and a considerable body of our citizens, but I speak for the Queen and every loyal woman in Rumania when I say that to accept such a peace would be humiliating and dishonorable and would cast a shadow on the hitherto unsullied page of Rumania's history."

The populace of Jassy showed great animosity against the Rumanian General Averescu, who became Premier of Rumania a short time before Count Czernin made his visit to Jassy, and who was generally responsible for the course taken by the peace negotiations. They could not forget that General Averescu was a former school chum of Field Marshal von Mackensen and a great admirer and student of German military methods.

It was generally believed that Count Czernin's visit to the Rumanian King was suggested to the enemy by General Averescu, who, a few days before, had paid a secret visit to Field Marshal von Mackensen, without the approval of King Ferdinand or the Rumanian Cabinet. Averescu immediately afterward became the acknowledged leader of the "peace at any price party."

The initialing of the Rumanian treaty, announced from Berlin today, will be a bitter experience for Queen Marie, who persisted for months in hoping against hope that it would be possible to avert the conclusion of what she regarded a dishonorable peace. She has never wavered or faltered in her devotion to the cause of the Entente Allies and in her hostility to the Central Powers.

The Queen received The Associated Press representative on the evening before the departure from Jassy of the mission. She expressed, as she had done many times before, her warm sympathy and admiration for the American people, her thankfulness for what the United States had done for Rumania, particularly the work of the Red Cross, and her hope that a fuller and better friendship would come with the end of the war.

As the Queen mentioned the end of the war she could not refrain from expressing her firm belief that the only possible end would be victory for the Entente and the reconstruction of Rumania. Her Majesty had expressed a desire that the correspondent take with him a formal statement in her own handwriting of her sentiments toward the American people, and she had planned to have this delivered to the correspondent before his departure. At the last moment, however, it was explained that the Queen had been so deeply affected by her farewells to all the Entente allied military and Red Cross missions that she had been unable to write the message.

ADVOCATE REVIVING OLD HOME RULE ACT

English Liberal Movement to Cut Short the Agitation in Parliament.

FEARFUL OF NEW MEASURE

Shortt's Appointment Considered Offset to French's—Report Cabinet Is Divided.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 6.—New phases of the Irish situation are arousing considerable interest and on the whole are believed to be making for betterment.

The selection of Lord French for the Lord Lieutenancy was a surprise, and London is anxiously awaiting news on how Ireland will take it. Its military flavor is offset by the appointment of Edward Shortt as Chief Secretary, the latter having voted against the application of conscription until home rule had been extended to Ireland.

The purely political developments of the situation are particularly interesting. Irish newspapers and one English paper, The Manchester Guardinn, today printed a letter, from Sir Horace Plunkett which is, broadly, a summons to the British Government to abandon its "two-fold Irish policy of conscription and home rule." They cannot achieve both, says Plunkett, who proceeds to say:

"There is one and only one alternative to the disastrous policy upon which the Cabinet has embarked and that is to set up at once a responsible Government in Ireland. The report of the Irish Convention has shown that it could do this with the support of a large body of Irish Nationalist and Unionist opinion.

"They should pass through Parliament without delay the necessary legislation as a war measure. The moment the bill is passed an Irish executive, broadly representative and composed of responsible men who would not shirk the burden of their brief authority, should be appointed and should have the task of setting up a Parliament as quickly as possible, of promoting voluntary recruiting and generally of carrying on.

"The Irish people, given their own instrument of government, would quickly show the world what is their real attitude to this war. It may then dawn upon Englishmen that we have in Ireland no problems except those they have made, not of malice prepense but through incapacity to understand us."

Suggests Revising Old Bill.

Coincidentally with Plunkett's letter there is published another from Harold Spender, a well-known Liberal journalist, who asks:

"Why delay to pass a new Home Rule bill? Have we not a Home Rule act already on the statute book which can be put into operation by the repeal of the suspensory act? I put it to those who have studied the proposals of the Irish Convention, is there any difference between those proposals and the Home Rule act of 1914 sufficiently grave to justify the stress and strain of a new parliamentary struggle? Is it a light thing at this moment to revive all those dormant passions of race and religion? Is it fair to throw upon statesmen conducting this war the tremendous labors of so great a legislative undertaking or to occupy Parliament with a task so perilous and gigantic?

"Beyond drafting amendments required by the lapse of time and financial adjustments necessitated by changes in Ireland, the home rule act could be put in force at once without any vital or essential alteration."

There is a strong strain of Liberal feeling in favor of some such course.

Hear of a Divided Cabinet.

The new Home Rule bill which the Government is drafting is already surrounded by an atmosphere of suspicion. It has been publicly stated in the press that the new measure will satisfy neither the Irish Nationalists nor the English Liberals. The predominating influences in the Cabinet in this matter are assumed to be Unionist rather than Liberal, and it is believed that the Prime Minister has had to make concessions to his Unionist colleagues.

The Westminster Gazette believes that the two parties in the Cabinet have come to a compromise between two policies which spoils both, and that if Lloyd George had been left to himself he would never have started out with a mixed policy of Home Rule and conscription.

The method by which the two measures have been handled from the Treasury bench, conscription being given precedence at first and then Home Rule being shoved forward, justified the theory of divided councils.

Dunraven Offends Limerick.

If the Irish question could be strictly confined within the limits of politics, the Prime Minister's political strategy, of which he himself has spoken in appreciative terms, might achieve success. There are, however, other factors which complicate the situation. Lord Dunraven, who was once a Freeman of the City of Limerick, has had the honor withdrawn by a vote of the Municipal Council because he approves conscription. The grounds on which Dunraven upholds conscription are summed up by himself in a few sentences.

"Many Irishmen," he says, "do not see that the possibilities of the future for Ireland are bound up with the issue of the war. They do not realize that if Ireland is to gain herself in future she must sacrifice herself now. I think that the Irishman who takes the larger view, who, while protesting against conscription without the assent of an Irish Parliament, accepts conscription as necessary for the successful conduct of a righteous war, will prove to be not necessarily the most fervent, but certainly the wisest and truest friend of his country."

COUNT ON VICEROY'S FIRMNESS TO IRISH

Dublin Papers Fear Vigorous Repression — Dillon Urges Anti-Draft Unity.

LONDON, May 6.—The appointment of Field Marshal Viscount French as Viceroy of Ireland comes somewhat as a surprise. It was known that the Government was experiencing considerable difficulty in finding a successor to Baron Wimborne and that this was the reason for the delay in announcing officially the appointment of Edward Shortt as Chief Secretary, which was known unofficially many days ago.

No one, however, anticipated such a purely military appointment as that of the celebrated Field Marshal. He name had been mentioned, but only in connection with a scheme far placing the Lord Lieutenantship in a commission as a way out of the difficulty, and even in that case the name of General Mahon was generally favored as a likely member of the triumvirate.

Viscount French is of Irish extraction. He has a seat in Ireland, is Colonel of Irish Regiments, and a popular figure in the country, but that is hardly likely to reconcile the Irish people to his appointment, for they will see in it nothing but a threat to put conscription into effect.

The Dublin papers generally treat Lord French's appointment as an evidence of the Government's intention to be firm. The Freeman's Journal says:

"Now all disguise is dropped and the rule of force begins."

The same newspaper hotly repudiates the suggestion which it says has been conveyed to America that Ireland is pro-German.

"Seven per cent. of Ireland's population has been given to the war," it says, "and when America has put 7,000,000 men in the field she will have equaled Ireland's effort."

Dillon Asks Anti-Draft Unity.

Anti-conscription speeches were made from the same platform by John Dillon, Nationalist leader, and Professor Edward de Valera, head of the Sinn Fein, yesterday at Ballaghadereen, in Dillon's constituency of East Mayo. Good humor and enthusiasm characterized the demonstration, which was attended by 15,000 persons.

Mr. Dillon said that if the Irish kept united and determined for another two weeks they would defeat conscription. It was an atrocious form of oppression, he asserted, to try to compel a people to fight for a country not their own. He personally opposed conscription, whether in Great Britain or in Ireland, and believed it was a great blunder to depart from England's settled policy against compulsory service, especially when it was not to defend the soil of Great Britain, but to send huge armies to the Continent.

It was impossible and unthinkable, the Nationalist leader declared, to attempt to apply conscription to a free and democratic people unless there was agreement among almost to unanimity. He earnestly appealed for a spirit of frank and friendly co-operation throughout Ireland. Without this unity was impossible. Committees throughout the country must be organized, he said, with a sincere desire to give fair representation to all sections.

If the nation's unity were impaired in the face of the present terrific danger, Mr. Dillon continued, the Government would be encouraged to pursue their "wicked and insane policy," and the discipline of the people, which was essential to the defeat of conscription, would be broken. Then the whole game would be thrown into the hands of the military authorities. The Nationalists and Sinn Feiners, he said, actually agreed that the whole struggle for Ireland's rights was based on the principle of her rights as a nation.

There was an impression in the country, Mr. Dillon asserted, that all danger was over, and this was a terribly false impression. There was no question that the Government had been staggered and no longer were so confident about the practicability of their policy as had been professed when the bill was introduced.

A powerful section of the House of Commons and organized labor of England had declared against conscription in Ireland, Mr. Dillon added, unless and until an Irish Parliament and an Irish Government were established. These things, enjnbined with united opposition in Ireland and the action of the county bishops had given the Government pause, but it would be a disastrous mistake to suppose that danger had passed. He suggested the formation of Irish committees attached to every church and chapel, so that, in the event of a struggle being forced upon them, the church could be the rallying point. If the central organization were destroyed, instructions would reach the people through the national organization, and, above all, through the priests and the great organization of the church, which, at this hour of supreme danger, had come to the rescue of the Irish people.

The Nationalist leader declared that he was convinced that it would take an army such as England could ill spare to carry out successfully conscription in Ireland. He was also convinced that the Government would split on the Irish rock, and, instead of destroying the Irish nation, the Irish would destroy them.

Professor de Valera said that his followers would unite with those of Mr. Dillon to defeat conscription. With reference to the issue raised in East Cavan, he said, there was only one arbitrator to whom the Sinn Fein would submit, namely, the free choice of the electors.

FRENCH'S IRISH STAND IN 1914.

Resigned with Seely When Officers Evaded Action in Ulster.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 6.—One of the most striking incidents in the career of the new Lord Lieutenant of Ireland occurred in March, 1914, when he was Chief of the Imperial General Staff. There had been trouble in Ulster, and troops at the Curragh camp had been ordered to Belfast.

A number of officers resigned, and General Paget, who was in command of the division stationed at Curragh, urged on the Government that officers who had family connections in Ulster should not be sent there with their regiments. The officers who resigned were ordered to rejoin their regiments, and General Gough, who had been involved in the affair, was reinstated without any condition except that he would do his duty as an officer.

General Paget came to London, and, following his visit, a pledge was given as to optional obedience, which General French, as Chief of the Imperial Staff, felt that he could not support, and he therefore resigned. Colonel Seely, who was then Secretary for War, also sent in his resignation, and it was in these dramatic circumstances that Mr. Asquith, then Prime Minister, stepped into the breach and took on his shoulders for a time the additional responsibility of the office of Secretary for War.

GERMANY GIVES PROMISE TO HOLLAND

Will Not Transport Military Supplies and Limit Amount of Sand and Gravel Sent.

THE HAGUE, May 5, (Delayed.)—In announcing to the Dutch Chamber today that Holland and Germany had reached an agreement, Foreign Minister Loudon explained the settlement of the German demand for transport over the Dutch railway by way of Roermond. Germany, he said, had agreed to exclude from transport airplanes, arms, and munitions, while there had never been any question of the transport of troops.

The Foreign Minister said that Germany had undertaken to limit sand and gravel sent through Dutch waterways to a maximum of 1,900,000 tons and had promised not to use the material for military purposes.

DISTRESS STILL ACUTE.

Appeal Renewed by Cable for Relief of Armenians and Syrians.

Although $2,659,108.91 has been cabled to Constantinople in the last fourteen months for the relief of war-stricken Armenians and Syrians in Turkey, many women are still starving, and destitution and beggary are common on every hand, according to a cablegram received here yesterday by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

"Greatly encouraged that American people are doing so nobly for relief," read the dispatch. "Much accomplished, but prices are enormous. Our agents forced to curtail credite to women, many of whom die for the lack of nourishing food. Large number in absolute destitution and beggary."

WILSON ORDERS AIRCRAFT INQUIRY

In seeing that all charges are probed and the truth got at.

WOODROW WILSON.

Simultaneously with the sending of his telegram to Mr. Coffin, the President forwarded this letter to Senator Thomas:

The White House,
Washington, May 6, 1918.

My Dear Senator:

You were kind enough to consult me the other day about the wholesale charges in regard to the production of aircraft which have been lodged by Mr. Gutzon Borglum. I take the liberty of writing you this letter in order to say more formally what I said to you then informally, namely, that every instrumentality at the disposal of the Department of Justice will be used to investigate and pursue charges of dishonesty or malversation of any kind, if the allegations made by Mr. Borglum are considered worthy of serious consideration, and I sincerely hope that the matter will be treated as one for searching official investigation by the constituted authorities the Government. Only in this way can the reputations of those whose actions have been perfectly regular and blameless be protected and the guilt, if there is any, definitely lodged where it should be lodged.

Sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. Charles S. Thomas, United States Senate.

The Letters to Borglum.

In connection with the Borglum report, it has been freely stated that Mr. Borglum was the "President's investigator" and that his investigation had the sanction of the President. The seven letters made public by the White House throw light on this phase of the matter. The first of the letters reads:

The White House.
Washington, 5 December, 1917.

My Dear Mr. Borglum:

Your letter of November twenty-second to Mr. Tumulty [the President's Private Secretary] has been kind enough to show me, and I had meant to write to you sooner about it. Of course, what you say disturbs me not a little, and I write to ask you if you will not do me the great favor of indicating as specifically as possible the weaknesses you see in our present organization in the matter of aeronautics. I would also appreciate it very warmly if you would tell me what men of practical gifts not now connected with the service of the Government you think could be serviceable to us in working towards a successful result.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, Stamford, Conn.

The White House, Washington,
January 2, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Borglum:

I have your letter of December 26. Knowing the earnest and loyal purpose with which you have written me, I have conferred with the Secretary of war, and at his request and with my own hearty concurrence, I urge you to come at once to Washington, lay this whole matter frankly and fully before the Secretary, and by your own investigation discover the facts in this business. The Secretary of War assures me that he will be delighted to clothe you with full authority to get at the bottom of every situation, and that he will place at your disposal the services of Mr. Stanley King, a member of his own personal staff, if you desire to have his counsel in your inquiries. The Secretary further says that he will bring you into personal contact with General Squier, whom you doubtless already know personally, and will direct that every facility of inquiry be placed at your disposal. When you have thus investigated, if the other experts whom you suggest in your letter of December 25 still seem desirable to be appointed, you can say so to the Secretary; and, in the event of any difference of judgment between you, which seems to me impossible, I would be most happy to have a report from you personally to me on any phase of the matter which remains in the slightest degree doubtful in your mind.

Cordially yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, Borgland, Stamford, Conn.

Report Referred to Baker.

Mr. Borglum's report was completed in January and submitted to the President, who, on Feb. 1, sent it to Secretary Baker, with this note:

The White House, Washington,
Feb. 1, 1918.

My dear Baker:

Here is Mr. Borglum's preliminary report. Is there not some one entirely disconnected from aeronautics and from those who are prominent in carrying out the aeroplano program whom you can ask to go over this thing with an unbiased mind and give us his naive impressions of it? There may be something worthy of our consideration and suggestions worthy to be adopted.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. Newton D. Baker,
Secretary of War.

A letter written on March 15 to Mr. Borglum by the President read:

The White House, Washington,
March 15, 1918.

My dear Mr. Borglum:

I have your letter of March 11 and thank you for it. I am writing in great haste to say that the whole aircraft matter is undergoing a very thorough review.

In haste,

Sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, Stamford, Conn.

At the end of March President Wilson sent this letter to Mr. Borglum:

The White House, Washington,
March 29, 1918.

My dear Mr. Borglum:

In view of your telegram of yesterday I am very glad to explain to you what my telegram to you meant. It meant this, that I have now instituted a very systematic inquiry into the whole aviation situation and think it wise that all processes of investigation should be in the charge and under the direction of the gentlemen to whom I have committed this task. I have placed at their disposal the material you were kind enough to furnish me with and can assure you that they will go to the bottom of it all.

I know your own judgment will approve of this.

Sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich.

On April 4 the President sent this communication to Mr. Borglum:

The White House, Washington,
April 4, 1918.

My dear Mr. Borglum:

Thank you very much for your letter of yesterday. You may be sure that the whole matter will be and is being gone into to the bottom.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Not an Official Investigator.

The seventh of the letters made public read:

The White House,
Washington, 15 April, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Borglum: I am afraid that you have for some time been under a serious misapprehension. You call my attention to the fact that you were not supplied with suitable expert assistance in the investigation which you, of your own motion, undertook of the aircraft production.

You will remember that at the beginning you wrote to me saying that you feared and believed that there were very serious errors not only, but serious bad practice, in the aircraft production, and after consulting with the Secretary of War I wrote you that, if it was your impression, you were, of course, at liberty to examine any evidence that was in our possession. I never at any time constituted you an official investigator. I merely gave you the right to look into the matter of your own motion, and I am sure that the letter which the Secretary of War provided you with he gave you with the same purpose and idea. We have wished at every point to assist you and to make possible for you what you wished to do, but we have at no time regarded you as the official representative of the Administration in making the investigation. If I had so regarded you, I would, of course, have supplied you with such assistance as you feel you have lacked.

You will understand, of course, that I write this in the most cordial way and only because it is evident from your last letter that you have been laboring under a misapprehension.

I hope that you will be willing and that you feel that it is your duty to put at the disposal of those whom I have constituted official investigators all the evidence that may be in your possession.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, Metropolitan Club, Washington, D. C.

The italicized matter in the above letter represents, according to the Committee on Public Information, matter underscored in copies of the letter furnished by the White House.

Mr. Borglum tonight gave to the press two letters which he had sent to President Wilson, one of them written today, after the announcement that the President had ordered an investigation of the aircraft situation by the Attorney General. The other was dated January 21.

In both letters Mr. Borglum contended that he had been hampered in his work of investigation and had been obliged to conduct his inquiry without aid. He accused the President of not having given him proper help. Among his allegations were that "officials who should have aided me had intercommunicated, attempted to mislead me and block every avenue I approached." He charged that General Squier had hindered him, and that he got no assistance when he told the Secretary of War of his difficulties.

This letter written to the President by Mr. Borglum today follows:

Text of Mr. Borglum's Letter.

Washington, D. C., May 6, 1918.

Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President U. S. A.:

My Dear Mr. President: It is something more than a shock that I noticed today the publicity which I could hardly interpret in a friendly manner, considering the order of the statement given and the meaning of your empowering letter to me, and I am taking, therefore, the only course open to me, that of addressing to you a reply, republishing your empowering letter, together with my first letter to you, accompanying my first review of the aeronautic situation.

In this I refer to the difficulties I met with in carrying out your wishes that "I go to the bottom of this business." Beyond that I spared you the record of petty intrigue, espionage, and a general system of official bullying that is carried on by, if not at the direction of, great departmental officials, certainly with their knowledge and approval. I had not been in the office assigned to me in the War Department forty-eight hours before I met with the intrigue of that department. Requisitions that I made for data brought untrue or valueless reports, and Mr. Stanley King, whom you had named to be my aid, and whom Assistant Secretary of War had turned over to assist me, began to systematically block the work I was undertaking, to the extent even of threatening witnesses who came to my office, Room 225, War Department, to give me information, and warned that they would give information to me at their peril. General Squier acted in a like manner, and every official that I approached and from whom I had the right to receive aid and courtesy, had, apparently under general instructions, entered into a common conspiracy to deceive, to mislead, and prevent learning the truth about the aeronautic situation. I do not presume to give the reason for this, although I fully realize the sources the periodical statements, false in content and in purpose, emanating from the War Department regarding aeronautics, would not look with favor upon any inquiry that dealt with the true situation, and so within a week, on January — I abandoned the War office and secured an office without the building that my investigation might be less prejudiced, and might get more accurately and quickly at the truth of the situation. Nor did I fail to inform Mr. Baker of the serious condition that prevailed, and demanded correction, without avail, this constituted my first grievous offense—I had demonstrated I at least would not WHITEWASH. The reports that I sent to you were true, and if they erred at all, they were not strong enough in statement, which a subsequent inquiry has proven and placed amply before the public.

My investigation was a preliminary inquiry. It was so agreed between us, and further, should I deem it necessary to have two assistant experts they would be appointed, and if there was any difference in opinion between Mr. Baker and myself, you agreed that I should deal directly with you. These experts never were appointed, your promise was not kept and my request, frequently urged upon you, only brought the appointment of men without knowledge, without information and wholly unfitted to inquire in a subject that had failed largely because it was conducted without information and knowledge; that is, had there been a few informed men even remotely connected with that huge appropriation, a few planes would have reached Europe.

I have pleaded for investigation, consistently and persistently, and I still plead for investigation. I have asked for nothing else but investigation. I have given months and months of valuable time, hoping that investigation would finally come. There has been a great deal of talk and a great deal of noise, but for some strange, unaccountable reason, it is impossible to get official action that will really investigate the aeronautic group. The nation knows its billions, or such part of it as they could possibly manage to use, is gone. The nation and all of our boys know that there are no planes to protect them, although Colonel Deeds told the National Press Association recently in great confidence that "we had 1,200 fliers with 1,200 planes, all ours, flying over our lines." An officer who has arrived in this country within the week, straight from our troops, informs me we have less than twenty. That they are French school planes. That they are not allowed near the German lines, and that our single balloon is hastily pulled down out of danger as the enemy planes appear.

I was among the first to call official attention to specific weaknesses in the Liberty motor. In spite of the resentment at the time the justice of these criticisms has been admitted by the Chairman of the Aircraft Board, correction made, and they are rebuilding the engines on those lines at this moment, but I had sinned in daring to criticise, and, as some of your most important and prominent associates in our Government have said, Borglum "blundered in telling the truth." I have said the Aero Department is full of profiteering, that hundreds of millions have gone, that factories have been created where there were no factories necessary, and contracts to the extent of fifty millions given to men who had neither rhyme nor reason for the remotest connection with the emergency of airplane production, but who had the pull of deeds and who are still floundering in their ignorance and incompetency, unable and incapable of fulfilling their contracts, still drawing under the present plus system upon the Treasury of the nation. I have said that aeronautic men of ability of the nation have been snubbed and ignored, unemployed, and that factories, or nuclei of factories, that could have been developed into producing institutions, who knew the art of airplane building, are even at this writing without the slightest consideration by the group who dealt out the colossal funds for their purpose. I have said the Liberty motors should never have been undertaken until other available motors had been put in production sufficient for an emergency fleet of airplanes built that our army could have used when it was ready, and I have said that this was not done because the group who were interested in the production of the Liberty motor were interested in the establishing and controlling of the monopoly of that engine for aeronautic work, and were not interested or at least have never shown interest themselves, I have pointed out that although the engine was still an experiment there were no planes, there can be no planes and there will be no planes until an engine or the engine is done and a perfect and a completed thing, so the country "believed that when the Liberty motor would reach its production we would have thousands of planes."

This is another gross fallacy; we cannot really begin the construction of airplanes until our engine and its working horsepower has been established. In other words, except for the required material experimentation carried on under various producers and paid for by the cost-plus contract system, enjoyed by manufacturers who are agreeable and acceptable to the ring, we have accomplished nothing in our aeronautic program. Charges could not be more serious. Charges more grievous could not be made against a department or a group of men. Seven or eight investigations have been made besides my own and there is no single, definite denial of anything I charge. Why is it then that this offends? Why is it that piecing the truth before the authorities fails for months to meet with response and finally with brusque rebuke, and why after the work is done and delivered a month or more should I receive a letter from you refuting the authority which alone brought me to Washington and under which I have worked so long?

Little can I add to what I have said, and there is little that I wish to add. I am now certain my services have at least compelled some kind of an investigation, and I have at least informed the country of its needs and the camouflage deliberately planned by a group of men entrusted with a great arm of our military machine has come to an end—I hope it has come to an end, but the chart of reconstruction which I saw the day before yesterday fills me with definite alarm.

GUTZON BORGLUM.

Complained Early of Obstruction.

The other letter to the President made public by Mr. Borglum follows:

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21, 1918.

Mr. Dear Mr. President:

I am placing in your hands today a report upon the aeronautic situation, entering as deeply as I have been able to do considering the circumstances.

The statements, grave as they appear, are based upon a mass of information available to you or to any one you may hereafter designate to receive it, except those who have used their official position to delay, mislead, and obstruct the nation's work and my effort to get the truth and so give value to my inquiry.

Before I had been here twenty-four hours I found that my presence and purpose were known; that I was watched; that officials who should have aided me had intercommunicated, attempted to mislead me and block every avenue I approached. I was in a quandary as to what was best to do, resort to the authority of your letter and demand a gesture of such authority from the Secretary of War as was necessary to secure data, or to hoe my row alone. I informed the Secretary of War of my difficulties—with the result that I have made my investigation without aid.

Further than this, I have disturbed no one. My own large personal acquaintance stood me in good stead; I gained entrance and secured evidence everywhere, and fortunately have been able to connect the broken links of a chain of dishonesty and disorder that runs throughout our production department. I have seen records, received copies of reports, been the centre of information volunteered from officers, members of Congress, merchants and manufacturers. I have sent agents to the factories, was refused or equally hindered by delay by General Squier, and so what I send here has been wrung from official Washington from men sworn to help, men whose whole lives would be benefitted by frank service in the work they are engaged upon for you and for the nation.

I am speaking in this way because I have only the faintest hope that what I have done will be or can be quickly and constructively applied to our departmental government. What I suggest will require men of courage, fearless prosecution, almost immediate seizure of the manufactories engaged in the work here investigated, without reference to the unhappy men who have crept into regular army officers' uniform and who will get in time a regular army officer's court-martial. I fear, unless something of this nature is done, failure in this great department and publicity investigated scandal will result, which, stepping upon the heels of preceding scandals, will accomplish little of a corrective nature—but further delays in this important work.

I believe that you might seize this whole bankrupt program, present the situation to the Senate Military Committee, request abeyance of its investigation, complete what is here begun, and then, under your own guidance, urge the Military Committee to prosecute its inquiry to the end—with your aid and direction.

This has seemed to me to be the constructive plan, to be the harmonious plan, that would result in rebuilding, would give us time to correct the present ills, and with men who desire it we can still deliver some machines in Europe. Sincerely and faithfully,

GUTZON BORGLUM.

WAR WILL OPEN TRADE, KAISER TELLS GERMANS

Hindenburg Holds Out Hope of 'Fresh Prosperity'—Zimmermann for Forcibly Extending Colonies.

AMSTERDAM, May 6.—"The last few months have brought un successes which will materially influence the world's development in the next few decades," says a telegram sent by Emperor William in reply to an address of homage from a convention of German Chambers of Commerce. "They insure our right to a strong peace, which will open new roads to German commerce and give us complete freedom for the development of our industries. Our sacrifices of blood and treasure shall not be made in vain."

Field Marshal von Hindenburg also sent a message, saying:

"If all the German people stand united, a peace will be won which will assure fresh prosperity for commerce and industry."

LONDON, May 6, (via Ottawa.)—With reference to cable messages announcing Germany's commercial preparations for after the war, the newspapers of that country are dwelling upon German dependence on raw materials controlled by the Allies and the consequent necessity of making the question of raw materials one of the most important at the peace negotiations.

Herr Ditmann, a former German Consul, advocates playing off the Allies against one another, telling America, for instance, that she cannot have potash unless supplies of cotton and copper are guaranteed to Germany and influencing Australia through her interest in maintaining her German wool market.

Herr Zimmermann, a well-known colonial enthusiast, in a remarkable article, goes further, and says that the remedy is a vast colonial empire. "We shall have to make our deductions ruthlessly from our military superiority after further great events in the west," says Zimmermann. "Our colonial demands must not be confined to the Belgian and French Congo."

Proceeding in this strain, he draws attention to Nigeria's exports of palm kernels and palm oil, and says that Nigeria, the Kamerun and the Congo territories are in a position to deliver immediately more than 300,000 tons of palm kernels and palm oil. He would conceive a German colonial empire in Central Africa and the South Seas which would supply immediately 400,000 tons of fruit and more than a million tons at an early date, thus making Germany almost entirely independent.

BELL WARNS AGAINST A HALF-WAY PEACE

General Says Only Unconditional Surrender by Germany Will End Kaiser's Tyranny.

OPEN OFFICERS' NEW CLUB

Hughes Declares American People Must Back Our Boys at Front with Optimism.

Charles E. Hughes and Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding at Camp Upton, in speeches they made yesterday afternoon at the opening of the new club for officers of the American and allied services, uttered solemn warning to the people of the country to beware of German-made peace terms and to settle down to a realizatinn of the fact that the war can only be brought to a just end through a complete allied victory. General Bell said that the Germans must be beaten to their knees and made to beg for peace, a peace such as in all history, he added, they had never before agreed to.

The new club, which occupies the old Princeton Club Building at Twenty-first Street and Lexington Avenue, is a unit of the Union League Club and is officially known as the Officers' Unit of the Union League Club. Its financial support is guaranteed by the Union League Club.

Just before Mr. Hughes began his speech he read a telegram from President Wilson, addressed to George M. Woolsey of the War Camp Community Service, who it was who brought to the attention of Elihu Root the great need of such a club for officers in New York. The telegram from the President read:

May 4, 1918.

The White House, Washington, D. C.
George M. Woolsey, 15 Broad Street, New York.

Please convey to the gentlemen who will assemble at the Officers' House on Monday evening my cordial greetings, and express to them my very sincere interest in the success of an undertaking which seems to me admirable in its conception, and which I hope will meet with the happiest results. WOODROW WILSON.

"I think that we all feel," said Mr. Hughes, "that it is a very high privilege to have a share in this foundation. Just now our attention is directed to the use of every means to provide as quickly as possible an adequate force to make victory sure. We are not counting the number of men, we want all the men that are needed. We are not thinking of a particular limit on the amount of money. We propose to supply all the money that is required. One cannot but be impressed with the present state of feeling throughout the country. The splendid success of the Third Liberty Loan is but an indication of an inflexible resolve. We hear reports on every hand that the people of the United States have settled down to a very firm determination that they will see this war through to a complete victory. With all that, we are placing emphasis on efficiency in the organization of resources, in the production of man power backed by adequate supplies of munitions and equipment, and every sort of provision that is needed to produce a force at the front that will insure a military decision in favor of the Allies.

"If I may be pardoned in the presence of these officers to make a suggestion, and it is an echo of what I believe I heard General Bell say some little time ago, that nothing will contribute in such great degree to the morale of the American forces abroad as to send over to them in every way that we can messages full of personal interest. We do not wish to send them our troubles, we do not wish to communicate to them anything in the nature of controversy which may go on on this side. When we look to the front in France we look with smiling faces of hope and personal interest and good-will: we look unitedly, without the suggestion of a division in the American people. In that way we can back up our boys over there in a way which will make every one feel not simply that he is fighting for the flag, but that he is fighting for those men and women represented by the flag, who, he knows, take a direct personal interest in all his experiences."

General Bell was the only other speaker.

"As the senior officer of the army present," he said, "it gives me great pleasure to express, not only on behalf of the officers at Camp Upton, which I command, but on behalf of those officers commanded by my associates, their profound appreciation of your kindness and courtesy. It is not probable that you gentlemen realize fully what a benefit you are conferring upon the service.

"There isn't the slightest doubt on earth that if Germany were permitted to militarize the whole of Russia and Middle Europe, Turkey, Bulgaria, and such other allies as she will be able to make in the future, the time would soon come when no power and no combination of powers on earth could stand up against her might. A thoughtful man who reads the history and the literature of Germany cannot help but realize that Germany's dream or ambition is to dominate the earth—there is no question about that, there is no question but that Germany is responsible for this war, at least the German Emperor—not the slightest—and nobody else is responsible for it. Other people may have wanted it, but he could have prevented it, and he not only didn't do it, but he failed to do it intentionally. He had the best opportunity in the world at least to postpone it, if not to prevent it entirely. He failed to take advantage of it. He wanted the war.

"I said that Germany expected to profit, and I say that we are fighting for ourselves. I mean just what I say, and the only successful conclusion from our viewpoint to this war is that Germany shall be completely conquered, and shall be compelled to surrender unconditionally. She has had a seven years' war, a ten years' war, a thirty years' war. She has never in her history surrendered unconditionally. She has always persisted and held on and fought her enemies, on more than one occasion fought against the whole of Europe in coalition against her, and persisted and fought long enough to compel her enemies to make a compromise peace. Nothing on the face of the earth but unconditional surrender will convince the German of today that he is not only unable but unfit to dominate the earth. He has got to be conquered, he has got to be brought to his knees as a suppliant for mercy. Otherwise, he will claim that he has been successful, and there is no telling what the result may be. Germany must be conquered. If Germany is permitted to continue her career of rapine and spoliation of other nations, solely on the theory that might makes right, there is no telling to what extent Germany will extend her power and build up her military oligarchy to such an extent that no free nation on earth could possibly hope to compete with her."

The first officer to register at the club was Lieutenant George E. Jones of New Orleans.

AMERICANS GET WAR CROSS.

Four, Including Brooklyn Man, Decorated at Hospital Near Verdun.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 6, (Associated Press.)—One American officer and three privates received the Cross of War at a hospital near Verdun last evening for gallantry displayed in the recent raid by German shock troops on American positions. The awards were made by a French General, who was accompanied by an American General.

The soldiers decorated are: Lieutenant Harry J. Kelly, Ottawa, Ill., and Privates Dewey D. Smith, Stecns, Miss.; George A. Hopkins, Baltimore, Md., and Aloysius Brown, 316 East Twenty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Lieutenant Kelly and Private Brown are cited in an army order, receiving a palm with the medal. The other privates are cited in the corps orders. Lieutenant Kelly and Privates Brown and Hopkins each lost a leg. Kelly's citation reads:

"Wounded in both legs and made prisoner by five of the enemy, he bravely defended himself and escaped with the aid of a few men who had run to his assistance. Wounded again, he had to spend the entire night at a trench end before it was evacuated."

Lieutenant Kelly was a reserve officer at Fort Sheridan. Private Hopkins is a Spanish-American War veteran and has a son in France. He was cited as a model of bravery. Private Brown's citation reads:

"He valiantly performed his duty during the German assault. He killed two Germans with his own hand when seven surrounded him and demanded that he surrender."

Private Smith was wounded while bravely defending his post.

The presentation took place in the ward of the hospital where the men are being treated, the medals being pinned upon their pajamas.

AGREE ON NEW DRAFT BILL.

New Registrants to be Put Low on List—Medical Students Exempts.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—An agreement on the bill extending the selective draft law to youths 21 years of age since June 5, 1917, was reached today by Senate and House conferees. The amendment of Representative Hull of Iowa, providing that the additional registrants shall be placed at the bottom of present eligible lists, was retained.

The House conferees accepted the Senate provision for exemption of theological and medical students.

Immediate ratification by the Senate and House of the conferees' agreement on the measure will be sought, that there may be no further delay in its use in connection with the new draft.

Provost Marshal General Crowder opposed the amendment placing the new registrants at the bottom of eligible lists. The conferees adopted another amendment, which General Crowder opposed, requiring the registration of men already in the military service who have attained their majority since last June 5. General Crowder thinks this work unnecessary, costly, and that it would be resented by some of the men in the service.

POINCARE GREETS OUR LABOR MISSION

Says France Fights the Battle of Democracy Against Militarism.

SOCIALIST PRESS CRITICAL

Reports Party Leaders Dissatisfied with the American Delegates' Attitude.

PARIS, May 6.—President Poincaré in receiving the members of the American Labor Mission today said it was a great advantage that so many branches of industry were represented by the mission. In speaking of the war, he said:

"France is a peace-loving nation, believing in the triumph of right over might. It is not a question of Alsace-Lorraine, but a question of militarism against democracy."

Professor Arthur O. Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins University, replying in French, said:

"America has learned a great lesson and is now wholeheartedly in the war. The efforts of France shall not be in vain. The American youth mustered into the army will fight to retrieve the losses. There can be no peace until the end of German militarism."

Members of the American delegation representing labor organizations had a conference extending over an hour and a half this morning at the headquarters of the Labor Federation with Léon Jouhaux, Secretary of the Federation; Albert Thomas, ex-Minister of Munitions, and other labor and Socialist leaders. The meeting was private, but it is understood from conversation with the members that the rôle of labor delegates in the eventual peace conference and the question of an international labor conference were discussed.

James Wilson, one of the American party, said that after hearing the views of French leaders he had been impressed by the unity of the ideas among Socialists in the different Allied countries on the subjects under discussion. He said he would report the views expressed to the American unions on his return to the United States.

Socialist party leaders are said by the Socialist press to be dissatisfied with the attitude of the American labor delegates, but the press generally is most favorable in its comment on the declarations made by James Wilson and George L. Berry, members of the American delegation, that the Germans must abandon autocratic rule before the Americans would talk to them.

The American delegates were received at the Embassy this afternoon by Ambassador Sharp, after they had lunched with the workers at the canteen of one of the immense munition plants.

BELGIANS' HEARTY WELCOME.

American Delegates Assured of Sincere Gratitude and Affection.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The Belgian Legation made public today a dispatch received from the Belgian Government headquarters at Havre dealing with the character of the reception that was accorded the American Labor Mission on its arrival at Ste. Adresse, a seaside resort near Havre.

At the luncheon given in their honor by M. Carton de Wiart, the Minister of Justice, acting for the Belgian Government, at which about 150 guests were present, M. Hymans, Minister of Foreign Affairs, spoke, in the name of the Government, said in part:

"When the United States a year ago declared a state of war with Germany, another bond of sympathy was formed between our two countries. The decision of President Wilson and of the American people did not take us by surprise. We knew that the people shared in the President's deep sense of righteousness and wisdom. We felt that the declaration of war was the normal outcome of a mature study on the part of both the President and the people of the moral aspects of the last year's events. We felt also that the case of Belgium, so ably described in a well-known book written by Attorney General Beck, had been of some weight in forming the judgment of the American nation. Confirmation of this was gathered last year by Baron Moncheur, our special envoy to the United States, whose reception all over the country was really splendid and touched us greatly.

"America's well known steadfastness in her resolutions appeared to us as new guarantees that the end could not come without Belgium being restored to her complete freedom and without the enormous damage she has unjustly suffered being made good to her."

Professor Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins University, thanked the Ministers for their hospitable reception. In his speech he said that the first condition of peace, on which the United States would insist, would be the complete restoration of Belgian independence and full reparation and indemnification from Germany.

CEYLON PLANS GREATER AID.

Considers Further Man-Power Contributions to the Empire.

COLOMBO, Ceylon, May 6, (via Ottawa.)—The Ceylon Government has requested the Chamber of Commerce and Planters' Association to consider what further European man-power on the island can be spared. The Government considers that every man between 20 and 40 should be with the fighting forces unless it is decided that his present work is indispensable to the empire.

Lieut. Townsend Dies of Wounds.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 6.—Word of the death of Lieutenant W. H. Townsend of the Royal Flying Corps, who was wounded in action, has been received from the British War Office by his family here. He was graduated from Dartmouth in 1915, and previous to his enlistment had been connected with a New York advertising agency. He trained in Canada, receiving his commission last October, and has been at the front only three weeks. Lieutenant Townsend was a brother of Captain Harry Townsend, one of eight artists sent to France recently by the United States Government. He was 26 years old.

Lieut. Keep Dies of Injuries.

FORT WORTH, Texas, May 6.—Lieutenant Fred A. Keep of East Milton, Mass., flying instructor at Tallaferro Field, died today of injuries received last week when his machine fell. He had been located here since November, coming to Texas after having received his commission at a Canadian field. This was his second accident.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 6.—Incomplete reports from the various districts of this island show that the subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan will exceed $2,332,000. Honor flags were won by twenty-one towns.

Few Liberty Bonds Lost or Stolen.

President William B. Joyce of the National Surety Company sent out a statement yesterday saying that the number of losses and thefts of the unregistered Liberty bonds that were as negotiable as gold or gold certificates were insignificant, although billions of dollars in bonds had been handled in the three campaigns. Some cases of losses in transmission by messengers, misplacements, and burglaries were reported, he said, but the total was small. About $47,000 in unregistered bonds was stolen from a fireproof safe, he said, while about $65,000 had been lost by misplacing the packages.

ALVORD AND BRADLEY LOSE POSTS ABROAD

Adjutant General and Chief Surgeon of Pershing's Forces Relieved for Ill Health.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 6, (Associated Press.)—Brig. Gen. Benjamin Alvord, Adjutant General of the American expeditionary forces, and Brig. Gen. A. E. Bradley, chief surgeon, have been relieved of their posts on account of ill-health, and are returning to America.

Lieut. Col. Robert C. Davis will act as Adjutant General, and Colonel Merritte W. Ireland as chief surgeon.

Brig. Gen. Alvord is one of the best known officers in the Adjutant General's Department. He was with General Pershing in Mexico and was also Adjutant General on the staff of General Funston at Vera Cruz. He was serving on the staff of General Leonard Wood when he was detached and ordered to report for duty as Adjutant General of the expeditionary forces in France. General Alvord is 58 years old and a native of the District of Columbia. He has served two tours as a member of the General Staff in Washington. He is an Infantryman and a West Pointer of the class of 1882.

Brig.-Gen. Bradley, who went to France with General Pershing as the Surgeon General of the American Expeditionary Force, is a New Yorker. He served as a brigade surgeon in the Spanish War, and as surgeon general of several of the army departments in this country at various times. He is 54 years old, and has been in the army for about thirty years.

Lieut. Col. Robert C. Davis, named as Acting Adjt. Gen. on General Pershing's staff, is a former Adjutant of the Military Academy at West Point and was an aid on the staff of Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, when the latter was in command of the Eastern Department on Governors Island. He is forty-two years old and a native of Pennsylvania. He is a West Pointer of the Class of 1898, and has always been in the infantry.

Colonel Ireland, the new Surgeon Gen. of the forces in France, entered the army as an assistant surgeon in 1891. He is a native of Indiana and fifty-one years old.

DR. GOLDSCHMIDT REMOVED

German Scholar Taken to Prison at Wethersfield, Conn.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 6.—Dr. Richard Goldschmidt, a German scholar, who was arrested at Yale University Wednesday, under President Wilson's proclamation regarding enemy aliens, was transferred today from the Hartford jail to the State prison at Wethersfield. On Saturday afternoon United States District Attorney Spellacy ordered the transfer at the request of Arthur T. Hadley, President of Yale, and some of Dr. Goldschmidt's friends, including Prof. Yandell Henderson, who went to Washington to intercede in behalf of better quarters for the prisoner.

Miss Phodda Erdman, another Teuton scientist who was arrested with Goldschmidt, is supposed to be held in New York City.

Brought to the Hartford County jail Wednesday night, Dr. Goldschmidt, who was formerly professor extraordinary in the University of Munich, and is now connected with the Kaiser Wilhelm's Institute of Berlin, was kept until morning in a cell.

Sheriff Dewey, learning that Dr. Goldschmidt was among his prisoners, and being informed by the United States Marshal that the prisoner was not a dangerous alien and should be treated with such consideration as the circumstances warranted, transferred Dr. Goldschmidt to a room in the jail hospital. The professor said he appreciated the change, as he had been extremely nervous locked up in the cell.

Degas Painting Sold for $80,000.

According to a cable from Paris, the painting called "La Famille" in the Degas sale went to the Louvre for the sum of 400,000 francs ($80,000) plus the tax and war tax amounting to 20 percent. of the price paid. The picture was painted comparatively early in Degas's career, and represents the artist's brother and his family.

BAIRD CONTROLLED ARMY WIRES ABROAD

Major Now Dead Was the Chief of the American Phone and Telegraph Service.

TRAINED 413TH BATTALION

Installed Signal System of Pennsylvania Station—Others on Day's Casualty List.

Major Charles G. Baird, Signal Corps, U. S. A., reported dead from disease in yesterday's casualty list from General Pershing, was the chief of the entire telephone and telegraphic service of the American Expeditionary Force in France. He entered the army immediately after Congress declared war on Germany and organized the 413th Telegraph Battalion, one of the first of the Signal Corps units ordered overseas.

For a number of years Major Baird has been recognized as one of the leading experts in America on matters pertaining to signal equipment for railroads. For twenty years he was connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and from 1910 until he entered the army he was in charge of the signal department of the railroad.

Major Baird's most important work in the railroad service was in connection with the opening of the passenger station of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the tubes under the Hudson and East Rivers. He was appointed Division Operator at New York in 1910, was placed in complete charge of the construction and installation of all the signal, telegraph, and telephone lines and every electrical equipment required. He also built the overland lines and equipped ten interlocking block stations, and then organized the operating forces, consisting of train dispatchers, train directors, telegraph operators, and signalmen. He remained in charge of those forces until he got a furlough from the railroad employ to enter the military service of the United States.

The 413th Telegraph Battalion, which Major Baird recruited and trained for service abroad, consists very largely of employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad who volunteered from all parts of the lines from New York to Cape Charles, Virginia, and from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh, with a few from the lines west of the latter city. All but one of the officers are Pennsylvania Railroad men.

Leaves Widow and Son.

Major Baird is survived by a wife and a young son. Mrs. Baird received a cablegram of condolence from Brig. Gen. Edgar Russell, Chief Signal Officer on General Pershing's staff, in which he referred to Major Baird as a "most able and competent officer, who bore the respect of all who knew him." Major Baird was 38 years old and was born in Philadelphia. Information received in New York is that he died of heart disease.

Sergeant W. P. Laffin, slightly wounded in action, is a nephew of Charles W. Laffin, Principal of Evening School 17, in Brooklyn. He was a traveling salesman when this country declared war. He immediately gave up his job and joined the regular field artillery. The battery in which he is serving is said to have been included in one of the first divisions ordered to France. A telegram to Mr. Laffin in Brooklyn stated that Sergeant Laffin was wounded on April 21.

Private Frederick L. Bittman, also reported slightly wounded, is a Brooklyn man, whose parents live at 454 Bergen Street. He was a soldier in the same field artillery unit as Sergeant Laffin. He is 21 years old and joined the regulars last June.

That the battery in which Laffin and Bittman are serving was the object of a successful attack by the Germans is indicated by the fact that Private Lawrence Listing, also reported slightly wounded, is in the same unit. His parents live at 78 Miller Avenue, Brooklyn. Ludwig Listing, father of Private Listing, is a German born citizen of this country, who has been active in all patriotic works in the neighborhood of his home.

Private James Puntillo, reported missing by General Pershing, was a prize fighter, whose ring name was "Kid" Fitzsimmons, when he enlisted in the army shortly after Congress declared war. He lived before he entered the army with his uncle at 103 High Street, Newark. He came to the United States from Italy eleven years ago.

Jeremiah Lehane, also reported missing, has two sisters living at 921 Sixtieth Street, Brooklyn. His parents still live in Ireland. He came to this country eleven years ago. He is a volunteer who enlisted in the Ninth Regular Infantry in the first weeks of the war.

The name of Private Chandler Waterman, reported dead of wounds, and whose address is given as Montclair, N. J., does not appear in the Montclair directory. No trace of him could be found in that city yesterday.

Daniel Willard, Jr., in Fight.

It was said yesterday that Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, had received word that his son, Daniel, Jr., who is in France, was in the thick of the battle at Seicheprey. Young Willard, it was said, served a machine gun for five hours under the hottest kind of fire. He came through the fight unwounded.

Private William Blake, reported yesterday as having been slightly wounded, is a brother of J. A. Blake of 1,826 Bathgate Avenue, the Bronx. His parents live in Troy, where he was employed as an electrician when he enlisted in the army last December.

LOW VISIBILITY HALTS ACTIVITY NEAR TOUL

American Lines Toward Seicheprey Bombarded — Germans Nervous South of Verdun.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 6, (Associated Press.)—Low visibility prevailed over the Luneville and Toul sectors, as well as south of Verdun today, restricting operations by both sides. There was virtually no activity during the daylight hours, but during the night the enemy heavily bombarded the lines in the direction of Seicheprey and those northwest of Toul, while south of Verdun the Germans displayed great nervousness, throwing up many flares. It has been established that the troops in that section came recently from Flanders.

Along the lines near Luneville the American patrols have been active and have penetrated the enemy lines once more. They found that the enemy had not reoccupied raided parts of their positions and that the town of Anserviller, with the exception of one stone house, had been completely demolished by the American artillery fire. Many German dugouts under the buildings had been made useless.

Prisoners captured from an observation post divulged much useful information and said that they had just come to this front from Russia.

Cut in Ships Going to Jamaica.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KINGSTON, May 6.—It is learned that there is likely to be a further curtailment in the number of ships trading between America and Jamaica, and that this will affect the food supply of the island. The time is not far distant, it is believed, when no ship will come to this island with foodstuffs from America except on application from the Governer and a license from the American Food Controller.

Major C. G. Baird of Richmond Hill Named Among Dead in Pershing's Casualty List

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The War Department today announced 88 casualties received from General Pershing, bringing the total casualties in our overseas forces to 4,967. The list contains the names of 6 killed in action, 3 died of wounds, 9 died of disease, 2 died of accident, 1 died of other cause, 4 severely wounded, 48 slightly wounded, and 15 missing in action.

The names of seven commissioned officers appear in the list. Major Charles G. Baird of Richmond Hill, N. Y., died of disease. Lieutenant Joseph Quesenberry died of wounds. Lieutenants Robert P. Cross and Chester A. Pudrith died of accident. Lieutenant Joseph W. Wilson died of cause not given. Lieutenant Clifford R. Livingston was wounded severely. Lieutenant William L. GERMAN AIRMEN TRY TRICKS.

Use Unsportsmanlike Means to Outwit American Fliers.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 3, (Associated Press.)—German aviators are now resorting to unsportsmanlike tricks in an endeavor to outwit American fliers. The trickiness of the German soldier afoot is emulated by enemy airmen who are marking their machines to make them look as much like allied markings as possible.

The Germans have taken to rounding off the corners of the cross on the wings of their planes to make them look like allied badges. The game of the German airman is to play around, get in a shot if he can and then run. American fliers, for fear of attacking a probable friend, must get up close to an enemy machine, usually after considerable manoeuvring, before opening a fight.

Here is what happens at an airdrome to which Americans are attached when an alarm come in: The telephone bell rings at the hangar, and the location of the enemy is repeated in a loud voice by the Sergeant. A number of young Americans, overalled, helmeted, and booted, swing in to their machines, the propellers are turned over and one after another the machines dash across the field. They take the air quickly and in less than five minutes from the time the bell rings the airplanes look like mosquitos in the sky.

In three-quarters of an hour they are back again and compare notes.

"Did you see anything?" one yells to another.

"One Hun away back in Germany," comes the reply.

"What were those three machines north of ——?" is the next question.

"They looked like French—you never know," was the answer on this particular occasion.

The Americans climb out and sit around and wait for the end of their tour of duty or for another alarm. The weather is getting warm now, but in the air it is still cold, so the pilots still must wear heavy clothing. Because the clothing is cumbersome, the airmen usually sit around perspiring rather than waste a second should a hurry-up call come.

The American airmen are using the machine guns which have been found most effective by the Anglo-French army. Some of the Americans are completing their training in flying in formations on patrol in fast chasers, while others are learning observation and photograph work.

The photographing machines are getting full opportunity to work freely, for the same youths who go out on the alert calls take turns in protecting the photographers while they are at work. And while the men in the machines taking pictures desire to be let alone, their protectors in fast chasing planes hope that they will not be, for if a boche comes near that gives the fighting airmen a chance for which they are waiting.

HONOR SIX POLICEMEN.

Three Mentioned for Valor; Others for Meritorious Service.

A general order in the Police Department was sent out last night giving three policemen honorable mention for valor in their duties, and commending three others for meritorious service.

Policeman Michael J. Morgan of the Fourteenth Inspection District in Brooklyn received honorable mention for bravery in pursuing a man who had attacked him. Morgan was wounded so seriously that he was absent from duty for four months.

Detective Sergeant Gustave Schley received honorable mention for bravery in saving the life of a stevedore, who was buried for several hours in a pile of coal at St. George, S. I.

John E. Ryan, a detective, who was going off duty when he heard calls for police in Clarkson Street, Brooklyn, received honorable mention for killing a burglar in a duel.

Conrad K. Walter was commended for stopping a runaway horse in Seventh Avenue, near 128th Street; Francis Miele for rescuing several persons in a fire at 65 East Fourth Street on March 18, and Policeman James J. O'Connell for pursuing and arresting a negro who had shot other policemen.

FIGHT ON ANDERSON AMONG 'DRY' FORCES

Prohibition Leaders Vote for His Deposition as Head of the Anti-Saloon League.

HE WINS A VICTORY FIRST

Blocks Attempt to Aek Governor to Call an Extra Session to Reconsider Federal Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 6.—For eight hours today representatives of various organizations committed to immediate ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment wrangled behind closed doors at a conference held in the Young Men's Christian Association Building here and then adopted a resolution demanding that Superintendent William H. Anderson of the New York Anti-Saloon League be deposed from the influential position he now holds.

Before this action was taken Superintendent Anderson had succeeded in blocking a proposal to adopt a resolution calling upon Governor Whitman to call an extraordinary session of the Legislature to consider anew the resolution providing for ratification of the Federal amendment, which was sidetracked at the regular session.

This was the ostensible purpose for which the conference had been called. Instead, the conferees, without the formality of a vote, named a committee to call on the Governor tomorrow and inform him that if he should think well of the proposal for an extraordinary session the temperance forces in the State would support him in his attempt to force a favorable vote on ratification.

Anderson Calls It Political Move.

That the conference here today is the beginning of a wide split in the forces that fought unitedly at the regular session of the Legislature for ratification of the Federal amendment is the general opinion here. With the elimination of Superintendent Anderson, in the event that the Anti-Saloon League should act favorably on the resolution adopted at the conference, the advocates of ratification would lose the most aggressive leader that ever appeared at the Capitol in a battle for prohibition.

Superintendent Anderson came to the conference determined to block the proposal for an extraordinary session, which he pronounced an attempt to embarrass Governor Whitman, and "to play him against Speaker Sweet," who has been talked of as a rival aspirant for the Gubernatorial nomination in the Republican primaries. Speaker Sweet, while the session was in progress, consistently urged that the Legislature bring the resolution to ratify the Federal amendment out into the open and vote upon it.

After Mr. Anderson had seen the resolution calling for an extra session of the Legislature tabled he went to the Executive Mansion, where he had a long talk with Governor Whitman, the nature of which neither Mr. Anderson nor the Governor would discuss. After his visit to the Executive Mansion Mr. Anderson returned to the conference to find the men and women debating a resolution flaying him unmercifully and demanding his official scalp.

"I think you will feel far more comfortable debating the matter if I am not here, ladies and gentlemen," said Mr. Anderson, who left the room and boarded a train for New York City.

The resolutions denouncing Superintendent Anderson and demanding his dismissal were introduced by Clinton N. Howard of Rochester, representing the National Dry Federation, of which William Jennings Bryan is the head. They recited an attack Mr. Anderson had made on Mr. Bryan and the Dry Federation as part of the reason that Mr. Anderson be deposed.

Resent Attitude Toward Bryan.

The resolutions, after commending Governor Whitman for his attitude on ratification and disavowing any desire to embarrass him, commending Speaker Sweet and the lawmakers who favored the Federal amendment, sailed into Superintendent Anderson. They read in part as follows:

"We unite with Dr. P. A. Baker, Superintendent of the National Anti-Saloon League, in repudiating the recent unjust and uncalled for attacks upon William Jennings Bryan by William H. Anderson, who has for years rendered yeoman service in the fight against the liquor traffic without pecuniary remuneration. We regard these all but criminal assaults, their advance distribution to the press of the State with sensational headlines, and their distribution to the members of the Legislature while ratification was pending, as a most unworthy example of ingratitude for the splendid service rendered by Mr. Bryan at the great hearing upon the measure but a few days before as arranged by Mr. Anderson himself. We regard his article in the American Issue of April 27 with its base accusation of a political alliance between Mr. Bryan and William Randolph Hearst in his campaign to foist the beer amendment upon the State and to turn it over to Tammany Hall, without adducing facts to support it, and in the face of Tammany's opposition to Mr. Bryan and his unbroken opposition to Tammany, as beneath the contempt of honorable men.

"We condemn the methods employed by Mr. Anderson in the name of the Anti-Saloon League of this State. We believe that he contributed largely to the failure of the ratification of the prohibition amendment in the late session of the Legislature by his assaults upon its members by his persistent and unprovoked attacks upon the Speaker of the House.

"In view of these long repeated and continued offenses which grow in violence and untruthfulness, the contempt in which we believe him to be held by the temperance leaders of the Legislature who have denounced him in open session, we, the conference of organizations here represented, do hereby repudiate the self-assumed leadership of the said William H. Anderson and declare that we can no longer hope to cooperate with him as one of the temperance leaders of the Empire State, and that in the interest of the cause to which we have devoted our lives, we petition the State Board of Trustees and the National Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League to remove him from this State and to appoint as his successor a man of known character and worthy methods, to whom we pledge ourselves to work toward one common victorious end."

America Must Rule the Air!

AIRPLANES by the thousands—enough to drive Germany completely from the air—

Airplanes—fleets of airplanes—in numbers that will win the war for the Allies—

That is the cry from England—from France—from all the Allies—their cry to America.

But, how can America answer this urgent call—how can she further speed production—how can she make the airplane the winning factor of this war?

Mark Sullivan's article in this week's Collier's tells you. Tells you of that big, vital step that America must take—the policy she must adopt to win a supremacy in the air as complete as Britain's control of the seas. Read this article—

"WHERE ARE THE AIRPLANES?"

You will find here not mere criticism but a constructive idea—an idea that will enable America to confine the Zeppelins to German soil—to protect Allied positions from enemy observation—to supply the final blow that will bring the German war lords to their knees.

Every American who has longed to see our airplanes swarming the skies of France—and of Germany too—should read this article.

On Sale Today

The German idea is an even greater menace than the German army. A remarkable article by Owen Johnson, entitled "The New America" shows how we must fight that idea. Also in this issue.

SALVATION ARMY HAS 40,000 MEN IN WAR

$28,000 Given Here on First Day of Campaign to Raise $250,000.

DRIVE WILL LAST A WEEK

Members of Organization Fighting with Allies Described as Individual Chaplains.

The Salvation Army War Fund campaign in this city was opened last night with a dinner at the Aldine Club, 200 Fifth Avenue, in which several hundred workers who will be engaged in raising funds during the coming week met and heard the need for the work and the methods that were to be followed as set before them by the leaders of the campaign. Of the $2,000,000 to be raised in the entire United States, the New York City District is to be responsible for $250,000, and advance subscriptions for a total of $28,000 were announced last night.

Colonel W. A. McIntyre, head of the Salvation Army work in the Central Province, said that 40,000 members of the organization were fighting in the allied armies. "There is not one man of that 40,000," he said, "who gets drunk or swears or leads an unclean life. They are all devoted to right living and are under solemn obligation to press that way of life on their fellow-soldiers. Every one of them is practically a chaplain in himself. You can't have men of that kind in the army without a mighty influence for sustaining moral, purity, courage, and fighting fitness among the men about them.

"They ask why the Salvation Army is butting into this war. We've been in every war since we came into existence. The first American soldier who put our flag on the wall of Pekin was a Salvation Army soldier, who later was sent to West Point, and is now an officer. We were in the Philippines, in Cuba, and Porto Rico. The first recreation hut was put up by the Salvation Army in Cape Town during the Boer War.

First Relief in Belgium.

"Our people were the first in Belgium under Colonel Mary Murray, daughter of a British Brigadier General, who was there when the Germans invaded the country, and began caring for the refugees from the very first day.

"We have 400 huts, rest rooms and reading rooms, with 800 Salvation Army officers looking after the men. We are catering in the huts to 500,000 men a week and preaching to 100,000. We cooperate with all other organizations. There is no time for anything but cooperation. We should all boost and not knock. We have all respect for the work of the Y. M. C. A. The Government is looking after the moral welfare of its soldiers as was never done before in the history of war, and when this war is over the Y. M. C. A. will deserve great credit for aiding in the work; but there is work for the Salvation Army, too. There are not enough religious workers to go around. It is no question of duplication; if you wanted to duplicate you couldn't, the field is so large."

Adjutant Raymond C. Starbuck, who was gassed while working for the Salvation Army in France, and Sergeant Barrie of the 18th Infantry told of the work that the organization was doing; and a statement was read over the signatures of a group of the American soldiers who are back from the front with service records saying: "We are glad to testify that the influence of the Salvation Army workers is cheering, uplifting, and altogether welcome with us, and of distinct advantage to the fighters. We have been there and we know and we are going back hoping to have the Salvation Army with us until the war is ended."

Elks Give Assistance.

Assurances of co-operation were also given by Harry A. Greene, Deputy Grand Ruler of the Elks, and by Frederick E. Goldsmith, Exalted Ruler of New York Lodge No. 1, who said that a committee of twenty-five Elks was organizing the entire membership of the brotherhood in New York to contribute and to do their utmost to raise contributions for the Salvation Army.

The plan of campaign was explained to the workers by H. M. Spalding, who will be in charge of the work. There are to be daily luncheons of the workers at the borough headquarters. In Manhattan K. B. Conger is Chairman, with headquarters at 91 Liberty Street; in Brooklyn Lewis H. Pounds, with headquarters at the Central Y. M. C. A., 55 Hanson Place; in Queens Judge Hurt Jay Humphrey; at the Butler Building in Jamaica; in the Bronx John G. Borgstade, at 885 East 149th Street, and in Richmond William G. Willcox, at 4 Van Duzer Street, Tompkinsville. George Gordon Battle is General Chairman of the General War Work Committee in charge, and the other members are Commander Evangeline Booth, George T. Brokaw, Mrs. William Grant Brown, Frank L. Dowling, Abram L. Elkus, John H. Finley, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Adolph Lewisohn, Colonel W. A. McIntyre, E. E. Olcott, James H. Post, William A. Prendergast, Mrs. William Cumming Story, Henry W. Taft, Samuel Untermyer, Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, George T. Wilson, and William M. Kingsley, Treasurer.

A cable message received yesterday at the National Headquarters from Colonel William S. Barker, in charge of the hutment work with the troops in France, announced that full arrangements have been made whereby the hundreds of Salvation Army women, now engaged in relief work over there, will place fresh flowers and an American flag on Decoration Day upon every grave of an American fighter, soldier or sailor, who has been buried in France since the war began.

DRAFTED MAN LOSES SUIT.

Supreme Court Upholds Right to Send Men to France.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The Supreme Court today, in deciding the case of Robert Cox vs. Leonard Wood, held that under the 12th Clause of the 8th Section of Article 2 of the Constitution Congress may raise and support armies by drafting the militia of the country into the regular army, which may be ordered anywhere in the world.

The case came up from the United States District Court of Kansas. The plaintiff, Robert Cox of Missouri, having applied for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that he believed he, in common with many thousands of other drafted men, was to be ordered beyond the boundaries of the country in violation of his constitutional immunity long recognized by the courts and by Congress. Judge Pollock, in his decree, said that he would grant the writ but for the fact that the constitutional question involved would have to go sooner or later to the United States Supreme Court.

EXPOSES BONNET ROUGE.

French Witness Shows That German Propaganda Influenced Its Policy.

PARIS, May 6.—Lieutenant Marchand, an interpreter in the French Army and an expert in German propaganda, was the principal witness at the trial of the Directors of the defunct Socialist and Germanophile newspaper Bonnet Rouge today.

He showed the similarity between the policy pursued by the Bonnet Rouge and that of the Gazette of Ardennes, a paper which the Germans publish in the occupied districts of Northern France, using the French language. The purpose of the Gazette, Lieutenant Marchand stated, was to influence the French population remaining in the occupied districts. Some articles which the censor had prevented appearing in the Bonnet Rouge nevertheless appeared in the paper issued by a German agency at Zurich.

Many articles that appeared in the Gazette and were reprinted in the Bonnet Rouge showed a tendency to ridicule the idea that German spies were working in France to discourage soldiers and dishearten the civilian population.

Lieutenant Marchand pointed out fifteen different press campaigns in which the Gazette, the Bonnet Rouge and the Germanophile newspaper at Zurich all used the same arguments, cited the same facts, and even showed the same style in composition and the same errors in citations.

FELIX WARBURG OUT OF JUNIOR RESERVE

Banker Resigns from the Advisory Board of Naval Organization.

SAYS IT NEEDS DIRECTION

Dr. Hornaday's Resignation, Secretary Declares, Was Reconsidered —William C. Kies Also Retires.

The resignation of Felix Warburg, the banker, as a member of the Advisory Board of the United States Junior Naval Reserve, an organization which advertises itself as "dedicated to the training of American boys for sea service," was announced yesterday. At the same time it was learned that Dr. William T. Hornaday, Director of the New York Zoological Park, had tendered his resignation as President of the reserve, though Dr. Hornaday was said to have later reconsidered his action. The resignation of William C. Kies, Vice President of the American International Corporation and a member of the Advisory Board, also became known.

In explaining the reason for his withdrawal, Mr. Warburg said that the reserve was in need of business management, and that inasmuch as he was out of touch with the actual operation of the organization he had decided to get out. He added that he made it a rule not to lend his name to any movement unless he was active in the direction of it. Practically the same motive inspired Dr. Hornaday, it was said, but at his home, 2,180 Loring Place, the Bronx, confirmation could not be had, as the doctor was away for a week of work in the North Woods.

"While I think the idea of training men for the merchant marine a very good one," said Mr. Kies yesterday, "I am convinced that it is a matter which should be handled by the Government through the United States Shipping Board, rather than by private interests. I tendered my resignation some time ago, but up to present have not been notified of its acceptance."

At the offices of the Naval Reserve, located at 218 West Fifty-eighth Street, a former stable donated by Frank Jay Gould to the organization, Edward A. Oldham, Executive Secretary of the reserve, was at first reluctant to admit that Dr. Hornaday or Mr. Warburg had quit the organization. He finally conceded that the resignations had been received, but added that Dr. Hornaday had consented to take back his resignation.

Mr. Oldham said that the reserve maintained a Summer vacation camp at New London, Conn., and a Winter course at Camp Josephus Daniels, West Palm Beach, Fla. He said that the last course at Camp Dewey, the Connecticut post, had been attended by about 600 youths, the tuition fee for some students being as high as $150 for two months. Major Willis J. Physioc, U. S. A., retired, a former Rough Rider, was in charge.

Mr. Oldham admitted that when he and Will L. Finch, President of the Town Development Company, in the Flatiron Building, had assumed charge of the reserve last October, the organization was in a bad way financially. Mr. Oldham said that debts aggregating $42,000 had accumulated when he took over the organization, but he was emphatic in declaring that everything had been settled, and that "the reserve now faces the future in fine shape."

Asked whether voluntary contributions sent in by patriotic persons to fit young men to serve the nation had been diverted to paying off the debts incurred through the management of the previous administration, Mr. Oldham declared that they had not. He said that all camp contributions were put into a trust fund but that contributions helped to pay the "very conservative salaries of the office staff of six people." Mr. Oldham exhibited documents showing that the idea of preparing sailors for the mercantile marine had been indorsed by Colonel Roosevelt, Charles M. Schwab, Edward N. Hurley, and many other prominent men.

MANTON ADOPTS CHILD.

Baby Girl Placed in Charge of Circuit Court Judge.

Judge Martin T. Manton of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and his wife, Mrs. Eva M. Manton, got permission yesterday from Surrogate Cohalan to adopt Marion Glaso, a girl baby who had been cared for by Mrs. Don C. Seitz of 239 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, and placed in Judge Manton's home some months ago. The child was born March 27, 1917. Judge Manton and his wife told the court they have become greatly attached to the child and will care for her as their own.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Browning received permission from the Surrogate to adopt Josephine Herbst, the three-year-old child of Jacob Herbst, a truckman of 1,027 Tiffany Street, the Bronx, who told the Surrogate he earns only $125 a month and found it impossible to support three children properly on this income. For this reason Mr. and Mrs. Herbst gave up their daughter to the Brownings, who are well-to-do.

Professor Garlan E. Lewis, teacher of chemistry at Rutgers College, adopted Marjorie L. Naylor, 7 years old, daughter of Mrs. Louise Naylor, a widow with two other children. Mrs. Naylor told the court she was obliged to travel from place to place to earn a living and found it impossible to care for the three children properly.

Mrs. Jessie May Burgoyne, a widow, of 515 West Seventy-ninth Street, became the foster mother of William L. Hay, a soldier, who is about to sail for France, and who lived at 355 Macon Street, Brooklyn. Mrs. Burgoyne told the Surrogate that she had known Hey's parents, both of whom are dead, for fifteen years, and holds a feeling of deep affection for their son.

TO RUN BOWMAN HOTELS.

B. L. M. Bates Corporation Formed to Conduct Business.

The name of the new company which will operate the Hotel Belmont and the Murray Hill Hotel, which passed under the control of John McE. Bowman on Saturday, will be the B. L. M. Bates Corporation, of which Mr. Bowman will be President and James Woods Vice President and Managing Director, it was said yesterday at the offices of Mr. Bowman.

The hotels under the direction of Mr. Bowman are each to be operated by a separate company, it was asserted, although Mr. Bowman will be the President of each company. Paul B. Bodan will be Vice President and Managing Director of the Hotel Manhattan, and George W. Sweeney, who is at present Vice President of the Hotel Biltmore, will be Vice President and Managing Director of the Hotel Commodore when it is completed.

Mr. Bowman and Mr. Bates denied yesterday a rumor that a union of their hotel interests was contemplated in the immediate future with other large hotels in this city.

LEWIS DECIDES NOT TO RUN AGAIN

Attorney General Will Not Seek Re-election, and So Notifies Whitman.

MAY SEEK GOVERNORSHIP

Refuses to Give Reason for His Action—First Break in Republican Third-Term Slate.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 6.—Attorney General Merton E. Lewis tonight sent a letter to Governor Whitman informing him that he would not seek renomination to the office he now holds, to which he was elected by one of the biggest pluralities ever received by a Republican candidate in this State.

Mr. Lewis was unwilling tonight to shed any light on the reasons which prompted him to take his name off the Whitman primary slate, on which, the Governor recently announced, were to go the names of all the present elective State officers. It is believed here that a statement will be forthcoming from Mr. Lewis before many days announcing that he will enter the Republican primaries to contend with Governor Whitman for the gubernatorial nomination. The Attorney General issued this statement tonight:

"The question as to whether or not I am to be a candidate for renomination in the September primaries for the office of Attorney General has been a matter of some discussion and of much thought on my part. After careful consideration of the matter, I have concluded that I will not be a candidate for the office, and I have so advised Governor Whitman in a letter which I have written to him today, which reads as follows:

"'My Dear Governor: Some time ago you asked me if I would again become a candidate for Attorney General. I told you at the time that I had not given the matter sufficient consideration and that I would not be able to give you my answer until later. I am sorry that the delay has occurred, but I have now reached the conclusion that I cannot accept a renomination for the office. I am sorry that I have not been able to advise you of my conclusion earlier.'"

Mr. Lewis was asked gether he was retiring as a candidate for Attorney General in order to enter the Gubernatorial race.

"I do not feel that I should add anything to my statement at this time," was his reply.

Governor Whitman, when asked tonight what he thought of the decision reached by Mr. Lewis, said:

"Attorney General Lewis has made a splendid record in his present office, and would have made a strong candidate. I am very sorry that he has decided not to seek a renomination."

The Governor was asked if he thought the Attorney General's action was due to a determination to become a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination. Mr. Whitman said he could not speak for Mr. Lewis. The Governor, however, does not believe his action to be fraught with such significance.

The action of Mr. Lewis marks a break in the "office holders' entente." Early in the year Governor Whitman, after talking matters over with the present elective State officials, caused the statement to be made that all of them would enter the Republican primaries and make their fight together. With the Governor, all would be third-term aspirants, with the exception of Attorney General Lewis, who was first elected to his present position by joint vote of the Senate and Assembly after Egburt E. Woodbury retired as Attorney General on account of illness early last year, and who was elected by popular vote to the office he now holds only last November.

There was a report at the Capitol tonight that other members of the "office holders' entente" would follow the example of Mr. Lewis. The political relations between Governor Whitman on the one hand and Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo and State Treasurer James L. Wells on the other are known to be less cordial than earlier in the year.

Should Mr. Lewis determine to seek the nomination for Governor his action undoubtedly would have an effect on the Democratic prospects. William R. Hearst would be encouraged to make a determined drive for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and, failing, enter the fight as an independent candidate.

Mr. Hearst's aspirations to become a candidate for Governor this Fall are known to be largely the outgrowth of attacks made on him in connection with the disclosures in the Bolo Pacha case. The investigation of the treasonable activities in this country of the French adventurer, who since has gone to a traitor's death, was conducted by the Attorney General's office, Mr. Hearst, it is known, felt keenly the free use that was made of his name in the Attorney General's report, and after he had failed to obtain from Mr. Lewis or Governor Whitman any statement to offset inferences that were drawn in some quarters from what was said in the report, let it be known that he would seek vindication at the polls if Mr. Lewis should become a candidate for re-election.

SOCIALIST AID FOR I. W. W.

But Their Party Denies Raising Funds for Chicago Defendants.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Benjamin Schrager, editor of publications issued by the Industrial Workers of the World, and a defendant at the trial of 112 leaders of the organization for violation of the Espionage Act, announced today that an agreement had been entered into with the National Socialist Party whereby that body was raising defense funds for the I. W. W.

The I. W. W. defendants who are on trial for seditious conspiracy suffered two defeats today in rulings by Judge Landis on admission of evidence presented for the Government. Pamphlets ordered published by individual members shortly before America entered the war and other printed matter which had not been indosed by general officers were read into the records.

Schraeger's assertion was denied at Socialist headquarters tonight. The following statement was issued:

"The Socialist Party is not collecting funds for the defense of the I. W. W., but individual Socialists have undoubtedly contributed to the defense of the I. W. W. Socialists always try to the best of their ability to assist persons charged with alleged offenses growing out of their activities in the labor movement, to make any adequate defense, and to secure a fair trial."

Just before adjournment the Government sprung a surprise by reading into the records a petition signed by nearly a hundred of the leaders of the I. W. W. demanding return of all papers seized in the nation-wide raid last Fall. This petition some time ago was denied by the Court. In it the members had explained why they were the rightful owners of the matter. Thus the Government, by a short cut, established the identity and connections with the I. W. W. of the members. It was stated that the move would save days of technical debate.

SOCIALISTS HERE DIVIDED.

Native-Born Members of the Party Are Against Anti-War Platform.

Reports from Chicago that the Illinois State Convention of the Socialist Party had indorsed the St. Louis platform of last May, which declared hostility to America's part in the war, and had demanded the immediate return of our troops from France, aroused considerable interest among New York Socialists yesterday. The New York State Convention will be held June 29 and 30 and it is uncertain what position the meeting will take on the question of the war.

A man who has long been prominent in the affairs of the party, and who has been a supporter of President Wilson's position in the war ever since America's entry, said yesterday that there was considerable evidence that many Socialists throughout the country were strongly dissatisfied with the St. Louis platform and would favor a revision, but that it might be expected that in several States the opponents of the war would continue to hold the upper hand.

"To a certain extent the attitude of the party groups toward the war is a question of nationality," said this man. "In general it may be said that the majority of the native American Socialists are now in favor of supporting President Wilson's position. The Bohemian and Finnish Socialists are also anti-German and pro-war, and the Jewish Socialists likewise, at least in New York."

There was some dissent from the reported statement of Adolph Germer, National Secretary, that the present dues-paying membership of 85,000 represented a falling off. It was said that the membership varied from month to month, owing to irregular payment dues, but that a year ago it had been only 66,000.

MURDER NEAR UPTON IS LAID TO HATRED

Victims of Man Who Escaped Identified as Widow and a Soldier.

DUE TO 'WHITE HAND' BAND

Member of Brooklyn Group Who Did the Shooting Is Known to Military Authorities.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, Long Island, May 6.—The cantonment authorities made known today the identities of the man and woman who were shot to death in a field north of the infantry section late yesterday, and some of the information they had gleaned in connection with the murder. The victims of the shooting, which was done by a man who escaped but whose name is known, were Mrs. J. Harrity, 30 years old, a widow, who lived at 37 Fourth Street, Brooklyn, and Private Michael Maloney, 26, of the Second Company Outgoing Casuals, who lived at 46 Fourth Street, Brooklyn, before he was drafted recently. Mrs. Harrity was killed by a bullet which sped through a handbag with which she tried to protect her face, and Maloney's death resulted from bullets which penetrated his chest and face.

Although Major H. H. Walker, the cantonment Provost Marshal, declined to state whether the escaped murderer was a soldier or a civilian, he did declare that persons concerned in the shooting were affiliated with what is known in Brooklyn as the "White Hand" band. He said he had communicated the names and addresses of the murdered man and woman to the Brooklyn police the moment he obtained their identities yesterday, but would not reveal what information he received in return. It was a murder of hatred, Major Walker averred.

Mrs. Harrity came to camp yesterday on the train that reached here at 1 P. M. Maloney met her and they walked about the cantonment and reached his baracks at 3 o'clock. After they had had luncheon Maloney told some of the other men in his company that he was going for a walk. About 5:30 sentries who were patrolling the woods about a mile north of the infantry section heard two shots and ran out into the open field. As they soon learned, the man who escaped had met Mrs. Harrity and Maloney and fired two shots at the latter, one entering his chest and the other his left cheek. Mrs. Harrity started to walk away with the man at her side, but after they had gone a few steps she started to run and the man fired a bullet into her right cheek. It emerged behind the left ear.

The murderer, seeing the sentries approaching him, made for a thicket and managed to escape. The bodies of Mrs. Harrity and Maloney were but fifteen feet apart, that of Mrs. Harrity being concealed by bushes. The sentry who examined Mrs. Harrity's body while his companions went in pursuit of the escaping man looked about to account for the two shots, and soon stumbled over the form of Maloney. Both deaths had been instantaneous. As soon as Major Walker got word of the shooting he ordered out companies of mounted military police, who searched the woods and nearby roads and stopped all soldiers from leaving the cantonment. Nearby towns were notified of the murder and a meagre description of the missing man was furnished railroad station agents.

An inspection of all rifles was ordered and two brigades of men were hastily assembled. Not one rifle was found that had been used. Swarms of soldiers and many visiting civilians tried to reach the scene of the murder, but the roads were blocked by the military police. The bodies were removed to the base hospital morgue, and the relatives of both Mrs. Harrity and Maloney notified of their deaths. No one representing either had reached camp up to a late hour today.

Major Walker questioned many soldiers. He declared the condition of the clothing of both Mrs. Harrity and Maloney showed that there had been no struggle of any sort. Mrs. Harrity's clothing was of black, and she gave the appearance of being a woman in moderate circumstances. Papers in Mrs. Harrity's bag revealed her identity, and Maloney's identification card, which is carried by all soldiers, was found in his pocket.

Officers from Camp Upton yesterday inspected the flat of Mrs. Harrity, 37 Fourth Street, Brooklyn, near the Gowanus Canal, and instructed members of her family to give out no information. She lived on the fourth floor of a tenement house with her three children, the oldest of whom is James, aged 15. Her husband died three months ago, leaving her a pension from his employer and insurance.

The officers also questioned Maloney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Maloney, who live at No. 46, directly across the street. They said their son was 26 years old and had worked for the Street Cleaning Department before he was drafted. Mrs. Maloney said she had planned to go to Camp Upton with Mrs. Harrity on Sunday, but had decided not to go when she received a letter from her son urging her instead to come on "Mothers' Day," next Sunday, when, he said, they would have more time to visit together. Mrs. Harrity said that she would go to the camp anyway. Mr. Maloney said he thought robbery was the motive, because he knew Mrs. Harrity carried money with her. He said his son had known Mrs. Harrity for several years.

SLATER BILL IS SIGNED.

Boys Between 16 and 19 Now Compelled to Attend Military Drills.

ALBANY, May 6.—The military training law was made more drastic today when Governor Whitman signed the Slater bill, requiring boys between 16 and 19 years of age to attend drill and perform military duties.

Compliance with the requirements of the new law entitles the youth to a certificate, without which he cannot attend public or private school or obtain employment.

SENATE PASSES BILL AIMED AT THE I. W. W.

King-Walsh Measure Forbids Any Propaganda That Retards Prosecution of War.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The Senate, by a viva voce vote, today passed the King-Walsh bill, designed to suppress disloyal organizations. It is admittedly aimed at the I. W. W. Under the broad provisions of the measure, no organization is allowed to urge or practice anything that in any way retards the prosecution of the war against Germany.

One clause of the measure, as passed, gives the Postmaster General the right to exclude propaganda of any organization or individual teaching or advising or defending the use, without lawful authority, of physical force as a means of "accomplishing any governmental, social, industrial, or economic change." This is directed against strike propaganda which the I. W. W. has diligently projected since the start of the war.

Senator Borah wanted to know whether the provision against allowing propaganda to go through the mails might not give the Attorney General too broad authority.

"We do not want pro-German propaganda to be running through the mails," argued Senator Borah, "yet we do not want to put dictatorial power in the hands of the Postoffice Department. I want to be sure that the power will not be abused."

Under the bill, owners or agents of property rented to organizations holding "unlawful association" are subject to the same penalty as the sedition offenders—one year in prison or $500 fine, or both.

Who Discovered RICORO?

"One of our regular patrons discovered Ricoro," said the Box Office Man at the Palace.

"He came in just before the show and asked for 'a pair of the best in the house.'

"'Sold out,' I began, and then I remembered two in the fourth that had just been returned.

"'Thanks,' he said, handing me a fine looking cigar.

"That cigar sweetened up my whole evening.

"Next week he came in again and gave me another.

"'These are mighty good cigars—what's the make?' I asked.

"'Ricoro—7c,' said he.

"I was so surprised, I forgot to charge him a war tax and had to pay it myself, but the information was cheap at that."

It Gives You the Telephones You Need

Because of the shortage of extension equipment and the shortage of men, the need for interior telephones is sharper than ever before.

The automatic telephones of the P. A. X.—the Private Automatic Exchange—relieve both shortages; they give you unfailing and faster interior service, day and night, without operators.

In larger organizations the P. A. X. saves the salaries of one or more girls.

In every organization it makes men more effective because its prompt service invites and increases interior calls; and increased telephoning decreases the waste and loss of time due to walking about to get things done.

Whether you use 500 telephones or 15, the P. A. X. saves you money and time—and betters your city service.

Your incoming calls are now often annoyingly delayed because your rented telephones are being used for organization calls.

The annoyance is your customer's, but the loss is yours.

The P. A. X. keeps your rented telephones cleared for action all the time.

And if, during city calls, you have to ask some one in your organization for information, you can do so in a few seconds with the P. A. X.—without having to hang up and call back.

These advantages mean more than convenience—they mean the service that builds good will.

Hundreds of organizations, large and small, use the P. A. X. and constantly add to their equipment because every P. A. X. telephone saves time for the entire organization and speeds up work.

Our Mr. Roger's office, at 21 East 40th Street, Telephone Murray Hill 3209, will gladly furnish detailed information.

"People who believe that men do not love, have evidently never met a man who was heroically wearing a necktie that his wife had picked out for him."
Personality.

What a slander!

Everybody knows that the feminine taste in personal adornment is superior; but the difficulty lies in the fact that too often the wife doesn't make her selection in a man's store.

As a suggestion, we mention our Italian Grenadines—the finest silk that can be made on hand looms—and their "beauty" isn't all in "good looks" either! They're just as durable as the popular knitted kind, which, along with these Italian Grenadines, are ideal for wear with soft collars.

Soft collars, you know, are already running "neck-and-neck" with the stiff kind, trying to save starch for munitions. Ask to see the soft "Shires."

YANKEES, AIDED BY PING BODIE'S CUDGEL, WIN THIRD IN A ROW FROM RED SOX

BODIE'S BAT BUMPS BOSTON TO DEFEAT

Ping Leads Uprising Against Red Sox and Lands Yanks in Front by 10 to 3.

EFFORTS OF MAYS FUTILE

Underhand Shoots of Visitor Riddled by Revived New York Clan—Ruth in Spotlight Again.

Ping Bodie personally conducted an uprising against the Boston Red Sox at the Polo Grounds yesterday and thumped in most of the runs in the exhilarating batting spree in which the Yanks upset the Bostonians by a 10 to 3 score. Bodie curled his trusty bat around the ball hard and often. He drove in five runs, scored another himself and was galloping the bases with such wild abandon that the Red Sox were so badly rattled that two other runs trickled over. There was only one run of the Yanks in which Ping did not have a hand or foot.

This was the third straight shock which the Yanks have handed the Boston club. Huggins had his players on their toes and there is a big improvement in their playing. The pitchers are getting on the job and the batters have removed all the cinders from their eyes and are lacing all kinds of pitching. Bodie, Baker, Pipp, and Peck cuffed the ball all over the lot until it was long after time for the cows to come home.

The Yanks riddled Carl Mays, one of Barrow's best flingers, and drove him from the box in the fifth inning. Mays is the last of the old-fashioned flingers who delivers the ball with an underhand swing. He lets the ball go when his hand is down near the carpet and it gradually rises up to the batter. The Yanks encouraged the rising movement of the ball and sent it still higher. Mays is also the only pitcher in captivity who grunts every time he throws the ball. Spectators not only can see him pitch but they can hear him pitch. With every toss of the ball he makes a noise as if he were getting a tooth pulled.

Babe Ruth was gathering in all the attention, as he did on Saturday, until Bodie went on a rampage, and then Ruth was forgotten. The whaling Boston pitcher was settled at first base yesterday, as Hoblitzel is nursing a sore finger. Ruth can cover first just as well as he can pitch, and he can bat just as well as a first baseman as he can as a pitcher.

The game was scoreless until Ruth came to the bat in the fourth. Stuffy McInnis was on first and Ruth slapped a saucy home run high into the attic of the grand stand, trailing McInnis to the plate. This jolt made Lefty Mogridge wabbly and Scott lined out a two-bagger and scored on Agnew's single.

All the Boston players got a slight attack of St. Vitus dance when the Yanks started to hammer Mays in their portion of the fourth. Baker started with a single to centre and Pratt walked. Pipp singled to right, but Baker, with plenty of time to score, pulled up at third. Paddy O'Connor was coaching at third and it looked as if Huggins would have to install an alarm clock at that station.

With the bases full, Bodie cracked a whizzing drive to left. Baker scored and Pratt came tearing around to third. Schang, after fielding the ball, made a wild toss to third and Pratt counted, and when Agnew, who retrieved the lurid toss, pegged just as wild as Ruth at the plate, Pipp also romped home and the score was tied.

Mays grunted harder than ever in the fifth and finally grunted his way out of the game. Peck started the ball rolling with a single and Baker was safe on one of the few muffs Harry Hooper ever made in right field. Mays unpeeled a wild pitch and Peck scored. Pratt went out at first and Pipp walked. Bodie drove another screecher to right and sent Baker and Pipp home. Sam Jones then succeeded Mays.

Jones is a former Cleveland relic and was part of the far-famed deal which sent Tris Speaker to Cleveland. Sam got through the sixth inning in fine style and then the Yanks fell on him in the seventh just as they had jumped on Mays's neck. Baker pickled a single to right and was forced at second by Pratt. Pipp unraveled a lyrical double to left and up waltzed Ping Bodie once more.

Bodie undermined Jones's pitching so badly that a double whizzed to right field and Pratt and Pipp scooted home. After Miller lofted to Strunk, Truck Hannah poled a single to right, sending Bodie home. The Yankee wrath continued to settle on the Red Sox in the eighth. Jones was wild and Gilhooley walked, but was out stealing second. Peck walked and went to third on Baker's double to left. Peck scored on Pratt's sacrifice fly to Hooper.

SENATORS DOWN ATHLETICS

Three Philadelphia Pitchers Fail to Hold Washington.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—Washington pounded three Philadelphia pitchers today and won, 11 to 7. Poor work by the local outfielders got Gregg into trouble after the Athletics had gained a lead in the first inning. Ayers was steady until the eighth, when the locals bunched a triple, two doubles, and three singles for five runs.

M'GRAW'S BATSMEN FALL ON CANAVAN

Giants Follow Sandstorm with Storm of Hits and Bury Braves by 8 to 4.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 6.—A sixth-inning rally at the expense of the very young and very left-handed Hugh Canavan enabled the Giants to sew up today's game with the Braves and to win by a score of 8 to 4.

A sudden wind and sand storm, which sprang up while the Giants were at bat in the sixth, drove the players from the field, but when the game was resumed fifteen minutes later, the Giants began where they left off and completed the task of humbling Stallings's crew. Slim Sallee, who hurled for the Giants, had rather a rocky journey through the first three innings, but managed to get by very nicely thereafter.

A triple by Zimmerman, followed by a sacrifice fly by Joe Rodriguez, who played at second base today in place of Larry Doyle, who is ill with malaria, gave the Giants a run in the second inning, but they did not hold the lead very long.

Art Wilson opened the Braves' half of the third with a single to left and reached second in safety on Zimmerman's late throw to that bag on Canavan's slow roller down the third base line. Rehg's sacrifice advanced the runners, after which Herzog lined a sacrifice fly to Young, scoring Wilson. Kelly slashed a hit through the box, scoring Canavan, and stole second a moment later, whence he scored on a single to left by Massey.

For three innings the Giants were runless, but Kauff led off in the sixth with a double to left. Herzog booted Burns's grounder and Kauff then pilfered third. Zimmerman's sacrifice fly to Massey scored Kauff and put Burns on second, after which Rodriguez beat out an infield hit and Fletcher was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases.

At this point the storm broke and the players ran for cover. At the expiration of fifteen minutes the sun came out brightly again and the pastime was resumed. Holke promptly singled to centre, scoring Burns. Rariden's single to right scored Rodriguez, and Fletcher tallied on Sallee's sacrifice fly to Kelly, on which Holke raced to third. Holke and Rariden then worked a double steal, Holke denting the rubber. Young ended the inning with a fly to Kelly.

Not content with the lead thus gained, the Giants went after Canavan again in the seventh. Kauff again led the attack, this time with a double to centre, and Burns walked. Zimmerman's infield blow filled the bases, and Rodriguez followed with another scratch blow that brought Kauff in.

Canavan tightened up momentarily and fanned Fletcher, but he nicked Holke on the right elbow with a pitched ball and Burns jogged over the plate. Rariden then hit into a double play, Rawlings pegging his grounder to the plate in time to force Zimmerman and Wilson doubling up Bill with a quick throw to Konetchy.

In their half of the seventh Stallings's men earned their final tally of the afternoon. Wilson singled to centre and scored all the way from first on Canavan's double, a long drive that went between Kauff and Burns.

Doyle is not seriously ill and it is expected that he will be back in the line-up within a day or two, possibly when the Giants and Phillies hook up on the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

PHILLIES AT MERCY OF GRINER'S SHOOTS

Brooklyn Twirler's Hopes of No-Hit Laurels Dented by Cravath in Ninth.

Seldom has a pitcher fallen short of twirling a no-hit game under such disheartening circumstances as did Dave Griner of Brooklyn yesterday. Winning a ball game and shutting out the Philadelphia clansmen by a score of 2 to 0 was merely incidental to the fact that he almost established a place for himself among the no-hit twirlers only to have the coveted prize snatched from his grasp just when it seemed that he was to attain success.

For eight and two-thirds innings he retired the Quaker batsmen without a hit, and then when Brooklyn fans were calling for him to clinch his right to a no-hit game, Cactus Cravath stepped in and spoiled the picture with a measly little single that skimmed over the second sack and ambled on toward centre field, carrying with it the disappointed hopes of Griner and the Brooklyn fans.

There are several ways of arguing the matter which will show that Griner could have pitched a no-hit game, but all are overshadowed by that little word "if." Nevertheless they are interesting. For instance, if Bancroft hadn't been passed Cravath would never have come up. Then, too, if Bancroft hadn't come into second standing up when he raced down on Stock's tap to Olson, there might have been a double play enacted—in fact the stage was all set for it, but Bancroft made things a bit confusing, and there was only a force-out at second.

These of course are inconsequential now that the damage is done, but they serve to show just how close Griner was to a no-hit game. Had he succeeded yesterday Griner would have been the first to pitch a no-hit game this season in the major leagues.

Brooklyn tied the game up in the first inning when Oeschger, who opposed Griner on the mound, was a bit unsteady. During the entire contest Brooklyn was able to get only five hits and three of those came in the first inning. Olson led off with a Texas leaguer behind second, and O'Mara was a successful imitator with another in the same place. Daubert laid down a sacrifice, but was safe on Luderus's error, and Olson scored. When Myers singled to right O'Mara trotted home. Johnston went out on an infield tap. Hickman was walked and stole second, but Schmandt was retired, Stock to Luderus.

THREE GAMES FOR FORDHAM

Colgate and Holy Cross Among the Teams to Play This Week.

A busy week on the diamond confronts the Fordham University nine. Three hard games will be played in four days. The Colgate team will appear at Fordham Field Wednesday, and the Bronx collegians will meet Holy Cross on Thursday in the annual encounter on Fordham Field. Saturday, originally an open date, has been filled with the High Bridge Athletics.

The Bronxmen have been hitting the ball at a fast clip lately, but the fielding in the Seton Hall and Rutgers games was not up to the standard.

TEST RACE IS EASY FOR OMAR KHAYYAM

Viau's Star Makes Season's Debut at Pimlico in Preparation for Tomorrow.

CUDGEL HIS CHIEF RIVAL

Contest Between Eastern and Western Thoroughbreds Will Be Watched with Interest.

PIMLICO, Md., May 6.—The first struggle of the season between high-class horses in the all-age division is looked forward to when Omar Khayyam and Cudgel are numbered among the probable starters for the Pimlico Spring Handicap at a mile and seventy yards.

The meeting of Omar Khayyam and Cudgel was rendered almost a certainty when Omar Khayyam made his début for the season this afternoon and galloped in a winner in a mile race in 1:40 2-5. Cudgel has won two races since the season opened, his final effort being a victory in the Merchants Handicap on Saturday, when he carried 130 pounds, and easily defeated a good field.

It is seldom that a battle between Eastern and Western thoroughbreds is scheduled for so early in the season, and the meeting of these two cracks will be watched with unusual interest. Cudgel, who scored all his victories in the West last season, was purchased by Commander J. K. L. Ross for $30,000. He will carry 127 pounds, and will be in receipt of an allowance of three pounds from Omar Khayyam, which, with the exception of a single defeat by Hourless, won all his important races in the East after starting with the Kentucky Derby.

In addition to these great four-year-olds, the race will attract such good handicap performers as Roamer, Ticket, Rickety, Crimper, Kalitan, Crank, Hendrie, and Borrow, as well as the fittest of such promising three-year-olds as Papp, Arrah-Go-On, George Starr, Nepperhan, and Quietude.

The appearance of Omar Khayyam today was the magnet to draw a larger Monday crowd than usual to the track. The horse which earned the three-year-old honors last year appeared to be bigger and looked in as good condition as when he ran his best races. He was dropped into a soft spot and had no difficulty in outfooting his company. Dominick had the mount on the Viau crack and he held Omar in restraint in the early running. J. K. L. Ross's Foreground opened a long lead, but as soon as Omar was called on he quickly worked his way to the front and when once in command was hard held until he finished a length and a half in front of Foreground.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—For three-year-olds and upward; claiming; purse $700; six furlongs. Josefina Zarate, 104 pounds, (Lang,) $8.60, $5.30, and $3.90, won; June Bug, 97, (Apel,) $12.50 and $8, second; Berl Williams, 112, (Mars,) $4.60, third. Time—1:14 3-5. HOURLESS GOES TO STUD.

Major Belmont Orders That Famous Race Horse Be Retired.

Hourless, the imported son of Negofol, which finished a brilliant racing season last year by beating Omar Khayyam in a special match race, will never race again. Major August Belmont, owner of the great horse, has ordered his retirement to the Nursery Stud, and he will be shipped today to Kentucky with Belvale, a daughter of Watervale-Beldame, with which three-year-old filly he will be mated.

This decision will be a great disappointment to racing enthusiasts, who had looked forward to a renewal of the turf battles between Hourless and Omar Khayyam that made last season notable. Hourless had been in preparation at Belmont Park for the coming handicaps, and was going along nicely in his work so that there was a good chance of his racing at Pimlico. He was sent out for a mile gallop last Friday and apparently pulled up sound after a mile in 1 minute 42 seconds.

When Trainer Hildreth visited the colt on Saturday he found that something was wrong with him. At first it was thought that he had bowed a tendon, but further investigation showed that he had wrenched himself. Major Belmont was notified and after inspecting Hourless he at once ordered that he be declared out of his engagements, and that no further risks be taken with this brilliant performer.

Numbered among the victories of Hourless last year were the two great Eastern stake events for three-year-olds, the Withers and Belmont. In the former of which he defeated R. T. Wilson, J.'s, Campfire, the 2-year-old champion of 1916. Hourless was beaten by Omar Khayyam in the Brooklyn Derby and in the Lawrence Realization. In the latter race only a nose separated the pair, and when they met in a special match race at Laurel in the Fall, Hourless turned the tables on his great rival, winning by a length in 2 minutes 2 seconds for a mile and a quarter.

The Belmont Stable has met with further misfortune in the breaking down of Stromboli, the aged campaigner which, with Hourless, was being pointed for the Metropolitan Handicap at the opening of Belmont Park.

Two more members of The Jockey Club have joined the colors, Archibald Barklie and Spalding L. Jenkins. Both have received Captains' commissions and have been assigned to remount duties in the Far West. This makes a total of eight out of forty-eight members of The Jockey Club who have joined the service since the war broke out.

Walter J. Salmon will begin his second year of racing under new colors. This sportsman, who has a promising stable, has registered his colors as American Beauty red body and cap, white sleeves, and blue sash, a patriotic combination.

Samuel C. Hildreth has presented the good handicap performer, Roly, to the breeding bureau of The Jockey Club. Roly won many races last year, but was a difficult horse to train.

BRIGGS FAVORS ATHLETICS.

Harvard Association Advocates Resumption of Games.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 6.—Resumption of football and other sports at Harvard University next Fall, provided enough men return to college, was favored by Dean Le Baron B. Briggs, Chairman of the Harvard Athletic Association, at a meeting called tonight to discuss the athletic situation. The meeting failed, however, to reach any decision on the question.

It was announced that a meeting of athletic heads of Harvard, Yale, and Princeton would be held within a few weeks to decide whether 'Varsity sports should be resumed on a formal or informal basis. This meeting probably will be held in New York.

EVANDER CHILDS IN LEAD.

Defeats De Witt Clinton and Tops Standing in P. S. A. L. Race.

Evander Childs High School's baseball team advanced a step nearer the Public Schools Athletic League Manhattan-Bronx championship title yesterday by trouncing the De Witt Clinton High School nine, 3 to 0, on the Catholic Protectory grounds at Van Nest. This victory puts the Bronx schoolboys in the lead for the title, with a record of five victories and no defeats.

Previous to yesterday's game the two teams had been tied for first place, each with four victories and no defeats. Evander Childs registered a run in the second inning, but a brace of tallies, scored in the seventh when Schellberg doubled with two men on the bases, clinched the victory for them. Hirschfield pitched for the victors and showed good form, fanning fifteen of De Witt Clinton's batters and allowing but four hits.

The score by innings:

	Innings	R.H.E.
Evander Childs	0 1 0 0 0 0 2 0 0	3 8 1
De Witt Clinton	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	0 4 2

Batteries—Hirschfield and Schellberg; Staacks and De Stefano.

NOVEL NET TOURNEY PLAN.

Husbands and Wives to Play in Mixed Doubles on June 13.

One of the novelty events of the coming tennis season will be a mixed doubles tournament for husbands and wives which will be played at the New York Lawn Tennis Club, beginning June 13. This will be the first time that such a tournament has ever been held in this country under the official sanction of the tennis association, which has already listed the event among the season's tennis fixtures. If it proves to be the success which is anticipated, the tournament may have added prestige next year and be given a place among the national championships.

INTERNATIONAL TO OPEN.

President Farrell Declares Minor Circuit Will Start Tomorrow.

President John H. Farrell of the International League announced yesterday that everything was in readiness for the opening of the circuit tomorrow. Although no managers have yet been named for Newark, the Indians will open against Syracuse as scheduled, and at Jersey City, where Dave Driscoll will probably manage the club, Rochester will be the opening attraction. Buffalo will open at Baltimore and Toronto will start the season at Binghamton.

President Farrell said yesterday:

"The continuation of a limited number of leagues is encouraged by national officials, both army and navy, as a means of relieving the public mind from brooding over the big business in hand of achieving a speedy victory. The workmen running at top speed, and upon whom their chiefs rely more or less, also must have some recreation to maintain efficiency.

"Any of our clubs that are fortunate enough to show a balance on the right side of the ledger at the close of our season will at once turn such surplus over operating expenses into the nation's Liberty bonds."

HARVARD GOLFERS VICTORS.

Defeat Dartmouth, 4 Matches to 1, at Woodland.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 6.—Harvard's golf team today defeated Dartmouth by 4 matches to 1, at the Woodland Golf Club.

artillery plants which the United States Steel Corporation has promised to build. Enough large guns for the American Army are now being obtained from France and England, the Governments of which, it was said, would be able to meet the demands of the army for a year to come.

Extensive preparations for a long war were seen by members of the committee in the estimates for the ordnance program that were submitted. The program, which involves the most extensive advance purchasing yet undertaken by the War Department, calls for letting of contracts for big guns that cannot be completed in some cases until 1921. It was testified that it would take more than a year and a half to complete some of the guns after work on them had been begun. In case the war ends before the contracts with the United States Steel Corporation are filled, the corporation is to be guaranteed against losses.

Just how much will be expended on all kinds of ordnance has not been definitely determined. For light ordnance General March has asked for an appropriation of $4,378,302,801. Contracts and authorization for ordnance for the next fiscal year, it is understood, will reach close to $8,000,000,000. The Military Affairs Committee has not yet asserted, had lost a vast amount of money through this system. Labor, he said, had taken advantage of the system, and employers were not so rigid in enforcing economies as when working for the Government under a fixed contract. The Ordnance Department in recent contracts, he said, had made all awards as far as possible under the old system. His statements impressed the committee, as it was frank, direct, and informative.

Thousands of aerial bombs, described by the officials as the most effective produced in this war, are on hand. In the comparatively few tests made, it was said, they had exploded satisfactorily. The army officers declined to inform the committee, even in executive session, as to the character of these bombs, but assured them that the supply was ample, and that they would add greatly to the effectiveness of aircraft work. It was brought out that the War Department had ordered 70,000 Lewis guns for airplanes, and that the estimates for aircraft armament called for 220,000 machine guns. The opinion was expressed by one of the officials that 2,350 fighting airplanes would be in use by the American Army at the front by July 1. These will be obtained from foreign makers chiefly, and, if necessary, the War Department must replace them later.

The estimates call for $1,000,000,000 for trench warfare devices. This is to be expended largely for bombs, grenades, and ten-bore shotguns. The committee today received confirmation of the report that the American soldiers were using sawed-off shotguns in charging upon the enemy. The ammunition used is buckshot, which, it is said, is most effective in such warfare, because it spreads out and covers a considerable area.

HONOR PLACE MAY GO TO 9TH ARTILLERY

Belief That the Regiment Will Lead the Guard in Red Cross Parade.

IS READY FOR SERVICE

A Third of Its Officers Veterans of Previous Wars—12,000 Men of New Guard to March.

It was announced last night that about 12,000 of the 18,277 men in the New York Guard, organized within the year to replace the New York National Guard, now in Federal service, would march in the American Red Cross parade to be held here on May 18. It will be the first time the public has had an opportunity to see the State's new defensive force in a body, although for months detachments of the soldiers have been protecting points open to the attack of enemy aliens and their sympathizers.

While the order of formation of the parade had not been definitely decided last night, it was the general opinion of officers that the honor of leading probably would go to the Ninth Coast Artillery Corps, whose armory is at 125 West Fourteenth Street. The Ninth, in addition to being one of the oldest units recruited to take the place of the Ninth Coast Defense Command—now the Fifty-seventh U. S. Heavy Artillery, and in the thick of the fighting overseas—was said last night to be the first unit of the new guard to reach effective fighting strength.

Apparently because they regard it as the most highly trained unit of the guard, hundreds of men awaiting the call to service in the national army have enlisted in the Ninth. In every company there is a high percentage of these men, and one officer, discussing their earnestness last night, attributed a fair measure of the regiment's success in whipping itself into fighting trim to the never-fagging enthusiasm of the soldiers.

Nearly 300 men now at Camp Upton received their grounding in the 9th, and more than half of them won non-coms's stripes in the first month they were at Yaphank. As one man put it, the association of these young soldiers with the experienced soldiers of the Veteran Corps of Artillery—a unit which was incorporated as the basis of the 9th puts the proper spirit into the recruits right at the outset.

Ready for the Field.

Divided into twelve companies, with a total enlisted personnel of nearly 700 men, completely equipped with clothing, ordnance, and thoroughly grounded in drills, the regiment, according to Colonel John Ross Delafield, is ready any time to take the field for active service. Every man, Colonel Delafield said proudly, was armed with a Krag rifle—"and knows how to handle it, too,"—a statement which was borne out by charts in the rifle range, which show that for months the members of the 9th have been practicing night after night to improve their marksmanship and have made splendid scores.

When the present 57th United States Artillery was mobilized late last Summer and transferred to the Federal service the State immediately set about the organization of a second division of soldiers to be known as the New York Guard. One of the first units to be considered for rehabilitation was the 9th, and the nucleus of the present regiment was formed by the assignment in a body to the 9th of the Veteran Corps of Artillery, a famous organization with a personnel formed almost wholly of descendants of Revolutionary War men.

The Veteran Corps, composed almost entirely of men above the draft age, had its ranks swelled greatly following the declaration of war with Germany, and each man had purchased out of his private means a Krag rifle and the complete field equipment. In addition, company funds had obtained twenty of the latest type Lewis machine guns. Consequently, when the unit was redesignated the Ninth Coast Artillery Corps its members—financiers, business men, leading physicians, publishers, and others prominent in the larger activities of the city—entered into the guard as veterans in training and equipment as well as name.

Realizing the responsibilities resting upon them as defenders of the city against attack and their duty to quell outbreaks, the members of the regiment went to the drills with vigor. As their work probably would call for a knowledge of hand-to-hand fighting rather than artillery, infantry drill superseded gunnary. Many of the officers, impressed by the liability of the city to aerial attack, specialized in anti-aircraft work. Several months ago Major Stoddart, Captain Wilder, and Captain Cabot Ward, formerly Park Commissioner and now a Major of Construction in France, went to Paris and London to make a study of anti-aerial tactics. The result of their work, transmitted to the officers of the 9th, is now used in instruction at the regular army artillery school at Fortress Monroe.

While the regiment drills weekly in the tactics of infantry, special classes of picked men are under instruction as machine gunners. Because of their equipment of twenty Lewis guns and their long course of intensive work, the machine-gun company of the 9th is rated one of the most efficient in the State. It has won the praise of regulars for its mobility and the accuracy of its fire.

Officers of the Regiment.

The officers who, by giving up practically all of their time away from their business affairs, have brought the regiment up to its present state of high tactical efficiency and remarkable discipline, are:

Field and Staff.

Colonel John Ross Delafield and Lieut. Col. George W. Burleigh.

MAJORS.

Edward C. Delafield, 1st Battalion; Francis R. Stoddard, Jr., 2d Battalion, and William L. Hodges, 3d Battalion.

the last of the regiment units to be mustered into service, the ceremony taking place yesterday afternoon. This company is composed entirely of Columbia University students, and though its strength at present is lower than the others, it is expected that the Summer vacation at Columbia will release a number of additional men for service.

The regiment is especially proud of the fact that one-third of its officers are veterans of previous wars, its Colonel having had a distinguished record in the Spanish-American War. Most of the enlisted men, too, have had prior military service, a surprisingly large number displaying the Cuban Pacification service stripes.

In about three weeks the command will go to the State rifle range at Peekskill for a course at the butts. If weather conditions permit, the trip there and back will be utilized as a test of the men's marching ability.

"MYSTERY OF LIFE" ACTED.

Father O'Conor's Morality Play Has Poetic Theme—Cardinal In Audience

"The Mystery of Life," which had its first professional performance last night at the Lexington Theatre, is the work of Father J. F. X. O'Conor, who has long been known as a scholar and author of versatility. In addition to being the author of works on Babylonian cuneiform, art, the operas, poetry and various phases of outdoor life, Father O'Conor is a linguist of unusual attainments; accordingly, any dramatic work from his pen must be an object of unusual interest. "The Mystery of Life" reaches the professional stage after being acted in various parts of the country by Catholic amateur bodies, the most recent performance having been given a few months ago in Hoboken. Last night, despite the crudities of the performance, the work was well received by an audience which included Cardinal Farley and a number of other high church officials.

The piece is a rather stilted musical morality play, apparently better suited to the library than to the modern theatre. Through it stalks Discontent, a young woman in révolt against Time and its changes, suffering and sorrow. (These are the things which constitute life's mystery.) But comes another allegorical figure to take Discontent to behold the various wonders of nature, and, in spite of the plottings of the evil forces, there comes the realization that the seasonal changes, together with all that they bring, are ultimately for the best.

This theme is obviously highly poetic, but in Father O'Conor's play it falls short of being dramatically impressive. This was due in large part last night to the manner in which the material was handled. On several occasions one suspected that the so-called professional cast was not entirely professional, and at times there was even ground for doubting the director. The most interesting feature of the production was the music, also the work of Father O'Conor, which was always in keeping with the spirit of the piece, and at times of fine quality. Father O'Conor made a brief speech of thanks between the acts.

HOPPER AS AUCTIONEER.

Comedian Will Sell Seats for "Out There" on Tour for Red Cross.

De Wolf Hopper has been added to the organization which will tour the country in "Out There" in the interests of the Red Cross, but Mr. Hopper's talents will be devoted to auctioneering instead of acting. There being no place in the cast for him, Mr. Hopper will travel one week ahead of the company and will direct an auction sale of seats in each city. The first of these will take place in Baltimore this afternoon.

The auction sale for the New York performances, to be given at the Century on May 17 and 18, will be held at the Liberty Theatre next Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The auctioneers will include David Warfield, Raymond Hitchcock, Al Jolson, Fred Stone, Will Rogers, and Clifton Crawford.

The Brooklyn performance will be given at the Academy of Music on Thursday, May 16, and will be preceded by an auction sale at the Academy on Thursday night of this week. De Wolf Hopper and Raymond Hitchcock will be the auctioneers, and admission will be by ticket only.

ANNA HELD GAINS STRENGTH

Blood Transfusion Enables Her to Sleep and Take Solid Food.

The condition of Anna Held, seriously ill with multiple myeloma at her apartments at the Hotel Savoy, was reported yesterday by Dr. Donald McCaskey, her physician, to have shown marked improvement, due to many hours of sound sleep. With very brief waking periods, said Dr. McCaskey, Miss Held slept a full eight hours on Sunday night, and yesterday, because of the twenty-five ounces of blood transfused, she was able to take solid food, consisting of several ounces of scraped tenderloin of beef.

"She felt so strong," said Dr. McCaskey, "that she talked to some of us of her experiences in singing to soldiers during her tours. Her vitality is beginning to pull of its own weight, and she is getting stronger hourly. Her pain, however, continues most severe."

ENRIGHT PRAISES HIS MEN.

Sold $19,000,000 of Liberty Bonds, He Tells West End Association.

Commissioner Enright, who spoke last night at a meeting of the West Side Association at the Hotel Ansonia, said the police had sold more than $19,000,000 of Liberty bonds. He praised the cheerfulness with which the police have assumed the increase of their duties due to the war and to the growing shortage of men in the department. Five hundred and twenty-five men have already been called for military service, and before the end of the year 500 more will go. He said he had succeeded partly in making up for this deficiency by abolishing 475 easy jobs.

Blumenthal Estate Appraised.

The estate of Ferdinand Blumenthal, founder of the F. Blumenthal Company, manufacturers of kid leather, who had lived in France for some years, and died there Oct. 20, 1914, was appraised yesterday at $3,398,360 gross and $1,721,211 net, the debts of the estate aggregating $1,674,149. The executors under the will contended that Mr. Blumenthal was a resident of Paris at the time of his death, but the Surrogate ruled that he remained a resident of New York because he took no definite steps to change his domicile. The bulk of the estate consisted of stocks and bonds worth $2,960,471, of which $1,038,820 was the value of 16,462 shares of preferred and 22,803 shares of common stock of the F. Blumenthal Company. He gave the bulk of the estate to his wife, Mrs. Cecelia Blumenthal and his sons, Joseph and Cecil Blumenthal.

CITY BREVITIES.

The annual meeting of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association will be held at Delmonico's, Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, Thursday, May 9, at 3 P. M. Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities, will deliver an address and Miss Mannheimer will recite some "pen pictures of patriotism."

A threatened strike in the Sperry Gyroscope Company in Brooklyn was amicably settled yesterday, when it was announced that seven workers recently discharged would be reinstated.

In a story printed Sunday morning, it was stated that the members of the Senior Class at Barnard College were raising $1,000 of $3,000 necessary to send a unit to France. This was an error, as the amount to be collected was $30,000.

Chief Justice O'Dwyer of the City Court announced yesterday, that a justice of the

For the second time this Spring we are permitted to see Ethel Barrymore in a maternal rôle, with a daughter who is mostly grown. Her repertory is living up to the description of play of which Richard Mansfield used to sing in "Prince Karl"—"The Mother and Her Child Are There." Only this is an admirable light comedy mother—indeed, a quite farcical mother—and her daughter is another able comedienne, Eva Le Gallienne.

Belinda parted with her husband eighteen years ago, for the simple reason that he wanted her to do her hair differently and refused to shave his beard. Quite naturally she neglected to inform him that, as her daughter subsequently expressed it in the most delicate language, "there was going to be me." It was equally natural, no doubt, that Belinda kept on exercising the levity of her disposition. It was a very amiable levity, and, if one may judge by last night's exhibition of it, afforded much harmless amusement to all concerned.

It is April in Devonshire, and Belinda's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of two loves, a poet and a statistician. Her daughter returns from her school graduation, but that does not long bother Belinda. She has the happy notion of disguising her as a niece. So when her husband turns up, after eighteen years of his kind of dallying—with lions and grizzly bears—he is still in the dark as to the fact of "me." Belinda is equally deceived, for he has shaved his beard, and of course she does not recognize him. So Belinda's fancy takes a third turn, and it is now manifest, as was suspected from the start, that the play is very, very farcical.

Yet the farce is of the utmost deftness, quite in the best English manner. At times it seems to be firmly centred in an original character study. This Belinda is the quintessence of light-headed, light-hearted feminine charm. She has a real mentality, all her own—and not the less so because it is much on the level of the mentality of some playful fluff of a kitten.

If any one still doubts that Miss Barrymore is an artist as well as an actress, let him watch the subtle yet primitive coquetries, the inspired vacuities, with which she endows Belinda. It is a personality as far as the poles from her own, yet, with the quietest and most natural means, she denotes it inerrantly, extracting every last drop of its comic essence. For two acts she held her audience entranced.

In the third act the play went into the doldrums, and, by an unfortunate coincidence, so did the memories of the principal actors. The voice of the prompter was loud in the land. Yet there was enough in the performance to establish the production as a very distinct success. It should be seen by all who care for light farce comedy at its most delicate and entertaining.

Miss Le Gallienne's part of the daughter was equally distinctly gay, feminine graces of mind being, in her case, tempered with girlish good sense. In the most amiable possible manner she is even a little shocked at her mother's prevarications. Miss Le Gallienne denotes all this with an art as sound as it is girlishly fresh.

Richard Hatterass as the poet and E. Lyall Swete as the statistician move in the franker realm of farce, their effects being of necessity broader and less freshly delightful. Cyril Keightly, as the husband shorn, is distinguished and charming as always.

The play was preceded by Barrie's little war play, "The New Word," which was seen in a bill of one-acters a year ago at the Empire. Mr. Swete took the part of the father, first played here by Norman Trevor. Philip Tonge was again the young Second Lieutenant. The production was less delicate and finely modulated, being especially marred by Mr. Swete's indistinct utterance. Yet it will doubtless improve with repetition—as will also "Belinda." It is one of the most tenderly human and whimsical of Barrie's plays, a quite worthy echo of the true war spirit, and it is an admirable companion piece to the longer play.

BLUE DEVILS SPEND DAY AT WEST POINT

Received with Elaborate Military Honors, and Freedom of Academy Given to Them.

After finishing their work here, which added several million dollars to New York's purchases of Liberty bonds, the "Blue Devils," cheered through the city and saluted in the towns they passed on their river journey, paid a visit yesterday to the United States Military Academy at West Point and spent the day looking over America's plant for turning out officers.

They were taken in Fifth Avenue buses in the morning to the steamer at Forty-second Street and the North River, which was gaily decorated with flags of the Allies in their honor. Work along the waterfront came to a stop for a while as crowds gathered to cheer as the detachment of rakish Alpine troops with their Tam o'Shanters and their guns with their fierce little French poniard bayonets arrived singing war songs and marched aboard the boat that was to carry them to the Point.

On their arrival at West Point the "Blue Devils" were received with elaborate military honors by the West Point men. They were met at the parade ground by Colonel Samuel W. Tillman and his staff, following which there was a dress parade of the corps of cadets in compliment to the war-hardened visitors. After this the French detachment gave an exhibition of their military skill, and later attended an organ recital in the chapel of the Academy. Each of the "Blue Devils" was presented with a souvenir key, giving them the freedom of the Academy.

One hundred and fifty Anzacs, who rendered valuable service in the Liberty loan campaign, had only one day of rest, and were then employed all day and in the evening yesterday in aiding the recruiting drive in this city by British and Canadian officers, and appealed for volunteers for the British Army at meetings in all parts of the city. One detachment of 100 Anzacs was entertained at the Harvard Club yesterday afternoon.

Ten of Pershing's veterans, who had been working tirelessly for the Liberty Loan, left last night for Fort Myer, Va., where they will report again for duty to the commanding officers of that post and await instructions. Ex-Commissioner Joseph Hartigan, an official of the Liberty Loan Committee, received instructions yesterday from Adjt. Gen. McCain at Washington to send the other forty of Pershing's men, who have been touring the country for the Liberty Loan, to do duty at Fort Myer.

A summary of the work of the American detachment from France showed that each man had spoken at an average of eleven meetings daily, making a total of 770 meetings.

One hundred and eighty-five Poles who are on the way to join the Polish Army in France marched yesterday afternoon from the Polish Falcon Hall, at 237 East Twenty-second Street, down Second Avenue to the Polish Church on Seventh Street, between First Avenue and Avenue A, where Monsignor Strzelecki addressed them and pronounced a benediction. During exercises in front of the hall the Polish national anthem was played, followed by "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"Blue Devils" Drill on Century Roof.

The appearance of the 105 French "Blue Devils" at the Century Grove on Saturday night, on which occasion they danced until the not so small hours of the morning, was followed last night by their return to the roof for the midnight show, and their appearance on the floor in an exhibition bayonet drill. It is expected that they will continue to give the drill on the Century Roof each night this week.

FAVORITES AT THE PALACE.

Include McIntyre and Heath, Who Revive Their "Old Guard."

The new program at the Palace embraces such favorites as McIntyre and Heath, Bert Melrose, Adele Rowland and Bessie Clayton, and is accordingly one of the best bills of the season at that playhouse. It includes also George Courteline's diverting domestic comedy, "A Private Account," played, however, under the title of "The Fine System." It has been performed here by the Washington Square Players and by Mme. Bernhardt's company, although not Mme. Bernhardt herself, and is acted at the Palace by Jose Ruben and Olive Wyndham. Mr. Ruben played the part with the Washington Square Players; Miss Wyndham is new. Both give capital performances, and the applause which greeted the little piece at the matinée yesterday was both sincere and plentiful. A more intimate stage setting, however, would improve future performances.

McIntyre and Heath revive their military foolery, "On Guard," in which they have been seen at the Palace before, and Miss Clayton and Miss Rowland perform much as usual. The inimitable Mr. Melrose now carries along a young woman who sings, but she does not greatly interfere with the act, which is as funny as ever.

OUR NEW ERA.

Secretary McADOO struck a new note when he served notice that the Third Liberty Loan was offered at the highest rate the Treasury would pay. Thereby he challenged all who thought that there was only one money market, and that it was not compartmented, so that there could be two prices for the same thing. Secretary McADOO's suggestion is that there are two money markets, one for patriots and the other for those who look carefully at the interest yield, and that they are not in such close relation that there is argument from one to the other. The result of the Third Liberty Loan seems to bring this heresy toward establishment as creed.

Those who contended that a rate of 4¼ per cent. was essential have not a word left to say. Those who think that the loan would have been placed as well at 4 per cent. will renew the Secretary's contention that we are in a new era, when old arguments do not count. It may be that the next loan will be placed at 4 per cent. This country is likely to be no exception to the rule—which ought to be stronger in our case—that national loans float more easily as the country becomes aroused to the meaning and use of the money borrowed. It now seems that the first loan of two billions, on whose successful placing we plumed ourselves, was in fact largely taken by the wealthy, the second reached those of possessions less large, and the third turns out a popular loan beyond any comparison the world affords.

WRONGS AND WRONGHEADS.

In Dublin today [Sunday] the collection for the anti-conscription fund resulted in a payment of first installments averaging £200 to a parish.—Associated Press dispatch.

Ireland runs over with prosperity. Her farmers, fattened by British legislation, have been rushing about in automobiles to Sinn Fein meetings. Some of them refused to sell food to British and American sailors. There is money enough for luxuries, for abundant races. Irishmen eat of the fat and drink of the sweet, while England lives narrowly and is partly rationed. The Sinn Feiners have long had time and money enough to make all the trouble for England, to give all the help to Germany that they can.

Now Nationalist and Sinn Feiner are united to oppose conscription; and as a testimony to "the wrongs of Ireland" Dublin is able to subscribe largely to a fund whose object, however disguised, is aid to Germany. Such must be the direct result of the anti-conscription movement in Ireland, no matter what wrongheaded loyalists are joined with Sinn Fein rebels or revolutionists, would-be founders of an Irish Republic.

The world has heard somewhat too much about "the wrongs of Ireland." Long-continued and black as they were, they are of the past. For a generation the English democracy has sought to confer benefits upon Ireland, to redress old injuries. If the Irish of Ireland haven't had bestowed upon them everything they want in the way of self-government, whose fault is it but their own? Is England to blame for the quarrel of Irishmen?

Has Ireland forgotten the foul immedicable wrongs done by Germany to civilization, the wrongs of Belgium, Serbia, Armenia, the murder of noncombatants on sea and land, the German parodies of sacred Catholic ceremonies, the slaying of priests, the profanation and destruction of church and cathedral, the reintroduction of slavery, robberies, deportations, almost four years of incredible cruelties and bestialities? It seems so. To their kinsmen here, to their old friends in America, the abstention of so many Irishmen of Ireland from the war, their dallying with Germany, is unintelligible, monstrous.

Even Sir HORACE PLUNKETT, whose fruitful work for Ireland and the general moderation of whose views all of us know, leaves us more than a little surprised. Conscription and Home Rule, disastrously linked together by the British Government, cannot be achieved "without present bloodshed and lasting hate." That Government must "set up immediately a responsible government in "Ireland." When the bill is passed, to an Irish Executive of representative and responsible men should be given "the task of setting up a Parliament "as quickly as possible, promoting "voluntarily recruiting." "The Irish "people, given their own instrument "of government, would quickly show "the world their real attitude in this "war." After four years, their own parochial concerns attended to, "the Irish people" will so condescend to take notice of the wrongs of civilization. Give us Home Rule, and we will, or may, enlist. What sacrosanct dignity of an Irishman of Ireland shelters him from conscription? Why is he so much better and more privileged than "a common ordinary" American or Canadian? Sir HORACE speaks of the English "inability to understand us." That inability applies to the United States also.

DWINDLING.

A convention of the Socialist Party of Illinois, held at Chicago, has not only reaffirmed the anti-war platform adopted at St. Louis in 1917, but, reaching a sympathetic hand to indicted Comrade VICTOR BERGER of Milwaukee, it called with him for the withdrawal of the American troops from France and the immediate assembling of a peace conference. There are no other German Socialists so passionately and profoundly German as the majority Socialist Party of the United States. The seditious talk, the seditious platform, of these assistants of Germany may invite consideration from the Department of Justice. Far more interesting to the general than the ululation of these pacifists for the behoof of Prussian militarism is the confession of the Secretary of the National Socialist Party that since March 1 it has lost 15,000 members, has but 85,000 whose zeal reaches the dues-paying height. At the present rate of decrease, the party will be lucky to last till Fall. Big in talk, it is a dwarf in votes.

THE TUCKAHOE.

The launching of the Tuckahoe twenty-seven days after the laying of her keel was such a remarkable achievement that the Clyde may come to be known, without disparagement, as the British Delaware, for the output of the shipyards of our American river is going to astonish the world in the next two or three years. The Tuckahoe is both a pattern and a precedent, but not long will she hold the record. President NEELAND of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation says that she was built under handicaps; a freighter of 8,800 tons waiting for her sternpost was an incumbrance on the other side of a double way, and there was only one overhead crane to swing material into position on the growing fabric of the Tuckahoe. But even under these disadvantages she was in the water in three hours more than twenty-seven days with her funnel, bridge, and masts in place.

In another fortnight the new steel vessel will be ready to take on her first cargo for France. The launching of a ship for the great American fleet destined to make submarine raiding ineffective will soon be too familiar an incident to call for comment. As Admiral BOWLES said on Sunday:

> Nothing was done in building the Tuckahoe that cannot be done over and over again in any shipyard in the country. It is only a question of careful organization and planning, good teamwork and ample supplies of material.

With Mr. SCHWAB in command there will always be thorough organization. The zeal of the men in their tasks, their friendly rivalry, and the feeling, to quote Vice President PIEZ of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, that they "are factors in the winning of the war like soldiers in the trenches," will assure team work. Supplying material is the concern of the mills, and here, as in its transportation, there must be eternal vigilance if ships are to slide continuously down the ways. There must be no more holding up of production, nor can delays in delivery because of freight congestion be tolerated.

The Fuel Administrator and the Director General of Railroads are not supposed to have a hand in the building of ships, but unless the steel plants, factories, and railroads have a steady supply of coal, and unless the transportation problem is handled with Napoleonic judgment, there will be a return to the old exasperating condition of workers twiddling their thumbs while waiting for steel plates. The yards are ready to lay keels and break records. Let it not be said that success is jeopardized by dilatory work at the manufacturing plants or by shortage of fuel and transportation.

The launching of the Tuckahoe was worth celebrating as an example and inspiration to the half million shipworkers of America. A happy thought was the telegram to General PERSHING and the boys in the trenches. No one knows better the significance of a procession of ships across the Atlantic, if the enemy is to be overwhelmed and brought to terms. It was fitting that silver medals should be struck to commemorate the occasion. The building of the ships is a campaign that will test the courage, stamina, and devotion of an army of industrial workers, and, like soldiers in the field, they should be decorated when they do big things.

GERMAN JARGON.

Jargon is of various kinds. Diplomatic jargon and military jargon are just now enjoying a wider circulation than they have ever had before. The word is used in no disrespectful sense. Every profession has a jargon. Jargon consists in the employment of roundabout professional phrases to convey a meaning which might be conveyed in the form of speech idiomatically termed "plain English." Just now a new species of jargon is much in use, which is not exactly diplomatic jargon or political jargon or military jargon, but is compounded by German statesmen and soldiers from all three, and which we may describe as German jargon. An excellent example of German jargon is Vice Chancellor VON PAYER's speech to the Main Committee of the Reichstag, explaining the German coup d'état in Ukraine. By setting some of VON PAYER's phrases side by side with a translation into plain English the possibilities of this new jargon may be appreciated:

THE JARGON.	IN PLAIN ENGLISH.
The Germans entered the Ukraine at the express wish of the Ukrainian Government for the purpose of restoring order.	We bullied the Ukrainian Government into inviting us to do what we had determined on.
But there were also other grounds. We had a lively interest in getting foodstuffs as speedily as possible.	We needed Ukraine in our business. We wanted food and Ukraine had it.
The Rada, however, had no means of insisting on the delivery of the grain by the population.	The Ukrainians wouldn't give it to us.
The Germans, therefore, had to concern themselves with obtaining deliveries in accordance with the treaty.	So we forced them to do so.
Our activity in this direction has been to a certain extent a source of discontent.	And they resented it.
The Rada has recently lost ground to an increasing extent.	We blamed this on the Rada, which wouldn't aid us.
Stubborn adherence to communistic theories * * * seems to have been principally responsible for bringing about its [the Rada's] end.	Since the Rada pretended that it couldn't, being a socialistic Government, coerce the farmers to deliver the grain, we had to strike down the Rada.
[There was] danger that a great part of the soil would remain uncultivated and that the Ukraine thereby would be unable to fulfill her obligations toward us.	Unless we took charge of the country ourselves and made the farmers work for us, it looked as if they couldn't be induced to do it.
The decree [compelling the farmers to plant] was not addressed to the Ukrainian people, but to the German military authorities.	So we put soldiers over them, German soldiers, who would see that they planted or died.
They [some of the Ukrainian Ministers] went so far as to aim at driving the Germans out of their country.	This aggression roused the patriotic spirit of the Ukrainians and their leaders, who talked of resisting.
On one occasion a sort of Sicilian Vespers — namely, the assassination of all German officers — was suggested.	Some enthusiast made a wild suggestion which wasn't adopted. If it had been, I would say "agreed on" instead of "suggested."
There was thus undoubted danger to the lives of our officers and men.	This furnished us with a pretext, though we really didn't need any.
General VON EICHHORN, therefore, * * * decreed "a state of enhanced protection," under which all offenses against public peace and order may be judged by field tribunals.	And we put the "independent republic" of Ukraine under German martial law, calling it by a new and convulsingly funny name.
Legal proceedings were thus inaugurated under a new code and thus the arrests ordered by personalities already mentioned.	And began a reign of terror.
The arrests made in the Rada while that body was in session were a regrettable blunder, for which immediate reparation was made and regret in writing was expressed.	But we meant to let the Rada go through the form of existing, and VON EICHHORN was a fool for doing a thing which gives the lie to that pretense.

Thus translated, VON PAYER's speech ceases to be melancholy rubbish and becomes a candid picture of what happened.

BROWN OF WATERTOWN.

Because the Drys carried Watertown, home of the Hon. ELON R. BROWN, Senator for the Jefferson-Oswego District, it is assumed, not without rashness, perhaps, by some of his copious collection of opponents, that he won't run again. Mr. BROWN, a wise and deliberate citizen, says quietly that the primaries are some months off, and that within thirty days he will decide whether to be or not to be a candidate once more.

As Republican leader in the Senate, Mr. BROWN has a knowledge, an experience, a skill which none of his copious collection of opponents has any disposition to deny. He is fit for his post. The only dangerous charge against him is that he actually has political and intellectual principles and convictions. He is not a quick turner. He goes his own way. The politician's road to success is often far different. "How many votes are there in this "and that policy? Will it win? Then "I believe in it from the bottom of my "soul and love it beyond words to "tell. Was I against it last year or "some other year? I was wrong. "I'm for everything that looks popu- "lar and against everything else."

That is the creed and practice of some politicians. Will Jefferson-Oswego "stand for" a man who imagines that principles are anything in the world of politics?

PROTESTING BY BOYCOTT.

Germans who hope to regain their foreign trade after the war should take into account a boycott ordered by the British Seamen's Union. It was suggested by the murder of sailors on unarmed merchant ships by submarine gunmen. When the union's President, J. HAVELOCK WILSON, wrote in protest to officers of a similar union in Germany, they sought in reply to justify the crimes. Therefore notice was given in September of last year that if submarines should continue to attack sailors a boycott against Germany would be enforced for two years after the war, with an addition of one month for every new offense. As everybody knows, the submarines kept on shelling men in lifeboats, and additions have now prolonged the boycott's term to five years and seven months. Mr. WILSON says:

> I have hundreds of cases of sailors whose arms or legs were blown off by U-boat guns while they were trying to get away from sinking ships.

Many others could not testify because they were killed. He asserts that 12,000 members of the British Seamen's Union who were on merchant ships "have lost their lives "through Germany's criminal con- "duct on the seas." He should not have been surprised when the German union defended this conduct, for Germany's church organizations had approved the killing of patients and nurses in English hospitals by Zeppelin bombs.

This boycott will affect Germany's import and export trade, even if unions in neutral countries do not join the British sailors in enforcing it. Support may reasonably be expected from the Scandinavian union, which has emphatically protested against the submarine murders. Norway has lost 1,586 sailors, many of them killed in lifeboats by submarine shrapnel, and reports from other northern neutrals make a total of about 3,000. Unions of seamen in all neutral countries where there are such organizations should denounce the inhuman practices of the German Government's pirates and consider the question whether their disapproval can be made effective by such action as has been taken by the union in Great Britain.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

America Opens Its Heart.

New York City has had before this visitors eminent and distinguished in all the ways there are to be eminent and distinguished, and to great numbers of them it had already given welcome and hospitality. It had been supposed, in all the degrees of enthusiasm and appreciation there are. In the past week, however, the city has greeted two groups of visitors different from any it ever had before, and it has marked its recognition of the difference by treating these additions to its long list of honored guests in a way that is also without precedent.

The reference, of course, is to the "Blue Devils" from France and the "Anzacs" from the other side of the world. These men have made a wholly new appeal. Even that of the Frenchmen who came over here in Revolutionary days cannot have been quite the same, and unlike, too, were the appeals of our own men returning from the wars of '12, of '65, and of '98. Cordiality and gratitude were not lacking on any of those occasions, but a special favor and a special admiration were reserved for these later soldiers, at once aliens and brothers, strangers and nearest friends, united with us in fighting in a cause that is greater than any cause distinctly and only ours could be.

The result is that these new arrivals have moved us as did none of their predecessors—not more, indeed, than do the little company of hardened warriors sent back here on a brief mission by General PERSHING, but differently. The Americans from the front are of us, as well as with us, and we have a sort of compunction about praising them too highly, as that, after a fashion, would be praising ourselves too highly, and we prefer to leave that task to others. As regards the Australians and the Frenchmen no such restraint exists. Not only are they the guests of the city; they are also the guests of every citizen who meets them, and all are eager to play the rôle of host. The city is theirs and all that in it they can find or we can offer. To spend money for them is a privilege eagerly sought, to take it from them is something to be done only under protest, and usually the protests are made effective.

New York honors itself by honoring them, and how well, how modestly, how courteously do they bear themselves in circumstances that might easily turn heads less steady than theirs!

A Chance for All to Fight.

It has been a notable peculiarity of the bond sale just closed, and continues to be one of the distribution of Thrift and War Savings Stamps, that they have enormously increased the number of people who, while unable to take part in activities distinctly military in the older senses of that word, have found themselves privileged to do work which, in its way, is as much "war work" as is the holding of a front-line trench or charging "over the top."

Anybody who chose could be of assistance in raising money, as well as in giving or lending it, and thousands and thousands of women as well as of men, and not a few children, who otherwise would not have had the satisfaction that comes from personal service in the one great cause have eagerly seized the opportunity thus provided for them. Some have worked hard and efficiently, and others not so much or so well, but all to the full measure of ability, and when that is the case it is much.

The result has been more than the piling up in great heaps of money, on which the successful prosecution of the war depends; there has also been given to every one who has participated in the mighty effort a keen, personal realization that the nation is engaged in a serious and difficult undertaking. The miserable feeling that "the war is 3,000 miles away" has been pretty well dissipated during these weeks of strenuous endeavor, and few indeed must they be who can still rest sleepily content on the old illusion that, no matter what happened in Europe, the United States was safe—too big and strong to be attacked.

We are not as happy as we used to be, but we have much more sense, a better knowledge of relative values.

Experience Teaches Its Lesson.

"Washington" is coming to the conclusion on one thing after another, and doing it now with pleasing frequency, that its first determinations are not always the best that could be made, and it is showing now a commendable readiness to admit its mistakes and revise its judgments. There is, for instance, the giving of addresses in connection with the names of soldiers killed, wounded, or missing abroad. That couldn't, shouldn't, and wouldn't be done, we were told, because it would give the enemy valuable information in regard to the strength and position of the American troops in the field. Why and how that was so was elaborately explained, but nobody could understand the explanations, so nobody accepted them as anything more than a product of the constitutional tendency of military men to keep civilians in the dark about military operations.

Now, what couldn't, wouldn't, and shouldn't be done becomes routine procedure, and—well, the Germans haven't yet taken either Paris or London.

Also, we are to have daily "communiqués," instead of weekly reviews—what everybody wants—from "Washington," instead of what the papers are quite competent to supply in better quality. That we shall be always and entirely satisfied with the "communiqués" is not to be expected, but, at least, they will be "official" and trustworthy as far as they go.

In time—and it cannot be too soon—"Washington" will come to a realizing sense of how important, how necessary, it is that the mail service between here and France be enlarged and improved. The present state of the postal arrangements is well-nigh intolerable and well-nigh unpardonable. It adds needless anxieties to war and cools patriotic ardors at a time when they should burn with their highest and clearest flame. True, the soldiers are not abroad to read and write letters, but they will fight the better, not the worse, if communication with their friends is reasonably regular and frequent.

It must be made so, and doubtless will be as soon as "Washington" gets a little more light on public sentiment.

CHARLES I. AND KARL I.

Venizelos's Remarks Extended to Apply to the Austrian Sovereign.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial article "Troubled Austria" it was natural, in warning Emperor Charles as to what had sometimes happened to monarchs who had tried to govern without their legal legislators, that you should have mentioned the cases of Charles I. of England, who lost his head, and Constantine of Greece, who lost his throne.

These two cases were brought into striking juxtaposition by M. Venizelos in his great speech of Aug. 26-27, 1917, before the Greek Boulé. He said:

> In the palace of Westminster there stands a tablet in a conspicuous place which says to the people: "Here was beheaded Charles, King of England, for having usurped the liberties of the English people."
> Every time British sovereigns proceed to the palace of Westminster to proclaim the opening or closing of Parliament they pass before that tablet.
> It is my intention to propose to the forthcoming National Assembly that a marble tablet be set up in this hall in such a position that the King, on coming here, may see it, and that it be inscribed: "King Constantine having dissolved for the second time the Chamber of 1915, in order to impose a personal policy, lost the throne, while the dissolved Chamber, reconvoked, continued to perform its constitutional duties."

Let us hope that it will not be long before the Austrian Reichsrath resumes "its constitutional duties" under similar conditions. G. C.

America's Awakening.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your leading article in today's issue on the magnificent success of the Third Liberty Loan puts 17,000,000 nails into the wooden statue of Hindenburg. It is, indeed, fine and inspiring reading, and you do well to exult in the fact that the increase in the number of individual subscribers proves that America is fully and completely aroused and now realizes that this war is her war, and that the 3,000 miles of water which separates the United States from the western front is merely, except for the difficulty it causes in the transportation of troops, a narrow stream. If I may be permitted to differ with you on one point, however, I do not think that the country owes a debt of gratitude for this great awakening to Hindenburg, to the Kaiser, to Brest-Litovsk, to Armenia, to Amiens, or to Ypres. I believe, and I speak from an experience of having addressed large meetings all over the country during this as well as the Second Liberty Loan campaign, that it is to the spirit of American men, women, and even children (for the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts and the Junior Naval Reserve have done noble work) that this "transformation" is due—the spirit of patriotism and national feeling, the spirit of sacrifice, and an indomitable determination to give sons and husbands and brothers, money and service, to this stupendous crusade for the protection of civilization; the spirit that has been caught from the courageous boys of all the Allies, and which has burst into such a beautiful flame that it will set alight the next few years in the history of this country and put an end to any doubts that there may be in some timid hearts as to the eventual outcome of the war.

The Right Portuguese Flag.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Portuguese people are indignant with the display of the old flag of the monarchy, the blue and white, where the red and green colors of the republic should be flown. This ignorance regarding the Portuguese colors extends to moving picture displays of the flags of all the Allies, where the old flag is still shown.

All Portuguese are with the Allies in this world-war and fighting for justice and liberty with the Allies, but they wish to see the proper flag in action. ABEL G. MOURA.

LOYAL IRISH-AMERICANS

Have No Use for Agitators Who at This Moment Attack Our Ally.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This is no time for any man who has the slightest regard for his country to denounce any of our allies. England has been violently assailed by certain Americans who do not seem to be able to forget the days of the Revolution, and by certain persons of Irish extraction who seem to place the Irish question above the very liberty of our own country. I yield to no man in my love for Ireland, where my father was born. He was an Irishman who in his youth sought our shores and became a real American citizen, and was among the first from this city to respond to the call of Abraham Lincoln in 1861.

I have no patience with the Irishmen or sons of the Irishmen who make it their business to denounce England in the present crisis. At this time, when the entire civilized world is united in an effort to make the world safe for democracy, the Irishman or son of an Irishman who denounces England and fights her just conscription law is opposing the traditions of the true liberty-loving Irishman. The man in whose bosom beats the real Irish heart condemns the conduct of the fanatic and professional Irish agitator who, in the innermost recesses of his soul cares nothing for Ireland's future or for the real liberty of the world, but is impelled solely by selfish motives, or probably something more base.

At this particular moment the British are baring their bosoms to the bayonets of the Huns, and with their backs against the wall are holding the Prussian hordes in their last desperate attempt to reach a coast from which it would be an easy matter to invade this country and place us all under the domination of the Kaiser.

Instead of leaving this question of Irish conscription to the professional Irish agitator, if the question were submitted to the thousands of brave young Irishmen who are today wearing a British uniform, and those of Irish extraction who are fighting side by side with the British Army under our own American flag, there would be no question as to the sentiment. If conscription was good enough for the sons of Irishmen in America, it is good enough for the sons of Irishmen in Ireland.

Ireland has always had the sympathy and good-will of every civilized nation on earth, and I, for one, protest against the action of the misguided few who would turn that sympathy into scorn.

No man can be partly American and be a true patriot. No man can be partly pro-ally and be a true patriot. It will be time enough to perfect conditions in Ireland when the general enemy of mankind has been brought to bay. Whatever England has done in the past against the progress of liberty she has amply expatiated by the rivers of blood of her valiant sons now being shed on the plains of Flanders and Picardy. But, admitting England has been tyrannical, as for me, give me English tyranny in preference to Prussian slavery.

Any American citizen who is anti-ally is pro-German. There is no middle course. We must be heart and soul for our own Government and for every one of our allies or classed as traitors to the United States.

German Stores of Vanadium.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in your issue of today, under "Believe Germany Has Stocks of Vanadium," that analysis of fragments of shells flung by the German long-range guns into Paris shows that the walls of the projectiles contained a considerable quantity of vanadium. This fact does not surprise me.

The sources of vanadium from which Germany may be getting this useful element, so important in connection with the making of special steels and allied war materials, are many, and do not leave much ground for speculation, as those sources are generally known, besides the ferro-vanadium taken prior to the war by the Deutschland, or imported from Sweden at a later date. Spain has potential sources of vanadium ores. It is probable that from this source some vanadium ores and concentrates find their way to Germany. Both Germany and Austria are not devoid of native vanadium ores. These are found in commercial quantity in Rheinish Bavaria, in Saxony, and in many other places throughout Germany. Vanadium ores are also widely distributed in the Joachimsthal mines, and in several other Austrian mining districts.

The intensive working of these known deposits, situated within the borders of the Central Empires, easily explains the origin of the vanadium used by Germany, besides that of any consignments which may yet be obtained by secret channels.

Bohemians With the Italians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reference to the report that Bohemian troops are joining Italian troops against Austria, and that the first detachment is already on the Italian fighting line, wearing Italian uniforms, I am glad to note that this is only one of the many misruled people of the Dual Monarchy who will eventually understand the situation. Sooner or later the Dual Monarchy is bound to collapse. Let us hope that the Bohemian troops will distinguish themselves on the allied front, true to their best traditions. Success be with them. SOMEWHERE EVERYWHERE.

Somewhere? Everywhere
From Golden Gate to the Narrows
Rises a question that harrows.
The answer seems life or death to those who care.

After I'm gone, you will be proud of me.
There! Don't cry! You know I must go.
I am not one: there is a crowd of me—
Fellows like me that mustn't say "No"
To the need of their land, your own dear land.
Deep down in your heart you understand.
Don't cry! It hurts me so.

While I'm away, I shan't be far from you.
Come, dear! Smile! Don't look so grave.
Each moonbeam of France will be a bon soir from you,
Proof that your love for me melted, forgave.
Smile me to duty, and cloud there is none;
Be with me in this, and we are one.
Now smile! It makes me brave.

When I get back—why, there's no doubt of it!
Father's worst wound was a blister from tan;
And grandfather—ask him what he won out of it,
Raw at Bull Run; but he never ran—
When I get back, you'll honor the day
You helped me to go and cheered me away.
Dear woman, to make me a man.

Somewhere? Everywhere
From Key West to Lake Itasca,
From Porto Rico to Alaska,
This answer means death or life to those who care.

RICHARD BUTLER GLAENZER.

A LAFAYETTE FOR RUSSIA.

A Russian View of How the Country Might be Saved and With It the Whole of Civilization.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In last Sunday's issue of THE TIMES you have printed a statement of a representative Russian, A. T. Sack, concerning the ways and means of helping Russia out of her present hopeless condition. As a Russian, having all my nearest relatives living in that unfortunate country, and having intimate knowledge of conditions over there, I consider it my duty to confirm the conclusions drawn by Mr. Sack as to the possibility of saving Russia.

I am fully convinced that a small force of technical experts, having at their command all necessary supplies for the rehabilitation of the civil population along the route of their gradual advance into Siberia, would require a very insignificant military force for their protection, as the great majority of the Russian people will welcome them as their saviors. It is a fact that the present despots of Russia are bitterly opposed not only by all the educated elements and the masses of the peasantry, but even by a considerable part of the working class. It should greatly facilitate the work of this proposed expedition if we Russians had a large representation in its members.

Being identified with certain local organizations of Russian workingmen, I can testify to the present intensity of their patriotic feeling, their grasp of the true meaning of the present world struggle, as demonstrated by their wholehearted support of the Third Liberty Loan, and the spirit of self-sacrifice permeating them.

If the possibilities and means for such an expedition to save Russia were procurable, there could not possibly be any lack of Russian men willing to go immediately. And that is why the task is even simpler than as outlined by Mr. Sack. The nucleus of a purely Russian military force could be easily organized here with the assistance of American instructors, and there is no doubt that such a force, once arrived in Siberia, would rapidly expand into an army of quite considerable size, provided the necessary supplies and technical services were on hand, and there American help is absolutely necessary.

In the same issue of THE TIMES is printed an article of your Paris correspondent, Mr. Grasty, in which we read that, according to information furnished by persons recently arrived from Russia, there is no class or group in sight in that country capable of leading her out of her present state of dissolution. This statement is certainly true, with some qualifications.

After the collapse of the Czaristic régime, all the power naturally went to the best organized and consequently best prepared stratum of society, the working class, though at first apparently the country was being ruled by a mixed Government, in which the representatives of the propertied classes and intellectuals played an important part. But, in fact, the Soviets, guided themselves by proletarian minorities, always shaped things to suit themselves.

The six months just passed since the working class came into undisputed power with their régime of brutal oppression and violence against their opponents, have shown conclusively, what all sane observers and thinkers had predicted long ago, that in a country with an undeveloped and unorganized industrial structure the working class cannot alone, unaided, solve the colossal problems of government, much less, in the case of Russia, resuscitate the dying dissolving body of the former empire, and create order out of chaos.

But, if the Russian proletariat is unable to accomplish this, there is at present no other element in existence in Russia strong enough to constitute such a crystallizing centre, because the bourgeoisie, always impotent before, is of course weaker now than ever, and the peasantry represents an incoherent mass, helpless and passive in their sufferings.

And so we see that only through the immediate, unstinted aid of such friendly democracies as the United States can Russia be redeemed, strong and free, a powerful democracy; otherwise she might succumb in the claws of German imperialism and give place to a number of weak dependent States, a constant source of international friction in the future.

Let America send over to Russia a Lafayette with the necessary support and the great Russian nation will be saved; and then there will spring up in the hearts of the Russian people a spirit of deep friendship and devotion to the great American sister democracy, which will in the future richly repay her for all the efforts and sacrifices.

And the salvation of Russia might prove to be also the salvation of the whole civilized world, as I firmly believe.

BOTH PARTIES URGE WOMEN TO ENROLL

Tammany Will Today Pass On Women Members of Its Executive Committee.

REPUBLICANS ARE TO WAIT

Leaders Will Keep Committee Intact Until After May 25, When Enrollment Takes Place.

Democratic and Republican leaders have been extremely busy of late urging women to enroll on May 25. On that date women who are entitled to the new franchise powers will be allowed to enroll in any party they see fit. It is being explained to the women, both by the regular party leaders and the Woman Suffrage Party, that they must enroll on May 25 if they wish to vote at the primaries in September, but that failure to enroll as a party member does not mean that they will lose their vote at the November election.

At noon today Tammany Hall will take a momentous step in the way of recognizing women as voters. The Executive Committee of the organization will meet and pass upon the names of the women who have been elected members of the Executive Committee by the various Assembly District Committees. Thirty-seven women district leaders have been selected by the District Committees to sit in the high council of the Tammany organization, there being exactly that number of male district leaders. Although there are but twenty-three Assembly Districts in Manhattan, under the new apportionment law, several of the districts have two and even three leaders. In districts where there is only one male leader, he is entitled to half a vote and a female leader to half a vote. In districts where there are three leaders, each male and female leader is entitled to one-sixth of a vote. This applies to the Twelfth Assembly District, where Charles F. Murphy lives, there being three male leaders from this district.

Tammany was not ready to announce the names of the women leaders, or associate leaders, as they are termed, last night, as several of them had not been passed upon by the district committees. The full roster will be handed in to the Executive Committee today, however, and the seal of approval will be stamped upon each name. At today's meeting, after the new leaders have been admitted to the councils of the Executive Committee, there will be a discussion as to the best possible manner in which to get out a full enrollment of the women on May 25. It is likely that subcommittees of women will be appointed to spread the propaganda among the women voters, both by personal contact and by the circulation of literature. Tammany will bend every effort to enroll as many women as Democrats as possible.

The manner of choosing the women, or associate, leaders was left to the district committees, and in each district the committee made its choice after finding out by canvassing the women of the district who was wanted. The Tammany Executive Committee is the judge of its own members, and the women suggested by the district committees must be acceptable to the present members of the Executive Committee before they are admitted to the inner circle. It is not expected, however, that any women selected by the district committees will be turned down by the Executive Committee.

The Republicans have been working just as hard as the Democrats in getting the women interested in the party organization, with the exception that the Republican Executive Committee has not yet put its official seal upon the admittance of women as district leaders. The Republican leaders have contended that the women will not be eligible for membership in the Executive Committee until the regular enrollment has taken place.

"We are way ahead of the Democrats in recognizing women as party workers," said Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee last night. "The women are organized in every Assembly district, and women district leaders and women captains have been chosen. We have had an unofficial Executive Committee of women for more than two weeks, and they have been participating in our party affairs for more than two months. At the County Committee meetings each month the women are allowed to be present and take part in the discussion of party affairs.

"We are preparing for a heavy enrollment of women in the Republican Party. All the women workers will be out on enrollment day getting the women voters to enroll. That is the only practical way to get them to choose which party they will belong to. Of course, the women workers will go through their districts and personally tell the women voters how essential it is for them to enroll in the party, and of course there will be much literature circulated."

The Woman Suffrage Party has been sending circulars to women voters for several days, urging the necessity of their enrolling. The circular reads:

"Do you know that May 25 is enrollment day? If you wish to vote at the primaries in September you must enroll in a political party on May 25, 7:30 A. M. to 10:30 P. M. Voting at the primaries in September you must enroll select candidates of your party for the general election in November. If you do not enroll on May 25 you do not lose your vote at the November election."

These are the Assembly districts where there are two or more district leaders at present: First, 2; Second, 2; Third, 2; Fourth, 2; Fifth, 3; Tenth, 2; Twelfth, 3; Fourteenth, 2; Sixteenth, 2; Seventeenth, 2; Eighteenth, 2. All the other districts have one male leader and one woman leader.

OPEN CONGRESS FIGHT.

Security League Will Aid Candidates Who Uphold the President.

The National Security League, with headquarters at 19 West Forty-fourth Street, announced yesterday that preliminary steps had been taken in the campaign which the league will wage this fall to obtain the election of a House that will support the President. The first move, it was said, would be to ascertain how the present Representatives have voted on war measures. When this tabulation of member's records is completed the league will issue a list of "good and bad" Congressmen.

On the showings in this list the league purposes to make its campaign for or against candidates, through the organization's 481 branches.

"I believe the greatest national calamity would be the election of a discordant Congress," said S. Stanwood Menken, President, in discussing the plans. "We hope to obtain the reelection of those men who have stood by the President. I should like to make clear that our efforts will be entirely nonpolitical. We want good, thorough Americans, irrespective of their political faith."

In an effort to ascertain the voters' views regarding Congressmen who have been lukewarm in supporting the Administration, ten professors who originally were sent out on educational work are sending in reports from all parts of the country. The professors and the territories in which they are at work are: Dr. Franklin H. Giddings, of Columbia, in the South; Dr. W. B. Munro, of Harvard, in California; Dr. W. H. Schofield, of Harvard, in the Northwest; Dr. C. H. Van Tyne, University of Michigan, in the Middle West; Dr. Walter P. Hall, of Princeton, in Washington and Oregon; Dr. M. F. Libby, of the University of Colorado, in the Rocky Mountain States, and Dr. E. D. Adams, of Stanford University, in New England.

LAVELLE SAYS BACK WILSON

Monsignor, in Address to Catholic Women, Approves Overman Bill.

Flags were massed at every point of the Maxine Elliott Theatre yesterday afternoon for a patriotic meeting of the League of Catholic Women, of which Miss Theresa O'Donohue is President. Miss Elisabeth Marbury presided, and the speakers were Mgr. M. J. Lavelle; Abbé Flynn, the war priest; Captain Guardabassi, and Mrs. Harris Childs, who came from the Red Cross in place of Mrs. August Belmont, who was to have spoken.

Mgr. Lavelle told of the prominent place in the war work that had been taken by the Catholics, and urged the women to further effort, calling for support of the President. He quoted an instance in the experience of Lincoln and his critics at the time of the civil war. It was the time the famous Blondin was crossing Niagara Falls on a tightrope.

"and I was crossing that rope carrying on my back your wives and children, do you think you would shake the rope to hinder my getting over with my precious burden? No, you would get down on your knees and pray with clasped hands that I might reach the other end safely." "The same condition exists today," continued Mgr. Lavelle, "and we can only win the war with God's help and your co-operation."

Referring to the power given the President by the Overman bill, he said:

"A man said to me today that we had given the President more power than the Kaiser would dare to command. 'Yes,' I answered, 'and that is the only kind of power we want in time of war. After the war is over the President will not wish to hold it for two minutes. If he should the people of this great land would rise up as one man to see that their rights were not usurped.'"

COPELAND OFFERS AID TO THE NATION

Letter to Washington Authorities Follows Health Commissioner's Talk with Hylan.

MAYOR CHANGES FRONT

Joins in Offer to Federal Officials for Whose Letters He Did Not "Give a Darn."

After visiting Mayor Hylan yesterday Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, wrote to Secretary of War Baker, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Surgeon General Blue of the Public Health Service, Surgeon General Gorgas of the army, and Surgeon General Braisted of the navy, expressing the hope that the Health Department might be of service to the Federal Government. In the letter Commissioner Copeland said it was the wish of Mayor Hylan to co-operate with every branch of the Government. Dr. Copeland said that the Mayor realized that as New York City was the chief port of embarkation, it was necessary to maintain high standards of public health and sanitation so as to protect soldiers and sailors from disease.

Dr. Copeland said it was his highest ambition to have the Health Department live up to its traditions and to insure the safety of citizens against contagious, infectious, and pestilential diseases. Commissioner Copeland closed the letter to each official with the statement that in the sentiments he wrote he was "joined by the Mayor." In medical circles the announcement of Dr. Copeland's activity created a stir. It was pointed out that Surgeon General Blue, more than a week ago, sent to Mayor Hylan a telegram urging that he refrain from curtailing any of the activities in connection with public health education, and that the Mayor made no reply to it. When Dr. J. Lewis Amster, former Health Commissioner, resigned he said that the Mayor, in reference to the telegram from Surgeon General Blue, said he did not "give a darn for these Federal Governmental letters, or letters from any other persons interested in public health education."

Funds for Antitoxin.

Medical circles were also interested in learning that Mayor Hylan yesterday gave Commissioner Copeland full power to go ahead and make any purchases for the department if the Commissioner thought they were necessary. Dr. Copeland admitted that one of the matters he took up with the Mayor yesterday was the request for $35,000 submitted to the Mayor by Dr. Amster on April 19. The appropriation was desired by Dr. William H. Park of the Bureau of Laboratories in order to increase the antitoxin supply.

"I took this matter up with the Mayor today," Dr. Copeland said, "and he assured me that I could spend as much money in antitoxin work as necessary. But he wanted me to assure him that the $35,000 was necessary."

In transmitting Dr. Park's request to the Mayor on April 19, Dr. Amster said: "I have personally investigated this request and deem it of the utmost importance that it be granted, inasmuch as it is to cover the work in connection with the free distribution of antitoxin for the poor of the city and also the work of production of sera for the Government. If the request is not granted all work outside of that performed by the diagnostic laboratory will have to be discontinued."

In his report to Dr. Amster on April 18, Dr. Park, speaking of the necessity for the money, said: "At the present moment we must give immediate orders for our vials for the bottling of antitoxin and the tube for the Schick test and vaccine virus. The glass factories close the middle of June, and it is even now late to be sure of these orders being supplied.

"This year we are not only supplying the city with these products to prevent and cure disease, but are weekly increasing our supplies to the Government. Without our laboratories the troops would not have had a sufficient supply of anti-meningitis serum this Winter, and even with our supplies of pneumococcus serum the troops lacked the amount needed. We are the only ones who supply the toxin-antitoxin to prevent diphtheria."

When he was asked whether Dr. Park would receive all the supplies he requested, Commissioner Copeland said that Dr. Park had received his verbal assurance that he might go ahead and contract for the materials he needed and that he would get the money. He also said he would take the matter up with Dr. Park on Thursday.

To Open a "Health Drive."

Commissioner Copeland announced that this week he would inaugurate a "Health Drive," and that in this connection a meeting would be held in his office soon. He expected to have present at the meeting, he said, the heads of all the departments of the Health Department and other representatives. In announcing the Health Drive, the Commissioner said:

"In this stress of national crisis it is incumbent on the Department of Health to be unusually active in promulgating the widest possible information as to health matters in order that the most humble tenement dweller may know the necessity of observing hygienic rules in every way."

The drive will be largely an educational campaign and will be supported by all the police power of the department.

It was learned yesterday that Dr. S. S. Goldwater, whom Mayor Hylan, according to Dr. Amster, desired removed from the Medical Advisory Council of the Health Department, tendered his resignation on May 2 to Dr. Copeland. Up to yesterday Dr. Copeland had made no reply to the letter, and when asked what he planned to do in regard to it said he would be happy to have Dr. Goldwater as well as Dr. Abraham Jacobi serve on the Advisory Council. Mayor Hylan, according to Dr. Amster, also demanded the removal of Dr. Jacobi from membership on the Advisory Council.

Commissioner Copeland said that there were also a number of other medical men in the city he would like to have as members of the council. Some of his appointments to membership on the council, he indicated, would be homoeopaths, and possibly some physicians of the eclectic school. The Commissioner is a homoeopathist. He further said that in replying to Dr. Goldwater he would thank him for his good wishes and assure him that he did not believe any trouble would be caused by retaining him on the council. Dr. Goldwater's letter follows:

1 East 100th Street, New York, May 2, 1918.

My Dear Dr. Copeland: I appear to have been the innocent partial cause of the official demise of one Health Commissioner. This must not happen again, so please accept my resignation as a member of the Medical Advisory Board and start without a handicap. (you may interpret this as personal jest, but official earnest.)

You've tackled a difficult job under most trying conditions, but with endurance, patience, resourcefulness, grit, and a sense of humor (not to mention your professional qualifications) you ought to win out. I send you my best wishes. Faithfully,

S. S. GOLDWATER.

A conference was held at the Health Department yesterday regarding the new law providing for the examination and sequestration of persons suspected of having certain blood diseases. There were present Commissioner Copeland, Chief Magistrate McAdoo, Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, James R. Hamilton, Commissioner of Correction; Acting District Attorney MacLaughlin of Brooklyn, Deputy Police Commissioner John W. Goff, Jr., Dr. Robert J. Wilson of the Bureau of Hospitals, Dr. Louis I. Harris of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities; Dr. B. F. Knause, head of the Sanitary Bureau, and Dr. Connelly of the Metropolitan Hospital.

The law was explained by Chief Magistrate McAdoo and arrangements were made for the assignment of women physicians to examine suspects at Riverside Hospital. The latter institution will be fitted up in a few days for this purpose.

CALLS HEARINGS A FARCE.

Dr. McCombs Assails Conduct of the Health Board Investigation.

Speaking before the Women's Trade Union League at 7 East Fifteenth Street last night, Dr. C. E. McCombs of the Bureau of Municipal Research made the charge that the public hearings held before Mayor Hylan's Health Department investigators were a farce.

"We went to the public hearings to talk about something that had been decided on before we got there," he said. "The investigators had decided to abolish the Bureau of Public Health Education and also to get rid of Lucius P. Brown, Director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs.

"We have been fooled and tricked by language that did not mean what it said. Everything at the public hearings was preconceived and preordained. The public hearings were a farce."

Dr. McCombs asserted that there had been many innuendoes of graft in the Bureau of Food and Drugs, but that when District Attorney Swann completed his investigation he found that only three minor officials were implicated in the alleged grafting.

CALLS FEDERAL POLICY MENACE TO MEDICINE

Dr. Blumer Says Attitude of Surgeon General's Office to Medical Schools Is Serious.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 6.—The medical profession of the future is threatened by an existing uncertain Government policy, Dr. George Blumer, professor of Yale University, told the American Society for Clinical Investigation today at the annual convention at the Hotel Traymore. Dr. Blumer is the retiring President of the society.

"The period of general dissatisfaction, of general hypersensitiveness, to some extent hysteria, will result in the fruition of many important reforms," he said. Dr. Blumer urged delegates to give the menacing situation their full attention and guide the changes in the right course. Dr. Blumer said in part:

"On the one hand the authorities at Washington have insisted that medical schools must be maintained in an efficient condition, while on the other hand the same authorities have consistently depleted the schools of their normal teaching forces. A recent document from the Surgeon General's office, full of unconscious humor, requests information as to the number of students who can be efficiently taught and indicates that the policy of depleting the staffs of the schools is to continue and the decimated ranks of teachers must be filled by women, cripples, and dotards.

"The policy which has been adopted not only makes for inefficiency but also for unrest. Nothing is more productive of unrest than uncertainty. Small wonder that there is difficulty in holding the medical schools together when the very existence of the schools seems problematical in the face of the existing governmental conditions. From the point of view of medical education, it would certainly have been wiser and fairer to have mobilized the entire medical profession and assigned them to their work rather than to have pursued the present policy. The mental instability and the paralysis of judgment which is apt to attack any of us under existing conditions make it too easy for men to choose the more spectacular methods of serving their country rather than the humdrum rôles which must be played by those who feel that their duty consists of sticking to their posts and carrying on the usual routine."

The annual election of officers this afternoon resulted as follows: President, Dr. H. A. Christian of Boston; Vice President, G. Canby Robinson of St. Louis; Treasurer, Dr. Alfred H. Hess of New York; Secretary, Dr. Walter W. Palmer of New York; Councillor, Dr. George Blumer of New Haven.

The annual convention of the American Association of Physicians opens at the Traymore tomorrow.

WEDS PAYMASTER LE ROY.

Miss Mary Young a Bride in Holy Trinity Church.

The wedding of Paymaster Clifford W. Le Roy, U. S. N., and Miss Mary C. Young, a daughter of Dr. Clement C. Young and Mrs. Young, of 530 Riverside Drive, was solemnized at 4:30 yesterday afternoon in Holy Trinity Church, Lenox Avenue and 122d Street, by the rector, Dr. H. P. Nichols. The bride, who walked with her father, wore white organdie over cloth of silver, with a lace and cloth of silver train. Her tulle veil was held with a point lace coronet and orange blossoms, and she carried orchids, lilies, and sweet peas, and wore a diamond pendant, the bridegroom's gift.

She was attended by Mrs. L. S. Pettit as matron of honor, and the other attendants were Mrs. M. P. Arnold, Mrs. Thurber Anderson Knox, and Miss Marian Werham. The bridegroom had his brother, Len E. Le Roy, as his best man.

ROBERT A. PARKER DEAD.

Vice President of Irving Trust Company Was an Expert on Credits.

Robert Ashton Parker, Vice President of the Irving Trust Company and former President of the Market and Fulton National Bank, died yesterday at his home, 495 West End Avenue, in his sixty-first year. The Market and Fulton National Bank, of which Mr. Parker had been the head for two years, was merged with the Irving Trust Company several months ago. He was an expert on credits, and was one of the pioneer credit managers of the United States, his work early attracting the attention of the late James Stillman, when the latter was President of the National City Bank. Mr. Stillman brought Mr. Parker to the National City institution.

Mr. Parker was born in London, England, and at the age of seventeen went to Canada, and after several years' employment there became connected with the credit department of the Allan Steamship Company here. Later he went to the firm of Mayer Brothers, wholesale druggists, at St. Louis, and afterward became credit manager of Swift & Co., at Chicago, coming to New York as the representative of the firm in this city and as Eastern manager. It was while he was with the packing concern that Mr. Parker became associated with Mr. Stillman, who took him into the National City Bank and the Second National Bank, of which Mr. Stillman also was President. Mr. Parker had been Vice President of the Market and Fulton Bank for ten years before he was elected President, after Alexander Gilbert, the former President, became Chairman of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Parker was a member of the Union League and the Bankers' Club. He is survived by a son, Lieutenant Ashton Parker, of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, stationed at Waco, Texas, and a daughter, Mrs. E. C. Blake.

MRS. POTTER PALMER, SOCIAL LEADER, DIES

Chicago Widow, Worth $15,000,000, Succumbs at Her Florida Winter Home.

PATRON OF ARTS AND LABOR

Her Services to Columbian and Paris Expositions Earned Her Fame—An Organizer of Charity Ball.

SARASOTA, Fla., May 6.—Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago died from pneumonia at her Winter home here last night. At her bedside were her sister, Mrs. Frederick D. Grant; her brother, Adrian C. Honore; her two sons and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer and Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, Jr., and her nephew-in-law and niece, Prince and Princess Cantacuzene.

The funeral of Mrs. Palmer will be held from her Chicago residence. The funeral party will leave tomorrow morning.

In addition to being Chicago's acknowledged social leader for a score of years and more, Mrs. Palmer had an enviable reputation as a sagacious and far-seeing business woman. Her work as President of the Board of Lady Managers for the Columbian Exposition at Chicago stands well up among the record achievements of American women in business. Also, she was a connoisseur in art, and encouraged its development in this country.

Mrs. Palmer, who was Miss Bertha Honore, was born in Louisville of French descent. Her father, H. H. Honore, was one of the leading citizens in Louisville, and his daughter grew up well known in the social life of the Kentucky city. She went to school at a convent in Georgetown, Md., and on her graduation went to Chicago, where she made her début in 1870. She married Potter Palmer, a prominent merchant, who was considerably older than herself, in 1873.

Her initiation in the intricacies of business came while she was a young bride, for her husband suffered, together with thousands of others less wealthy than himself, as a result of the great Chicago fire. To his wife Mr. Palmer afterward gave much of the credit for recouping his losses on this occasion.

Mrs. Palmer first became prominent in the country at large in 1890, when she was elected to the Presidency of the Board of Lady Managers of the Columbian Exposition. She immediately went to Europe in the interests of the fair, and through her efforts there aroused the attention of the Queens of Italy and Belgium to the fair. Her friendship with royalty, growing out of this visit, extended to the end of her life.

It was Mrs. Palmer who made the match between her niece, Julia Dent Grant, and Prince Cantacuzene. King Albert of Belgium, who was then Prince Albert, was a warm friend of Mrs. Palmer's, and has visited her and her husband in Chicago.

Shortly after the World's Fair was over Mrs. Palmer began to interest herself in the annual charity ball held in Chicago. She was the leading spirit in organizing it and carrying it through to a successful conclusion each year. Even when traveling in Europe Mrs. Palmer always returned home in the Fall in time to act as one of the promoters of the affair.

In 1900 President McKinley appointed Mrs. Palmer as the only woman member of the National Commission to the Paris Exposition. There were reports at the time that the French Government had unofficially protested against the appointment of a woman, but these whispers were stopped for all time after the exposition, when Mrs. Palmer received the decoration of the Legion of Honor for her services.

Throughout her entire life Mrs. Palmer took an active interest in philanthropic, charitable, and civic activities. She personally directed the first campaign of her son, Honore Palmer, when he was elected to the Chicago City Council. Near the close of the campaign, Mrs. Palmer held a reception for members of a marching club in her million-dollar Lake Shore Drive home and shook hands with hundreds of ward politicians and their cohorts who attended.

She was not only a liberal patron of arts, buying works of art for herself and supporting the opera and orchestra in Chicago, but in 1910 she gave away a gold medal and a prize of $1,000 as an aid for American artists. She did much to promote art exhibitions in Chicago and was a patron of the Art Institute.

Mrs. Palmer had always a warm spot in her heart for working people of every class, and helped them from time to time without a hint of condescension or charity. In 1912, hearing that the National Civic Federation was to hold a meeting in Chicago and that representatives of union labor and employers were to get together, she wrote August Belmont offering her house as a meeting place. He accepted, as did the labor union men, the latter on condition that they not be expected to attend in "dress suits." At one time she turned her house over to a reception of shopgirls. She was tireless in devising plans for aiding factory girls and became a patron of the Woman's Trade Union League. Through her efforts the millinery workers of Chicago were organized into a union.

It is said that she spent $50,000 each year in charity, sending the amount anonymously to charitable organizations.

When her husband died in 1902 he had so much faith in her business ability that he made her one of the trustees of his estate. Her brother, Adrian Honore, was the other. By Mr. Palmer's will the estate was divided into two equal funds. Fund A, of which the trustees had full charge, was to pay the two sons, Honore and Potter Palmer, Jr., such sums as the wife deemed advisable. From Fund B came such money as Mrs. Palmer chose to draw for herself. In this she was given carte blanche. Mrs. Palmer under the will could do with her share of her husband's fortune "as she saw fit." She could will the other half to the sons in such proportion and in any manner she chose.

PALMER ESTATE $15,000,000.

Widow Is Believed to Have Doubled Wealth Left by Her Husband.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 6.—Mrs. Potter Palmer, who died yesterday in Florida, left an estate which is conservatively estimated as exceeding $15,000,000. The property left by Potter Palmer, when he died in 1902, it is believed, has doubled in value under the astute management of Mrs. Palmer, and speculation is now rife as to what disposition she has made of the estate.

Mrs. Palmer came into possession of extensive real estate holdings, the Potter Palmer mansion on Lake Shore Drive, containing priceless art treasures, antique furniture, the famous gold and silver dinner service, and a host of valuables.

According to authoritative information, the estate consists of the Palmer House, worth about $5,000,000; the Lake Shore Drive mansion, estimated at $1,500,000; 150 properties, mainly tenements, worth upward of $6,000,000; personal property of $1,750,000 or more, and the 2,000-acre Sarasota estate in Florida, the value of which and the contents of the Italian villa on the estate is probably in excess of $1,000,000.

GERMAN VETERINARY ARRIVES IN CHAINS

Tried to Kill Guard and to Bribe American Soldiers to Desert.

SINN FEINERS UNDER FIRE

Federal Authorities Examining Speeches Recently Made Here, Especially Mrs. Skeffington's.

On a ship which arrived at an Atlantic port yesterday arrived a German who is charged with having attempted to bribe certain American soldiers who are under orders to proceed overseas to desert to the Germans at the first favorable opportunity after arriving in France. This German, whose name is Gebhardt Leibisch, is a San Juan veterinary surgeon, and was recently convicted of seditious activities by the Federal Courts in Porto Rico and sentenced to serve a term of four years in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta. On the way to the United States Leibisch made several attempts on the life of one of his guards and had to be placed in chains.

On the same vessel with Leibisch arrived Florencio Romero, a Porto Rican, who has been convicted of sedition and also sentenced to four years in the Atlanta prison. Romero is said to be a member of a prominent Porto Rican family.

The Federal authorities began an investigation yesterday of the speeches made at the Sinn Fein mass meeting in Madison Square Garden Saturday night, and of those at the meeting of the Socialist Conference of the People's Council Sunday afternoon and night. Assistant United States District Attorney Earl B. Barnes is in charge of investigating the speeches of Mrs. F. Sheehy Skeffington and "Gen" Liam Mellows, both of whom are British subjects; Mellows is under indictment for his efforts to obtain, by fraudulent means, an American seaman's passport.

Mrs. Skeffington, it was said yesterday, repeated in the main the speech she delivered in Madison Square Garden to a gathering of People's Council members and sympathizers Sunday night, referring to President Wilson's failure to interfere in Irish matters and saying that unless he does interfere he will come to be known "as the greatest hypocrite in history." She also made reference at that meeting to a conference she had in San Francisco, recently, with "Hindu friends." A large number of Hindus were convicted in San Francisco a few days ago of plotting on American soil to bring about revolution against British rule in India.

Stenographic reports of all the speeches which were made by Government stenographers were turned over to Mr. Barnes yesterday afternoon. In addition to the Skeffington and Mellows speeches Mr. Barnes will examine the remarks made at the People's Council meetings by Isaac McBride, who was private secretary to the late Senator Lane of Oregon; Isaac Bainbridge, a Toronto (Canada) Socialist, and others who spoke at one or both meetings on Sunday.

To Investigate Union.

The Liberty Defense Union, formed to organize "popular support in behalf of persons prosecuted for the exercise of their constitutional rights," &c., has also been brought to the attention of the authorities. The following paragraph from a circular issued to those who attended the Sunday conferences of the People's Council indicates the nature of this organization:

The Liberty Defense Union is working in close co-operation with other interested agencies, including local defense committees and agencies, labor bodies, the Socialist Party, the National Civil Liberties Bureau, the New York Bureau of Legal First Aid, the American Liberty Defense League of Chicago, the People's Council of America, the I. W. W. General Defense Committee, &c. As certain of these agencies are equipped to furnish or procure lawyers, the Union does not secure counsel, but limits itself, for the present at least, to securing popular support, financial and otherwise, on behalf of persons prosecuted.

The persons in charge of the organization have issued an appeal for a fund of $50,000 to fight the battles of those who it is stated "are facing jail in order that we may be free." The headquarters of the Liberty Union are in West Thirteenth Street. The I. W. W., the People's Council and numerous other radical, anti-selective draft, peace-at-any-price, and similar organizations are represented on the committee of the union.

Still another matter now the subject of Government investigation is the publication of a document entitled "The Case Against Universal Military Training," and distributed on Sunday. The name "selective draft" is not used. This pamphlet gives instructions to speakers and others who are ready or willing to agitate against military training for the youth of the country. The pamphlet contains a "synopsis of arguments" prepared by L. P. Lochner, one of the most active of the members of the People's Council. The first paragraph of the pamphlet reads:

Tremendous sums—running into the millions, perhaps—are being spent to fasten universal military training upon the United States. Only one other event in our recent history has been so portentous as the launching of this movement for Prussianizing the nation. That event was our entry into the great war. Even that unparalleled step, sweeping as its effects have been and are to be, may be overshadowed in its ultimate significance by the movement to put every American boy into the harness of militarism.

Eric Schumann and George Roades, who are charged with taking photographs of the Federal shipyards in New Jersey, were arraigned in Jersey City yesterday and ordered held for the action of the Federal authorities. The men, both of whom are American-born citizens, say they did not know they were violating the law, and it is believed they will be able to prove this to be the case. They were held in $500 bail each.

Propaganda Book Seized.

Stephen Binder, American citizen, born in Stuttgart, Germany, owner of a butcher shop on Ralph Avenue, Brooklyn, who before he emigrated to the United States is said to have been an officer in the Prussian Guard, was arrested yesterday afternoon by agents of the Department of Justice on orders issued by Charles W. De Woody. Five hundred copies of his book, "Light and Truth," which, according to Government agents, is German propaganda of the most vicious sort, were seized. Binder is said to have been at one time prominent in the affairs of the German-American Alliance and a member of many other German-American organizations. He is alleged to have boasted on many occasions of his great affection for the Fatherland and his admiration for the Kaiser. Binder was arraigned before United States Commissioner McGoldrick in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon and held in $10,000 bail for the Federal Grand Jury.

The trial of Jeremiah A. O'Leary, Adolph Stern, Luther S. Bedford, and the Bull Publishing Company, on indictments charging violation of the Selective Draft law and the Espionage act, was put over in the Federal District Court yesterday until May 20. When the case was called Thomas B. Felder, counsel for O'Leary, presented Judge Foster with a certificate signed by O'Leary's physician stating that his patient had not sufficiently recovered from the effects of appendicitis.

Felix Malitz, President of the American Correspondence Film Company of 2 Rector Street, who was convicted last Friday in the United States District Court in Brooklyn of conspiracy to smuggle rubber from this country into Germany, was sentenced yesterday afternoon by Judge Martin T. Manton to two years in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., and to pay a fine of $5,000. Gustave Engler, Secretary of the firm, who was convicted with Malitz, was sentenced to serve a year and a half in the same institution. Testimony at the trial showed they shipped the goods by means of vessels of neutral countries without having them recorded on the manifests. This was done by conspiracy with members of the crew of the vessels.

COLUMBIA IS FORCED TO CURTAIL COURSES

Enlistments Decrease Income and Cause $150,000 Reduction for Appropriation.

A reduction of $150,000 in the appropriation for "educational administration and instruction" at Columbia University was voted yesterday by the Board of Trustees, when they adopted the budget for the year 1918-1919. This curtailment in the largest item on a total budget of nearly $4,000,000 was made in anticipation of the $200,000 deficit which the university faces because of the large falling off in registration occasioned by the war.

The cut in the appropriation was made after a committee composed of the heads of the several Faculties had carefully considered the prospects for next year and concluded that a consolidation of some courses and a discontinuation of others should be made "with the least possible impairment of the university's organization and efficiency." Many courses regarded by the committee as "non-essential" will be dropped; others are to be consolidated, and teaching positions which in the opinion of the administrative authorities will not be warranted by the "reduced student attendance" will be temporarily discontinued.

Deficit of $250,000 Already.

It was estimated, however, that with even this decrease in the expenditures the university will face a deficit of at least $200,000 by June 30, 1919. The tuition fees are expected to fall off $216,000, and already there is a deficit of $230,000 owing to the practically continuous withdrawal of students to enter the national service. It was further pointed out that Columbia is paying $50,000 a year in salaries to professors and instructors who are on leave for Government work. Several of these are on the "dollar-a-year" list of the United States.

How many teaching positions will be temporarily discontinued was not announced, nor was it said in which departments most courses would be dropped.

The budget adopted yesterday called for appropriations totaling $3,948,423.84, of which $3,352,848.84 is for the university corporation proper. This sum is divided as follows:

For educational administration and instruction	$2,380,557.34
For buildings and grounds	395,281.00
For the library	121,423.00
For business administration	106,422.50
For annuities	29,280.00
For taxes and other charges upon the Loubat and Williamsbridge properties	103,305.00
For interest	123,780.00

It was pointed out that the appropriation for buildings and grounds had to be increased considerably because of the increased cost of supplies, fuel, and labor.

Drop Barnard College B. Sc.

The Trustees also approved the recommendation made some time ago by the Barnard College Faculty that hereafter only the Bachelor of Arts degree be conferred upon those who satisfactorily complete the Barnard curriculum. Columbia College had previously adopted this ruling, and now the degree of Bachelor of Science is regarded at Columbia as a professional or technical degree, to be awarded to those who take a combined college and professional school course in medicine, engineering, architecture, business, education, journalism, or any other school of the university.

It was further announced by the Trustees that the appointment of Colonel John P. Finley as Professor of Military Science and Tactics at Columbia was sanctioned, and that he would begin his new duties next Fall as head of the senior division branch of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, which the War Department recently established at the University.

President Nicholas Murray Butler will meet the General Assembly of the Faculties of the university tonight in Earl Hall to discuss the "Lessons of the War" and "Desirable Changes in the Work and Methods of the University." Several professors are scheduled to speak, including Professor James T. Shotwell of the Department of History, Professor E. L. Thorndike of the Department of Psychology, Professor L. H. Baekland of the Department of Chemical Engineering, Professor E. C. Lucke of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, Professor Walter B. Pitkin of the School of Journalism, and Professor Simkovitch of the Department of Economic History.

Gifts totaling about $12,000 were announced by the Trustees for the month of April. Leaves of absence were granted to Professor John Dewey of the Department of Philosophy, Professor Brewster of Barnard, and Professor Thomas of the Department of Germanic Languages. W. R. Mohr, Chief of the university since 1913, resigned to enter the national service. His place was not filled.

WANT MEN ENTERTAINED.

Fosdick Denies Hospitality Is Undermining Vitality of Our Fighters.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Statements that recreation provided for soldiers and sailors in communities near army and navy camps was impairing the efficiency of the men were emphatically denied today by Raymond B. Fosdick, Chairman of the War and Navy Departments' Commissions on Training Camp Activities. He characterized as a direct contradiction of the Government's policy the admonition that "the time has come for the public to 'keep hands off' our men in service."

"That time has no more come," Mr. Fosdick declared, "than the time has come to stop conserving wheat or supporting Government loans. Indeed, the preservation of normal social relationships between the public and the men in training is an essential part of our military program."

The statements calling forth Mr. Fosdick's denial were made in an editorial published in the May issue of The Ladies' Home Journal.

Favor "Made in America" Label.

Leading American manufacturers of waists, having a total annual output of merchandise valued at more than $150,000,000, put themselves on record at the Hotel McAlpin last night as standing behind the bill recently introduced in Congress, at the instance of the Department of Commerce, to create a national trade mark, or label, which, under certain restrictions, may be placed on American-made goods as a reward of merit. The occasion was the first annual dinner of the United Waist League of America, and about 300 manufacturers from this city, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Baltimore, Cleveland, and San Francisco attended. Among the guests were bankers, credit men of important textile concerns, manufacturers of silk and cotton fabrics, and well-known local retailers.

100,000 WORKERS REVIVE THRIFT DRIVE

Thousands of Dollars Are Collected by Volunteer Army Representing All Classes.

MANY STRIKING FEATURES

Miss Liberty as Conductor on Red, White, and Blue Queensborough Car Aids Campaign.

The national war savings campaign, which had been permitted to relax during the Liberty Loan drive, captured public attention again through the celebration yesterday of "Thrift Stamp Day." On every street corner, on every trolley car, in the window of every department store, the call to thrift caught the eye and brought forth the investment of many thousands of dollars in thrift and war savings stamps by men, women, and children of the city, who realized that every quarter spent in a stamp meant a quarter more for Uncle Sam and the cause of democracy.

Aided by the most favorable weather conditions, more than 100,000 thrift stamp workers, including men, women, children, soldiers, sailors, and marines, were distributed throughout the city in a great united effort to round up every available quarter. Thousands of volunteers canvassed the buses, subways, surface, and elevated lines, and the pedestrians on the main thoroughfares. Women were especially active. Every patriotic woman's organization, in fact, made the sale of thrift stamps yesterday its exclusive line of endeavor, among the organizations represented being the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, the Woman Suffrage Party, the National League for Women's Service, the Women's Motor Corps of America, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Women's University Club, the Smith College Club, the Harlem Council of Women, the Ethical Culture Society, and the Boy and Girl Scouts.

The department stores bore the burden of the campaign through their striking window displays and through the establishment in each store of a Thrift Bank, where the stamps were sold by honor guards of sailors and marines from the New York Navy Yard. By their slogan "Take your change in Thrift Stamps," the department stores also increased the sales of the day by thousands of dollars, as thousands of customers gladly accepted the suggestion. Just what the total returns on the Thrift Stamps amounted to yesterday the War Savings Committee was in no position to state last night, as the computations from various sources could not be completed while the drive was at its height.

Children Aid in Campaign.

The Thrift Stamp revival was filled with many picturesque and novel features; not the least of them being the appearance of small children from five to nine years old standing upon boxes or upon the steps of public buildings and hailing pedestrians with their touching appeals "for democracy," "for victory" and "for Uncle Sam." The boys clad in khaki uniforms and the girls either in crinoline or in the red, white and blue costume of Miss Columbia, often addressed as large audiences as the adult workers upon adjoining corners. This was especially true in such centres of activity as the Public Library and Madison Square Garden.

Much attention, too, was attracted by the tent in front of Benjamin Franklin's statue in Park Row, where a coffin for the Kaiser was prepared for War Savings workers. The tent opened just in time to catch a stream of office workers making for the Brooklyn Bridge at 5 o'clock. Huge signs draped in mourning lured thousands to the tent, where they bought a Thrift Stamp for the privilege of driving a nail in the coffin of his Imperial Majesty, Wilhelm II. The inscription on the coffin read: "Here Lies Kaiser Bill, Who Died of W. S. S., 1918."

A trolley car painted red, white, and blue, operated by a motorman who appeared to be Uncle Sam and a woman conductor clad as Miss Liberty, made its appearance on the line of the Manhattan and Queens Traction Corporation, running from the Fifty-ninth Street end of the Queensborough Bridge to Jamaica, yesterday. The car will run the rest of the week and will carry passengers like any other car on regular schedule, only the conductorette will not only collect fares but will also endeavor to separate the passengers of all their spare quarters in exchange for Thrift Stamps. The passengers handing her a dollar or five dollar bill need not expect to receive change in any form but Thrift Stamps. The car made its first trip from Jamaica yesterday at 6:30 A. M., and started on its last trip from Manhattan at 5:25 P. M. Miss Helen Lynch was the conductor and James Sheridan was the motorman. In the course of their trips they realized several hundred dollars in the sale of Thrift Stamps.

Thrift Day workers invaded the World's Congress of Dare Devils which opened in Madison Square Garden last evening. At 7 o'clock, one hour before the performance, "Speedy," the veteran high diver, plunged from a ladder erected beside the tower of the Garden into a tank of water on the roof while over 100 girls from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, decorated with the blue and yellow war savings insignia, sold stamps to the crowds which banked the square.

Director Congratulates Workers.

Frederick W. Allen, Director of War Savings for New York City, congratulating the workers for the enthusiastic manner in which they jumped into the campaign, said last night:

"Now for the War Savings Stamp campaign, which is addressed to our entire population—not only to the 10,000,000 people who have not participated in the purchase of Liberty bonds, but to all those who own Liberty bonds—for the Government wishes all people constantly to save and constantly and regularly to buy Government securities. The importance of the War Savings campaign, if the vision of its field and the possible results of its success are foreseen, cannot be exaggerated. This statement is based upon the desperate need of the civilized world at this time for resources with which to end the hideous terror of barbaric German control."

The cabarets of the city joined in the campaign yesterday. At all the moving picture houses special slides calling public attention to Thrift and War Savings were thrown upon the screen, and at all the theatres speeches were made in behalf of the cause.

One of the interesting features of the drive, both during the day and in the evening, was the eagerness with which sailors, soldiers, and officers of the allied forces—French, English, Canadians, and Australians—would often stop on the sidewalk and assist some Thrift Stamp worker by a personal appeal or by the narration of experiences at the front.

MEXICANS MURDER FOUR.

British Subjects, Two of Them Women, Slain by Bandits.

EAGLE PASS, Texas, May 6.—Mexican bandits have murdered four British subjects at La Mariposa, Mexico, according to a telegram received here today by George H. Lamare. The victims were Miss G. Lamare and Mrs. Frederick Hillcoat, Mr. Lamare's sisters; Frederick Hillcoat and his son, Jerry. The murders were committed last Thursday, the telegram said. La Mariposa is in the Santa Rosa Mountains, near Muzquiz, about 250 miles south of Eagle Pass.

DROP POSTAL AMENDMENT.

Senators May Offer New Bill on Second-Class Rates.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The Senate Post Office Committee refused today to consider legislation to suspend or modify increased second-class postage rates which become effective July 1 and which newspaper publishers have attacked, in connection with the pending Post Office Appropriation bill. Individual Senators plan an effort later to suspend or reduce the increases.

The committee decided that it could not sustain an amendment to the appropriation measure, since such an amendment to that bill could be stricken out by one hostile Senator on a point of order.

Introduction of a separate bill to suspend the increases during the war or to modify the rates is planned by several Senators on the committee. Another plan is to attempt amendment of some other bill.

Court Upholds Presbyterian Merger.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The merger in 1906 of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the Presbyterian Church and the consolidation of their church property was declared valid today by the Supreme Court. Federal decrees awarding control of the $200,000 endowment and buildings of the Missouri Valley College, a Cumberland educational institution at Marshall, Mo., to the Presbyterian Synod of Kansas also were sustained.

WORK FOR BELGIAN BABIES.

450,000 Forget-Me-Nots Sold on Queen Elizabeth's Flour Day.

Yesterday was the official Flower Day of the Queen of Belgium in this city, and more than 1,500 women Liberty Loan workers and schoolgirls turned out early yesterday morning to aid in the sale of 500,000 "for-get-me-nots," fastened with a ribbon of the Belgian colors, for the benefit of Belgian babies. At a late hour last night it was said at the offices of the Committee on Flower Day, at 6 East Twenty-third Street, that 450,000 "for-get-me-nots" had been sold, and it was confidently expected that $50,000 would be realized. The drive was under the patronage of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and the direction of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt as Chairman of the committee.

DO NOT REST CONTENT

with the Over-Subscription of the Third Liberty Loan. The Nation's pressing need is Production. Prepare to satisfy the urgent demand for goods of all kinds.

You may need Cash to replace that which you have loaned the Government. If so, avail yourself of our resources so that, by utilizing to the utmost your productive capacity, you can accomplish the two-fold end of supplying goods and accumulating profits to invest in further Government Loans.

We are prepared to make prompt and liberal advances on Commercial Paper, Accounts Receivable, Warehouse Receipts, Foreign Bills and other Collateral.

Pile Fabrics to be Good.

The fabrics that will be shown in the Fall lines of suits and coats by local manufacturers will include, according to the bulletin of the National Garment Retailers' Association, plush, astrachan, and other silk pile fabrics. Suits now being made show a tendency toward staple materials, and few radical changes in style or silhouette are noted. Such changes as have been observed are simply a variation of the waistline. In some houses a higher waistline is shown, while in others a line slightly below normal is being exploited. Among the favored shades are navy, black, and gray, with Pekin blue and terra cotta appearing here and there. These lines will be put on view anywhere from the present time up to June 15.

To Curtail German Supplies.

By cable from its representative in London, dated May 5, the Textile Alliance, Inc., has received the following message: "Official interim report of the Committee on Commercial Policy, issued today, recommends inter alia control during the transitory period immediately after the war of carefully selected commodities, including wool, cotton, jute, and palm kernels, the imports of which into the enemy countries before the war were mainly derived from the British Empire and allied countries, and the available supply of which will be wholly or mainly required by the British Empire and the Allies immediately after the war. As regards the British Empire and the allied countries, the Government should without delay enter into negotiations with the various governments concerned with a view to the adoption of suitable joint measures as regards selected commodities of importance."

Government Will Get Denims.

A price of 76 cents a pound was fixed yesterday on 2.20-yard, 2.40-yard, 2.45-yard, and 8-ounce denims at a meeting attended by representatives of the largest producers of these goods in the country, the War Industries Board and the Quartermaster's Department. At the meeting arrangements were made which will result in the turning over to the Government anywhere from 70 to 80 per cent. of the country's production of these goods between now and Jan. 1. Orders covering these goods will be allotted to the various denim mills on the basis of their respective production.

Something New in Sailor Hats.

A new "veil" sailor is being shown by leading manufacturers in the local millinery trade. It has a brim about two inches wide, with two buttonholes at the back and a high soft crown of navy blue georgette combined with white hemp. The upper part of the hat is made of georgette, with a facing of white hemp. A fine navy mesh veil, with a wide border of georgette, is draped over the crown of the hat and pulled through the buttonholes at the back of the brim. This model is said to be very "smart" for tailored wear. It can be worn with the veil over the face and pulled through the buttonholes to hold it in place, thus doing away with the need of veil pins.

Beads Coming to the Fore.

Probably the newest and most popular trimmings that are being used here for "dressy" hats are beads in pill or bugle shapes and in all colors. At the moment blue and white beads top the demand. These beads are placed around the edge of the hat or are embroidered in flower forms that cover the entire crown. Often they are sewed here and there around the upper brim. Sometimes they are seen suspended from the edge of the under brim in a Spanish effect.

Gray Goods Prices Steady.

Prices continued steady in the local gray goods market yesterday, and among second hands something of a stronger feeling developed. Sales of 38½-inch 64-60s were made from second hands for this month's shipment at 17½ cents, and the same sellers were paid 17 cents for this construction for delivery in the last quarter of the year. Second hands also sold 39-inch 68-72s at 18½ cents for June-July delivery. First hands again marked time in printcloths, and there was little snap to the demand for sheetings in either end of the market. Sateens and twills, however, came in for further activity at market prices. Mill asking prices for printcloths closed this way:

39-inch, 80-80s....24c	38½-inch, 64-60s..18c
39-inch, 72-76s....22½c	38½-inch, 64-56s..17¼c
39-inch, 68-72s....19c	38½-inch, 60-52s..16½c
39-inch, 56-44s....13½c	38½-inch, 60-48s..16c
38½-inch, 64-64s..18¼c	27-inch, 64-60s....13¼c

Wash Fabric Duplicates Large.

If the weather keeps up to yesterday's standard for the next week or ten days, local wholesalers of wash goods will be hard pressed to meet the demands the retail trade will make on them for additional lots of goods. Already a nice repeat business for Spring has been done by the larger houses on goods ranging all the way from simple dress ginghams to elaborate novelties in voiles and other sheer materials. Silk-striped voiles, the colored stripes being woven into white or light colored grounds, are said to be especially favored. Retailers who "went slow" on novelty cottons earlier in the season because of their advanced cost, are said to be rueing their lack of nerve now that they are having trouble in filling in.

Psychology in Shoe Selling.

A certain manufacturer of the better grade shoes for men, who recently had occasion to have new showroom fixtures installed, insisted that the wall cases containing the samples should be made without doors on them. "There are two reasons for this," he said yesterday. "One is that I have yet to find a door or sliding panel that will keep dust out of a case, which means that it is not only necessary to dust the samples but to keep the glass clean as well. The main reason, however, is that my experience has shown me that a buyer is sometimes kept from ordering a model because he cannot take the shoe in his hand without wrestling with a glass door or slide, or having it done for him. The psychological effect of the glass between him and the sample weakens his buying desire. It gives him the same feeling that a person with a half a desire to buy chewing gum is apt to have when confronted with a box from which none of the packages has yet been removed. He looks and passes by, while a 'broken' box would have made him spend his money."

Knitting Stuff Not So Active.

Reports from various quarters locally indicate that the demand for knitting bags, needles and other supplies is not as heavy as it was a short time ago, in spite of the heavy draft levies and the greater number of soldiers to be kept warm. One reason for this is said to be that the soldiers are not so keen as they were about the sleeveless type of sweater as they were before they had a Winter's experience with it, chiefly because it let their arms get cold above the line of the wristlet while drilling. Because of this they are said to prefer a "jersey" made of a material that looks like a cross between a jersey cloth and a crocheted fabric. Another thing against the sweater is said to be that, in removing it from a wounded man by cutting, it is irreparably damaged, while the loose ends of the "jersey" in question can be caught together without a great deal of trouble. To overcome this objection to sweaters, it is said that some of them are being made with lacing up one side. This lets them be taken off quickly and easily without ruining them.

BUILDING OF SHIPS REACHES HIGH MARK

Nineteen Steel Vessels, 92,000 Tons, Completed Last Week and 16 Hulls Launched.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Following the launching of the 5,550-ton collier Tuckahoe at Camden yesterday, twenty-seven days after the keel was laid, the Emergency Fleet Corporation announced today that another record had been made by American shipyards during the week ended Saturday, May 4. Reports show that in the seven days nineteen steel ships, aggregating 92,000 tons, were completed and sixteen hulls, representing 79,195 tons, put into the water.

If this schedule were maintained during a month of thirty days the deliveries would be brought up to 473,143 tons for the month and the launchings to 328,093 tons. Officials hope that the record of launchings for May will exceed even that mark, and that there will be a steady increase each month from this time.

Messages were received here today from many shipyards to the effect that plans were being made to establish even a better record than that of the Tuckahoe. Officials were elated over the spirit shown by shipbuilders and workers.

Most of the shipyards sent official reports by wire concerning launchings and deliveries for the week ended May 4, to demonstrate the efforts being put forth to speed up the program. The official reports of deliveries to the Government covered seventeen steel ships of 80,180 tons, and the unofficial reports were of two ships which were completed and which were ready to be formally delivered to the Government, bringing the total of completed ships up to 92,000 tons for the week.

Twelve of the ships delivered to the Government were built by the Great Lakes Shipyards and the others on the Pacific Coast. The official deliveries follow:

West Grove, 8,800 tons.
West Bero, 3,300 tons.
Paul H. Harwood and W. M. Irish, 10,475 tons each.
Lake Arthur, Lake Weston, Lake Stelling, Lake Tulcaro, Lake Jessup, and Lake Ogden, 3,100 tons each.
Lake Elizabeth, 3,400 tons.
Lake St. Clair, Lake St. Regis, and Lake Heughten, 3,300 tons each.
Lake Sunapee, 2,930 tons.
Lake Traverse, 3,300 tons.
Lake Pewaukee, 3,500 tons.

Launchings for the week ending May 4:

Requisitioned steel vessels—Bath, 9,970 tons; Lake Annette, 3,500 tons; Westerly City, 8,800 tons; W. S. Rheem, 10,475 tons; Cape Romain, 7,400 tons; Point Judith, 3,300 tons; Lake Fernwood, 3,100 tons.

Contract steel vessels—Lake Leden, Lake Tanassee, and Lake Marks, 3,550 tons each.

Wood ships—Coos Bay, Bancroft, Barabas, Krota, and Yakum, 3,500 tons each, and Cresep, 4,000 tons.

All of the steel ships delivered were requisitioned by the Emergency Fleet Corporation in early stages of construction. The reports from the shipyards all stated that new keels were laid as soon as the ships were launched and that the workmen had joined in a drive to bring production to a maximum. Requests for additional supplies were given immediate attention. Everything possible is being done by the Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation officials to co-operate with the managers of the yards and their men.

Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board, who returned here today, was enthusiastic over the celebration which marked the launching of the Tuckahoe at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden. He said the men there had exhibited a fine, patriotic spirit, which promised the maximum of results.

An unofficial report that the concrete ship Faith, completed recently at San Francisco, had made a successful trial trip added to the satisfaction of the officials. It was stated that the concrete yards, in which tankers are to be constructed both by the Government and private interests, would be rushed to completion, and supplied with orders.

The construction of machinery for the equipment of the hulls which are being put into the water also is receiving attention, every effort being extended to supply boilers and engines as rapidly as the hulls are launched.

Charles M. Schwab, Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and other officials of that organization and of the Shipping Board, are making plans to get into close touch with the yards, and see to it that full credit is given where records are established and ships turned out rapidly.

Shipyards which are endeavoring to beat records of the launching of ships of various tonnage will obtain supplies just as rapidly as the materials can be produced. Mr. Schwab is satisfied that sufficient steel can be obtained. Special attention is being paid to transportation facilities, so that there may be no delays from that cause.

While officials are not permitting themselves to be carried away by enthusiasm there is plainly a feeling of confidence in the ability of American shipyards to produce the necessary ships to supply the armies in France, now that the managers and workmen are on their mettle.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Score Further Gains with Steel the Leader—Bonds in Demand.

The financial community returned to its normal occupation yesterday after the period of concentration on the Liberty Loan with a feeling of satisfaction over the result of the offering which found reflection in a strong stock market. Bonds also displayed a fair improvement, with a demand in evidence for numerous issues which had been inactive for some time past. The point of chief interest in the day's dealings in stocks was perhaps the fact that the forward movement gained in impetus as the hours progressed, causing the highest prices to occur near the end of the day. Steel, common, after rising 2½ points to par, stood stiffly at this figure, the highest of the year, at the close.

There have been more active markets this year than yesterday's, and the persistent gains from the start to the finish of trading indicated that holders of stocks were not anxious to dispose of them. From one way of looking at it, the advances lent support to the theory advanced some time ago in observant quarters that the floating supply of numerous dividend-paying issues has been gradually reduced by the takings of investors since last Autumn, an accumulation which has not yet begun to return to the market in any quantity. Notice was not lost of the fact that the railroad list received the attention of buyers, notably Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul preferred, Canadian Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Reading, and Union Pacific.

In addition to the solid effect of the Liberty Loan campaign, speculative operations on the constructive side probably were encouraged by renewed peace talk, although there was little enough in the foreign dispatches to promote real expectation that it could come to anything at this time. Traders discussed the peace "feeler" in the same breath with the news of the uneasy situation among the peoples of Austria-Hungary as a possible forerunner of developments to come whose character would not be favorable to the cause of the Central Powers.

The Liberty bonds of the three classes now on the Stock Exchange showed a steady tone and dealings were rather light. The initial transactions in the 4¼s are waiting on a signal from the Federal Reserve authorities, and it was rumored that this would be given on Thursday or Friday. The first payment by subscribers is due on Thursday, and it would be reasonable to expect that trading would not be authorized before that day.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

Influence of Result of Liberty Loan Is Felt on Exchange.

LONDON, May 6.—The stock market showed an excellent tone generally today, under the influence of the military position on the western front and the result of the Liberty Loan campaign. In the case of various home investments the demand exceeded the supply. Mining shares were strong, particularly the base metals. French rentes made a further advance. Chinese securities were stronger, the rise being attributed to the Japanese loan to China. Oil stocks, especially the speculative varieties, made a good showing.

Money was in abundant supply. Discounts were quiet.

Trading Calm on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 6.—Trading on the Bourse was calm today. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 58 francs 60 centimes for cash. Exchange on London 27 francs 16 centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 55 centimes.

Bankers to Consider War Finances.

A large delegation of bankers will leave at 10:10 o'clock this morning over the New York Central lines en route for the Spring meeting of the Executive Council of the American Bankers Association, which will be held at Hot Springs, Ark., on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The Executive Council transacts the business of the association in the interim between annual conventions, which take place in the Fall. At the coming meeting numerous matters of war financing and Federal legislation will be discussed.

AETNA DECISION RESERVED.

Court Hears Arguments on Appeal of Explosives Company.

Argument was heard yesterday by the United States Circuit Court on an appeal taken from the decision of Judge Mayer preventing a meeting of the stockholders of the Aetna Explosives Company for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors, until Receivers Odell and Holt had notified the court that their services might be terminated. It was hoped that by that time there would be sufficient funds on hand to redeem the bonds, take up the preferred stock, and leave enough for the common stockholders to operate the company.

The company has prospered wonderfully since it has been in the hands of the receivers, and it has many large contracts for the making of munitions for the allied Governments. It was thought that the court was disinclined to interfere with the present arrangement until after the war.

George W. Wickersham, representing those favoring the election of a new board and the proposed plan of reorganization, said that the stockholders had a right to meet, that the election of a Board of Directors would not mean that the reorganization plan would be adopted, and that Judge Mayer's order should be set aside.

John B. Stanchfield and Henry Wollman, representing interests opposed to the holding of a meeting, also presented arguments and filed briefs. Decision was reserved.

EASTERN ILLINOIS EARNINGS

Net Income Shows Increase of $935,-005, or 25 Per Cent.

The Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Company earned a gross revenue of $21,018,894 in 1917, an increase of $4,134,287 over the amount reported for the preceding year. Operating expenses of $16,343,306 were $3,109,281 higher, and the net income of $4,675,677 showed a gain of $935,005, or 25 per cent. After adding outside revenue and deducting taxes, etc., a balance remained for interest and other charges which totaled $5,577,924, a gain of $1,151,736. The net surplus at the end of the year was $3,694,884.

William J. Jackson, receiver, said in his statement to shareholders yesterday that the prosperous condition throughout the territory served by the road was reflected in the increased earnings, while the steady advance of wages paid all classes of labor, and in the cost of materials, explained the expanded expenses. During the year, he stated, twenty-one new industries were located near the lines, with yearly inbound and outbound tonnage of approximately 10,-453 cars.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Two Big Systems.

Publication of the New York Central report brings out still more strikingly what happened last year to even the biggest and wealthiest railroads which had no sheet anchor to windward in the shape of a profitable coal business. On gross revenues of more than $200,000,000, an increase of nearly $15,000,000, the net operating income of the Central fell off by $11,936,645. Its experience almost exactly parallels that of the Pennsylvania, which with a similar increase in gross revenues, saw its net income decline $12,994,919.

Railroads and Government Payment.

Following the calculation of a prominent banker recently that the Government on April 1 owed the railroads $150,000,000 in accrued rentals, a railroad man declared yesterday that to this must be added several millions which the War Department still owed various railroad companies for troop transportation up to Dec. 28, and is apparently still unable to get straightened out.

Conference on Ferromanganese.

Representatives of the leading steel companies are scheduled to meet in Pittsburgh today to discuss the ferromanganese situation. Because of the demand for ocean tonnage on the North Atlantic smaller quantities of this important alloy can be brought in from Brazil in the immediate future than in the past. The purpose of the meeting is to develop manufacturing practice which will permit the use of low-grade ferromanganese ore from home sources to a greater extent than heretofore. The proposed change is considered by steelmakers of much importance because of the effect it may have on the output of steel and the cost sheets of the furnaces.

Gulf States Steel Dividend.

The Gulf States Steel Corporation has been informed by the Capital Issues Committee that the latter has no jurisdiction over the proposed stock dividend. In accordance with the decision of the Directors, therefore, common stock trust certificates will be distributed on June 3 to holders of certificates of record on May 15 to an amount equal at par to 25 per cent. of the certificates outstanding.

Big Speculators in Steel.

A number of commission houses which handle the accounts of large speculators were active buyers of Steel yesterday. A block of 25,000 shares taken on a single order was understood to be the purchase by an operator who took a substantial profit on an equal amount of the stock last week.

Mr. Whelan and Tobacco Products.

When George J. Whelan returned to active business a few weeks ago as head of the Tobacco Products Corporation, his avowed intention was to increase the company's output. It is not known whether the Directors a few days since declared a scrip instead of a cash dividend on the common stock, at Mr. Whelan's suggestion, but the purpose was in line with his plan. Conservation of earnings means more working capital, which, in turn, should forecast increased manufacturing and the carrying of larger quantities of raw material than before. Incidentally, the stock has been advancing ever since the scrip dividend was ordered, yesterday's gain being 1¼ points.

Cotton Trading Commissions.

A meeting of the members of the New York Cotton Exchange, called yesterday to ratify a resolution of the Board of Managers, amending the by-laws to permit charging of commissions on a percentage basis instead of a fixed fee per bale, developed unexpected dissent among a number of members, and the meeting was consequently adjourned to an executive session later in the day. No statement was made regarding the final disposal of the matter. The present commissions of $10 a hundred bales to members of the Exchange and $20 a hundred bales to nonmembers were fixed at a time when cotton was priced at about half or less than half what it is today, and the Board of Managers proposed to alter the rule to provide that hereafter, when cotton is selling at more than 20 cents, commissions may be charged on a percentage basis commensurate with the increased value of the trading unit.

The Look of the Cotton Market.

Yesterday's market on the Cotton Exchange was what some brokers call a "small change" market. Usually it is possible to single out a man or a group who are setting the pace, either buying heavily or selling heavily. Yesterday, however, nobody was noticeable in either capacity, but small buying orders appeared very prevalent. The Southern spot markets were extremely dull, with the exception of New Orleans, where 1,420 bales changed hands at 28.50. Many of the other markets refuse to drop prices, and are getting no business.

Aetna Explosives Bid Up.

The argument in the Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday on the order postponing the annual meeting of the Aetna Explosives Company appeared to stimulate buying of the company's stock on the Curb. At 12¼ the quotation recorded an advance of a point. Traders were interested in the court proceedings, for one thing, because of the emphasis laid in the argument on the large earnings of the corporation.

Sumatra Tobacco Active.

Nearly one-third of the American Sumatra Tobacco Company's outstanding common stock was turned over in yesterday's market, with a net gain of 4⅜ points. At 105⅜ the market appraisal of the shares showed an increase of more than 216 per cent. over the minimum quotation of last year.

Shipping Faultfinding.

The able and experienced shipping men who have practically abandoned their own business in the midst of the greatest opportunities in shipping industry, in response to the Government's call, are experiencing much the same sort of thing that the steel men, and railroad men, and all the others have undergone. Other men in the business, who have had to be turned down for one reason or another, are revenging themselves by much talk of "insiders," "discrimination," and what not. As a matter of fact the men now in Government service are saying privately that they could avoid three-fourths of their work and as much of their troubles but for their anxiety to be fair to everybody. When all business has to be doled out by a Government agency, that used to be competed for in an open market, some one is always sure to feel himself slighted, and to imagine a reason for it.

ALL SUBSCRIBERS WILL GET BONDS

Allotments of Liberty Issue Are Likely to Go Well Over $4,000,000,000.

ADVERSE CONDITIONS MET

War Taxation Counted Against the Rolling Up of a Big Oversubscription.

UNLIMITED BIDS A FACTOR

Partial Reports Reaching Capital—Total Will Not Be Given Out Till Next Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Secretary McAdoo announced tonight that he would allot bonds of the Third Liberty Loan in full on all subscriptions. This announcement is in accordance with the terms of the offer of the loan last month.

What the amount of the loan will be depends on the eventual returns which now seem likely to send the total well above $4,000,000,000. The banks and trust companies and bond agencies have until Thursday to make their returns to the Federal Reserve banks, and the latter have until next Monday to make their returns to the Secretary of the Treasury. Until these final returns are made the actual total can only be estimated.

The official reports announced yesterday, giving a grand total of $3,816,625,250, have been added to substantially today, but these reports, owing to their obvious incompleteness, will not be given out at the Treasury Department until next Monday. It is clear from approximate figures from two of the Reserve banks, whose business is not classed with the largest in the country, that there will be between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 to be added to the last announced total. Assuming that the additional returns from the smaller districts are $45,000,000 and that at the lowest calculation the other districts will attain this as an average, the final total would be $3,850,000,000 with deferred payment sales to be heard from after May 9.

The estimates recently made that the loan would go up to $4,500,000,000 have been based on the experiences accompanying the campaigns for the previous loans where each time the closing figures seemed to indicate hardly more than the sale of the minimum loan, and the oversubscription that came in the succeeding fortnight proved to be very large. This time the conditions have been somewhat changed, and their effect on the result seems likely to be measured by several hundred millions.

It is true that this Third loan has been a popular one, and it is likewise apparent that the wealthy classes who bought heavily of the First and Second loans have held back some in the Third loan. This is attributed to two considerations. The first has been that the War Revenue act has changed the situation radically as to big fortunes, and the income, corporation, and excess profits taxes have undoubtedly made it impracticable, if not in many cases impossible, to buy bonds.

The second condition that is believed to have operated against oversubscription by the wealthy classes is the fact that buyers knew in advance that their subscriptions would be accepted in full instead of being scaled down as in the other loans. The man who desired to buy $10,000,000 bonds in the First or Second Loan campaigns usually subscribed for twice that amount, relying on the final allotment to adjust the amount to suit his plans. This time whatever amount he subscribed was an actual amount that would surely stand no matter how great or small the entire subscription by the country at large might be.

The returns of the next week will consist mainly of purchases made on the deferred payment plan, the buyer availing himself of the opportunity to pay down 5 per cent. and then pay in installments with interest on deferred payments from May 9.

Those who bought coupon bonds not in excess of $10,000 with full payment of the par value are receiving their bonds. Third Liberty Loan bonds of this description have been issued already to the amount of $224,616,000. There will be deliveries of bonds under this agreement regularly from now forward.

SAILORS HAD A GOOD YEAR.

Seamen's Society Handled $100,000 of Their Savings.

Some idea of the large number of sailors that have touched at this port in the last year may be gathered from the annual report of the American Seaman's Friend Society, made public yesterday. In 1917 the total attendance of seamen at the society's New York headquarters in the Sailors' Home and Institute on the North River front was 154,000. In addition, nearly 26,000 seamen in this port were reached by personal visit, either on board ships or in the hospitals.

The report indicates that seamen are prospering, as is shown by the fact that during the year more than $100,000 was handled for the men, and this notwithstanding the fact that the society does not do a banking business.

During the year contributions amounting to $40,000 were received for the erection of a building in the Panama Canal Zone. In addition, there were contributions of $41,000 for general work and $20,000 for the home at 507 West Street.

The officers of the society were reelected, as follows: President, Dr. John B. Calvert; Vice President, Anton A. Raven; Vice President, Dr. Nehemiah Boynton; Secretary, Dr. George Sidney Webster, and Treasurer, Clarence C. Pinneo. Rear Admiral Nathaniel R. Usher, commanding the Third Naval District, was elected an Honorary Vice President.

PASS NEW PENSION BILL.

House Approves Measure to Grant Increases to Civil War Veterans.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The Sherwood bill, granting a minimum pension of $25 a month to civil war veterans, was passed by the House today, and now goes to the Senate.

Graduated payments from $25 to $30 a month, according to age and length of service, are provided, making an increase of about 50 per cent. for short term soldiers, and about 30 per cent. for long term. It would not apply to any having an income of $1,000 a year or more, or to those in soldiers' homes.

The bill is designed to meet inequalities between pensions to soldiers and those to soldiers' widows, some of whom get more than soldiers.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The General Development Company declared yesterday a dividend of $1 a share, payable June 1 to stockowners of record May 15.

The Riordan Pulp and Paper Company declared a dividend of 2½ per cent. on the common stock yesterday, payable May 15 to stockowners of record May 11.

The New Jersey Bankers' Association are scheduled to hold their annual conference at Atlantic City on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Keith Vaudeville Houses Alone Got $11,751,950 for Loan Here.

The Theatrical Allied Interests Committee announced last night that the total amount subscribed in the New York theatres for the Third Liberty Loan probably would be in excess of $33,000,000. At 6 o'clock last night the verified subscriptions passed by the banks and trust companies had reached $32,354,800. The Keith vaudeville theatres alone raised $11,751,950. The maximum quota for all the New York theatres had been fixed at $10,000,000.

The competition between the Palace and Riverside Theatres for the leadership was especially keen, the former finally winning with $2,914,400. The Riverside sold $2,597,450. The leader among the legitimate theatres was the Astor, which reached $2,014,500. The complete record of the New York theatres follows:

The Shuberts announced yesterday that their theatres throughout the country had been instrumental in raising $8,680,425 of the Third Liberty Loan. Of this sum $4,298,525 was raised in the Shuberts' New York theatres. The Shubert-Murat Theatre, in Indianapolis, led the list with $2,105,050.

United Gas and Electric Earnings.

Gross earnings of subsidiary concerns of the United Gas and Electric Corporation last year amounted to $16,287,275, a gain of $1,127,119 over 1916. Operating expenses increased $1,267,082, and the net reveneue before meeting fixed charges was $329,233 less than the year before. The balance available for dividends totaled $2,556,587, compared with $2,957,643* in 1916. During the year the sum of $3,950,822 was expended for additions and betterments. The accumulated surplus at the close of 1917 amounted to $2,123,392.

Banking Facilities for Soldiers.

The Irving National Bank sent a letter to its correspondents and other banks yesterday informing them of facilities arranged in London and Paris whereby clients of banks going with the American Expeditionary forces may cash their personal checks. The letter said that the Irving would arrange credits with Messrs. Cox & Co. in Paris and the London Provincial and South Western Bank in London for the purpose. Similar facilities are to be arranged with the Banca Italiana di Sconto for men going to Italy.

LOAN SALES HERE TOP $978,000,000

Mass of Returns Still Untabulated Will Add to District's Final Total.

QUEENS 72 PER CENT. OVER

Eastern Railroad Employes Take $26,000,000—Guaranty Trust Leads Banks with $53,000,000.

Additional subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan amounting to $26,462,650 were reported yesterday to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which announced last night that the district's total stood at $978,395,700, with a mass of returns still to be tabulated. Final reports will not be filed with the bank until Thursday, the date fixed for the payment of the initial installment of 5 per cent. On Thursday there will mature $500,000,000 of 4 per cent. Treasury certificates of indebtedness, which may be turned in by the banks of the country in payment of the 4¼ per cent. Liberty bonds.

Official figures of the Reserve Bank showed last night that all of the subdistricts of the New York district had exceeded their quotas excepting No. 3, with headquarters in Syracuse, but advices from that centre indicated that it also had gone "over the top."

The latest figures for the Borough of Brooklyn bring the total to $47,306,500, but the committee expects that when all returns are in it will have passed the $50,000,000 mark, an oversubscription of more than $10,000,000. Incomplete returns from the Borough of Queens showed that $7,506,000 had been raised, which gives that borough a 72 per cent. oversubscription. It was said that fully 60 per cent. of the borough's population of 400,000 consists of persons of German birth or descent.

The following table gives the quotas, subscription totals, and percentage of subscriptions to quotas, of the main subdivisions of the New York District which comprises New York State, twelve New Jersey counties, and Fairfield County, Conn.:

	Quotas.	Subscriptions.	Per-centage.
N. Y. City	$667,125,300	$685,863,650	103
Remainder of district	232,874,700	292,532,050	152

400,000 Railroad Men Subscribe.

The Liberty Loan Committee for the Eastern Railroads, of which F. D. Underwood of the Erie is Chairman, announced yesterday that more than 400,000 railroad employes had subscribed to an amount in excess of $26,000,000. This compares with subscriptions from 263,000 employes, totaling $19,000,000, received in the Second Loan campaign. A meeting will be held on Thursday, when it is expected that final figures for railroad employes' subscriptions will be available. Erie Railroad employes to the number of 33,682 out of a total of about 40,000 have subscribed to bonds to the amount of $2,082,000. In the First Loan, Erie employes subscribed for $1,006,000 and in the Second Loan they took $1,100,000.

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company reports that 20,887 of its employes subscribed to the loan for a total of $1,282,250 bonds. In the coal-mining department of the corporation 15,410 workers subscribed for $814,000 bonds. On the Long Island Railroad the returns show that more than 91 per cent. of all employes took at least one bond. The bonds were bought by 6,632 of the 7,286 workers to an aggregate of $415,150.

Following is an additional list of counties in New York State which have subscribed to 100 per cent. or more of their quotas:

CENTRAL'S EARNINGS CUT TO $25,599,219

Railroad's Net Income of $45,659,217 in 1916 Reduced by $20,059,997.

GROSS REVENUES INCREASE

Show Gain of $14,682,468, but Expenses Are $23,859,536 Higher—Dividends Cared For.

The annual report of the New York Central Railroad Company shows that in 1917, like practically every other important railroad system, this company combined a large increase in its gross revenues—the largest in the history of the road—with a proportionately even greater decrease in its net income. The net corporate income of the New York Central, in fact, was almost cut in half, falling from $45,659,217 in 1916, to $25,599,219 last year. This latter figure is equivalent to $10.20 a share on the $249,590,400 of capital stock outstanding.

The gross revenues of the road were $216,267,517 last year, an increase of $14,682,468 over 1916. But expenses increased in the same period by $23,859,536, so that the net revenue from operations fell off $9,177,067. Taxes increased by upward of $2,000,000, causing the total operating income to fall off $11,933,695, to $51,410,321. The company's income from the dividends of its subsidiaries, which suffered from the same causes, was reduced $3,634,703, and its revenue from separately operated properties entirely owned by it lost $3,723,979, practically all the outside sources of income showing greater or smaller decreases.

The total decline in "other income" for the year was $7,160,724, to a total of $15,462,704. At the same time rentals, miscellaneous taxes, and similar items all mounted, interest charges increased by $373,548, and the final result was the decline of $20,059,997 in net income.

As the New York Central only pays 5 per cent. dividends, however, its diminished income was still amply sufficient to meet its dividends and leave a profit and loss surplus of $13,004,053 on the year, as against $30,692,606 for 1916. During the year, President Smith reports, the Central obtained authority to issue $25,000,000 of new capital stock for expenditures on capital account, but only actually issued $258,900 up to Dec. 31, 1917. The company also obtained authority to issue $20,000,000 of new refunding and improvement mortgage bonds, which are pledged as collateral for $15,000,000 of two-year collateral trust notes.

Call for $10,000,000 Sugar Loan.

Members of the syndicate of banks and bankers who are participating in the $100,000,000 loan to Cuban sugar growers were called on yesterday to deposit $10,000,000 of this sum on next Friday. It is expected that another call for between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 will be issued some time next week. The number of banks and bankers taking part in the financing is 188, and the loans will be made through the medium of acceptances. For the present, the accommodation will cost the sugar producers approximately 8¼ per cent.

FRISCO EARNS $20,065,838.

Railroad's Full Revenue for 1917 Reached $59,676,656.

The St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company reports an aggregate operating income of $58,995,562 in 1917, an increase of $6,296,865 over the result in 1917. From outside sources $681,093 came in, making the full revenue of the year $59,676,656, a gain of $6,556,657. The expense account in the annual statement, issued yesterday, showed that $549,783 less was laid out in maintenance of way and structures than the year before, the total being $8,853,601, but transportation costs increased heavily. The total of this item was $20,567,229, an expansion of $3,846,002. The entire cost of running the road was $39,610,818, an increase of $3,964,039.

After making deductions for taxes, rentals, sinking funds, &c., from the net operating revenue of $20,065,838, a balance of $15,661,153 remained for interest charges, an increase of $1,023,525. The surplus after interest had been paid on the various funded obligations was $2,847,787, a gain of $1,149,345. This improvement over the preceding year was notable, amounting to 67.7 per cent.

The report noted that $6,440,000 prior lien 5 per cent. bonds, Series B, were issued during the year for refunding equipment notes and making improvements. The report reproduced the proclamation of President Wilson, in taking over the railroads for the Government.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

THE KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of The Kansas City Southern Railway Company will be held at the office of the Company, in the Kansas City Southern Building, northeast corner of Wyandotte and Eleventh Streets, Kansas City, Missouri, on Tuesday, May 14, 1918, at the hour of 9 o'clock A. M., Standard Time, for the Election of Directors and the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

Holders of stock will then be requested:

1. Specifically to ratify certain resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors January 2, 1918, submitting to the assumption by the Federal Government of control over their property, effective December 28 last pending the cessation of hostilities (and since extended by legislation for a term thereafter), upon condition that just compensation shall be rendered for its use, and empowering the Chairman of the Board to negotiate the terms of such remuneration, the text whereof was communicated to those concerned by circular-letter of the Secretary dated January 4.

2. Affirmatively to authorize the Board of Directors, in any contingency arising from the premises, to act on their behalf in preserving the integrity of the existing organization, so far as in its judgment their interests may currently require, and to the further intent that the property may be restored to its owners in a state of unimpaired efficiency.

3. To authorize the Board to take such further action in the premises as may by it be deemed advisable.

As provided by the By-Laws of the Company, the books for the transfer of the Preferred and Common Stocks will be closed for the said meeting at 3 o'clock P. M., May 3, 1918, and reopened at 10 o'clock A. M., May 20, 1918.

Done by order of the Executive Committee.
J. A. EDSON, President.
G. C. HAND, Secretary.
Dated April 1, 1918.

The Hoosick Falls Railroad Company.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS:

NOTICE is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of THE HOOSICK FALLS RAILROAD COMPANY will be held in the office of the Secretary of the Company, May 14th, 1918, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors, three Inspectors of Election, and the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.

Dated, April 30th, 1918.
A. E. CLARK, Secretary.

THE COTTON MARKET

Sufficient Short Covering to Move Prices Up from 47 to 58 Points.

Cotton was fairly steady and at times firm yesterday on what for Monday was a reasonably broad though not very active market. The trend of the day was such as to encourage many followers to hope that all the "dynamite" has been eliminated by the recent violent fluctuations, for the time being at least, and with nothing more exciting than the weather and some vague German peace talk to depend upon there was enough short covering to move prices up from 47 to 58 points, with the closing tone firm.

Considerable cotton was bought in small lots for a rise in the early morning on an opening advance of 25 to 30 points, and Liverpool representatives seemed particularly anxious to take offerings, either for new long account or for covering. The Cotton Exchange always dearly loves to talk peace, and it made the most during the morning of the stories of German emissaries in London, not as directly affecting the market, nor indeed of any practical importance, but as helping along the generally cheerful tone.

A little later in the day this atmospheric buoyancy seemed to have largely evaporated, and there was selling on the favorable weather map as well as profit-taking for a quick turn, which caused several sharp though temporary reactions of 20 points or more. At no time, however, did prices get below Saturday's closing figures, as whenever they approached this level there were plenty of floor traders who were still short and more than willing to seize so good an opportunity to cover.

No exports were reported yesterday. Spot markets were dull and generally unchanged.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Reports from practically the entire wheat belt continue of a most favorable nature, and it is expected that the Government report on Winter wheat, due on Wednesday, will show a marked improvement from last month. The United States Chamber of Commerce sees the possibility of a Winter wheat crop of 650,000,000 bushels, and says that the acreage sown to Spring wheat is about 15 per cent. larger than last year.

RYE.

There was an absence of interest in the market and prices here were nominal. In Minneapolis cash rye was 2c lower, at $2.62, a decline of 8c during the last week.

CORN.

The undertone of the corn market was distinctly weak, and at one time the July position sold at $1.46¼, a decline of 2¼c from the final of Saturday. Later the market rallied, and at the close the May position was ¼c net higher, with July ⅝c lower. In the local cash market the undertone was weak; kiln dried No. 3 yellow quoted at $1.60; No. 4 yellow, $1.55, cost and freight, New York.

CHICAGO PRICES.

	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Close.	Last Year.

June	1.46½	1.45⅞	..	..	..
July	1.48¼	1.46⅞	1.47⅞	1.48½	1.43⅞

OATS.

The oats market was weak and lower, and, while prices rallied somewhat from the bottom on covering, final quotations showed net losses of 1¼c to 2¼c. The favorable weather for the new crop and a feeling of assurance that the yield this season will be a large one had a tendency to undermine confidence, especially as there was no evidence of any improvement in the export demand. The local cash market was weak, natural quoted at 86@87c and clipped white at 87@90c, all elevator.

CHICAGO PRICES.

	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Close.	Last Year.
May	77¼	74⅞	75⅛	77⅝	67⅛
June	73½	72¼	72⅞	74⅞	..
July	68⅝	66¾	67½	68⅞	63⅛

PROVISIONS.

The provision list suffered a decline in price on Monday under liquidation prompted to a considerable extent by the decline in grain and under pressure due to a slow cash demand. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 43,000 head; estimated for Tuesday, 23,000 head; Kansas City received 12,000 head and Omaha 9,000 head.

COFFEE.

There seemed to be practically no change in underlying conditions in the market for coffee futures yesterday, and the May position was bid up 9 points at the opening without transactions resulting. Other months were about unchanged, and values held within a very narrow range in a dull market. Reports of renewed peace talk abroad seemed to have no influence on values, but covering and moderate buying by local trade interests sent prices 2@7 points net higher at the close. The local spot market was unchanged, and the demand was reported indifferent, with deliveries showing a steady decrease. Range of prices:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Close.

SUGAR.

A cable from Havana reports three mills stopped for the season, having made their crop, leaving 182 now in operation. The weather in Cuba is reported fine. Shipping arrangements have been active during the last week, and several cargoes are reported on the way here, also about 12,000 tons of Hawaiian sugar in transit overland to Atlantic ports.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 4,969 packages. A higher and excited market for the finer grades of fresh table butter. Supplies were short and buyers did not hesitate to pay the extreme rates asked. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 48½@49c; extras, (92 score,) 48c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 44½@47½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@44c; thirds, 30@39c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 50½@51c; extras, 49½@50c; firsts, 46@49c; seconds, 42@45c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 47@47½c; good to prime, 44½@46½c; common to fair, 37@43½c; renovated, extras, 39½@40c; firsts, 38@39c; lower grades, 34@37c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@36c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@34½c; seconds, 32½@33c; lower grades, 31@32c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 32½@33c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 29@31c.

EGGS.—26,152 cases. The market shows a fairly firm tone on the higher qualities of current packed eggs from northerly sections. The range of values is without change; occasional lots of exceptionally fine Northern regular packings may reach 36½c, but the eggs must show extra fine quality to command that price. Storage packings continue rather quiet, and it is difficult to exceed 37c for average best Western, although occasional cars are still taken at 37½c and some fancy marks are held higher, most of these going direct to the storage houses for shippers' account. Eggs from southerly sections are moving slowly, with better qualities of regular packings ranging 31@35c generally, some undergrades lower and graded lots ranging up to 36c. Some very high grade dirties, when storage packed, are ranging up to 34c, but average prime dirties are moving slower and can be had at 32½@33c, with undergrades lower. Checks about steady. Very fancy white eggs are sustained, but there are comparatively few such. The bulk of the supply is offering at 40@41c, with some ordinary lots below that. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 38@38½c; storage packed firsts, 36½@37½c; regular packed extra firsts, 36½@37c; regular packed firsts, 35@36c; seconds and poorer, 33@34½c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, storage packed, 33½@34c; No. 1, 32½@33c; No. 2 and poorer, 31@32c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 29@30½c; under grades, 24@28c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 41@42c; ordinary to prime, 38@40c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@40c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 37@39c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 38@39c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 35@37c; duck eggs, 29@45c; goose eggs, per dozen, 60c.

Builds and Conserves

A business man who carries American Credit Insurance has his mind free to apply himself fully and profitably to the productive part of his business. The confidence which American Credit Insurance thus inspires makes men more progressive and enterprising. It promotes business.

The American's Unlimited Policy provides absolute protection against abnormal loss on all outstanding covered accounts. It does more—it serves to prevent losses, by providing for the allowance of covered accounts not over 45 days past due, if the company fails to collect them.

If you are a manufacturer or jobber, write for the full particulars of this service.

FIXES AIRPLANE MAIL RATE.

Senate Makes 24 Cents an Ounce the Maximum Charge.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—A bill authorizing the Post Office Department to charge not more than 24 cents an ounce or fraction thereof for the transportation of mail by airplane was adopted today by the Senate. The measure now goes to the House.

The Post Office Department announced today that the airplane mail service between Washington, Philadelphia, and New York would be started May 15 as planned. Military airplanes for the service are being assembled at Mineola, N. Y. As experiments will be made in dropping mail sacks while the airplanes are in motion, mail for the present will be confined to letters, but for the initial trip May 15 sealed parcels will be accepted.

During the early stages of the service no attempt will be made to dispatch airplanes on days when rain and fog will obstruct the vision of the aviators. On such days the mail will be sent by couriers on trains and will have special delivery service.

LOCAL CHARITIES NEED AID.

Bailey B. Burritt Says War Brings Added Burdens to Them.

Bailey B. Burritt, Director of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, said yesterday that he indorsed in general the views of the National Committee of Patriotic Societies, which is protesting against the raising of special funds for purposes not concerned with the war. He added:

"It must be remembered, though, that at no time so much as in wartime are local charities so much in need of help. The relief work needed to keep children alive and healthy is increasing, not only because of the increased cost of living, but because any of the parents and relatives are in France or on their way there. It is a time when we should do much more than before in grappling with the problem of children's lives. This work is not experimental, as it is possible today to tell almost exactly how many child lives each additional sum given for that purpose will save.

"This society has not been adding any new developments to its service under war conditions, but personally I believe in increasing the work among children. In general our attitude is that people should go very deeply into their purses and give all that is needed for the war, and after that they must go into their purses again and give rather more than before to local charities."

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—No. 25,812.—In Bankruptcy.—HYMAN RINGEL, ISIDOR RINGEL, and BENJAMIN RINGEL, individually and as co-partners trading as H. RINGEL & SONS, Alleged Bankrupts.

Take notice that on May 2, 1918, the above proceeding was referred to me as Referee to pass upon the proposed offer of composition prior to adjudication.

A special meeting of creditors will be held at my office, 31 Nassau Street, New York City, May 16, 1918, at 2:30 P. M., at which time the said creditors may attend, act upon the proposed offer of composition, prove their claims, examine the alleged bankrupts, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

The Way to Get A Secretary

The New York Times:

I received four hundred and ninety-five replies to an advertisement for a secretary-stenographer recently inserted in one Sunday issue of The New York Times.

I was particularly pleased with the character of the replies, as well as the great number received, a large percentage of which were from persons qualified to fill the position.

The success of the advertisement I attribute, first, to the admirable circulation of The Times, and, second, to the fact that the advertisement set forth very fully the details of the requirements of the position.

I. S. Brown,
45 Nassau St., New York.
